BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

THE genius of James Russell Lowell places him in the front rank of American poets. He is one of the few who are read and appreciated on both sides of the Atlantic. He made his mark in his earliest published volume, when he was but twenty-two years of age. From that time to the end of a long career he grew steadily in fame. Nor did his power wane, while his literary form showed an increasing perfection of polish.

He was born in Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 22, 1819. His father was the Rev. Charles Lowell, D.D., minister of the West Church (Unitarian) of Boston, a scholar of high standing and author of several devotional books. He was descended from Percival Lowell, who came from England in 1639 and settled in Newbury, Mass. The subject of this sketch showed throughout life a fine example of the Puritan conscience, joined with a rare tenderness of nature and winsomeness of character. While he never lacked the moral courage which dared to stand his nature and method were gentle and persuasive rather than severe or antagonizing.

“in the right with two or three,”

He was more than a poet. He was symmetrically developed as a man of letters. To his admirers he was the ideal man of letters. As such his life was quiet, and his biography will record the growth and products of his mind rather than external events which were never romantic.

He was graduated from Harvard College in 1838. At that time he was class poet, but the reading of the poems was omitted from the exercises of Class Day owing to the unavoidable absence of the poet. This absence was caused by the fact that at just that time he happened to be under suspension from the college. His offence, however, was playful and in no wise serious, and his Alma Mater never ceased to do him honor in after years.

On leaving college Lowell entered a law office and after the usual preliminary studies was, in 1840, admitted to the bar. He was, however, by nature a man of letters and was unsuited to the peculiar exactions of the legal profession. One is therefore not surprised that there is no record of his practice of the law, but there was a tolerably steady stream of poems, essays and reviews flowing from his facile pen.

The first year of his nominal law practice records a volume of poems (1841) entitled "A Year's Life." In this were evidences that he was a true seer, a genuine poet. His friends recognized the promise of a brilliant career, and they were not mistaken.

Two years later he became editor of a magazine of which, however, only three numbers were issued. A year after that he issued another volume of poems.

In this year, 1844, he married Miss Maria White, of Watertown, Mass. She was a charming and accomplished woman, possessing literary talent of no mean order. To her translations from the German she added original poems of more than ordinary merit.

She died in 1853, and it was her death which elicited from Longfellow one of the sweetest and most beautiful of all poems on death. It is that entitled Two Angels.

'T was at thy door, O friend, and not at mine,
The angel with the amaranthine wreath,
Pausing, descended, and, with voice divine,
Whispered a word that had a sound like death.

Then fell upon the house a sudden gloom,
A shadow on those features fair and thin,
And softly, from that hushed and darkened room,
Two angels issued where but one went in.

In 1845 he published a volume of essays, "Conversations on Some of the Poets," and thus we see that he was permanently out of the current of the law and in that of literature.

In 1848 he published a volume that contained what have proved to be two of his most popular poems: namely, The Vision of Sir Launfal and The Biglow Papers.

In 1851-2 he made his first trip to Europe. Most of the time he spent in Italy, especially in Rome with his friend W. W. Story, the famous sculptor. In 1854-5 he delivered the Lowell Institute lectures on "British Poets."

The most important event occurred that year when he was appointed professor of Belles Lettres at Harvard to succeed his distinguished friend H. W. Longfellow. Before assuming the duties of the professorship he spent another year in Europe, chiefly in Dresden.

In 1857 he married Miss Frances Dunlap of Portland, Maine.

When the Atlantic Monthly was established he was its first regular editor, and continued in that work for about five years, or from 1857 to 1862. Relinquishing this he edited the North American Review, then a quarterly, for a period, of about ten years. In addition to his editorial work he contributed a large number of articles to this magazine,—thirty-four in all, not counting editorial notes, etc. During these fifteen years of editorship, while he had also the duties of professor, his general literary work did not lag, and he issued volumes both of poetry and of prose.

In 1872-4 he again travelled in Europe, receiving the unusual honors of the degrees of D. C. L. from the University of Oxford, and LL.D. from that of Cambridge, England.

In 1877 he was appointed Minister to Spain, and took up the duties of a post made illustrious by Irving. The lustre of the literary tradition suffered no diminution in his incumbency.

He was later (1880-5) minister to England, and it is not too much to say that in that difficult and exacting position he stands second to none of all who have ever served. His honest, sturdy, and outspoken democracy, his fineness of culture, his breadth of spirit, and his genial persuasiveness have had incalculable influence in promoting the friendliness between Americans and their British cousins. At this time he was honored by being appointed Lord Rector of St. Andrews University at St. Andrews, Scotland. But he soon resigned this position as being incompatible with his obligations as minister of the United States.

In his later years he published several volumes of essays and addresses, the latter being largely on patriotic or democratic subjects. The excellence of their substance and the finish of their form entitle them to a permanent place in literature. They are, however, outside the scope of this sketch, which concerns Lowell as a poet.

Lowell was one of a remarkable circle of literary friends, such as has hardly existed before in all history, and certainly never in the United States. His friendships included Longfellow, Emerson, R. H. Dana, W. W. Story, Fields, Holmes, Whittier, Agassz, E. E. Hale, and others of nearly equal prominence. Such friendship greatly enriched his life, but it in no wise quenched his originality nor weakened his vigor.

In looking over his poetical works for a critical estimate, we find no one poem which towers up above the rest, like Milton's Paradise Lost, Byron's Childe Harold, or Wordsworth's Excursion. But there are many shorter ones, each of which is sufficient to justify the high reputation which he holds on both sides of the Atlantic. In his first published volume, there is one, entitled "Ode," which must have been written when he was little more than a boy, which gave abundant evidence of his high aspiration and of the earnestness of his spirit. His admirers were justified in predicting from this poem a brilliant future for the author, and the result was not disappointing.

The Biglow Papers are a political satire upon the Invasion by the United States of Mexico, the State of the Slavery Question, etc. They are written in the Yankee dialect verse by one Hosea Biglow, Birdofredum Sawin, edited with an introduction, notes, glossary, and copious index, by Homer Wilbur, A. M., pastor of the First Church in Jaalam, and (prospective) member of many literary, learned, and scientific societies. These placed Lowell in the front rank of humorists. They were the first attempt to use the quaint New England dialect in verse, and they are probably the best imitations to be found either in poetry or in prose.

They were received with favor, and their keen satire, their quaint drollery, their irresistible good humor, have held them in popularity for a half century. Political opponents enjoyed them hardly less than political friends. The experiences of the Bay State recruit, with sly wit, set forth political questions and practices in a way to fill one with laughter. There is an undertone of seriousness, especially a hot hatred of slavery and all its concomitants, and indeed of all injustice. But the form is humorous, and they have been called an attempt to laugh down slavery. In the larger sense of the word, they are intensely patriotic. They are classic in their way, and are the only production in the English language worthy to stand by the side of Hudibras. It is this combination of fun that bubbles over and sturdy morality which places them on so high a plane both intellectual and ethical. They have held their place for fifty years and doubtless will hold it for many years to come.

A second series of these charming papers was called out by the Civil War of 1861-5. These had not the advantage of newness enjoyed by the first series, nevertheless they are worthy of their name and do not detract from the quality of the whole. If there is less rollicking fun in the second series, there is also more poetry. The Civil War was nearer to the poet than the Mexican War, and this fact could not other than influence his writing even of wit, humor, and satire.

Another masterly piece of humor is the Fable for Critics, which is no fable at all, but a rhymed review, or at least criticism, of some of the more prominent American writers. One after another they pass under his scrutiny and receive his criticism or characterization. It is not to be expected that this poem should have the balance of the regular review, but on the whole its criticisms are just, while his wit is as keen as a Damascus blade. It is to be noted that the poet does not spare himself, but raps his own knuckles quite as hard as any.

There is Lowell, who's striving Parnassus to climb,
With a whole bale of isms tied together with rhyme.

The top of the hill he will ne'er come nigh reaching
Till he learns the distinction 'twixt singing and preaching.

The purpose and character of the Fable preclude the usual finish of form, so that it has been called clever doggerel. But along with its trenchant humor may be discovered a manly vigor, with occasional touches of the pathos which is rarely lacking in any of Lowell's poetry, either humorous or serious, and all joined by a good sense that bears the light of day.

In 1865 Harvard College had a memorial service for those of her sons who fell in the Civil War, and for this was written the Commemoration Ode, whose stately measures rise sometimes to sublime heights. Patriotism tinges much of his poetry, for love of country and of freedom was a passion with him, but in this poem it has a freer course than elsewhere. He touches the ideal manhood,—

God's plan
And measure of a stalwart man.

The concrete example of this manhood is Lincoln "our Martyr-Chief." Then follows a characterization of him unequalled certainly in poetry, leading up to the climax,—

The kindly-earnest, brave, foreseeing man,
Sagacious, patient, dreading praise, not blame,
New birth of our new soil, the first American.

The Present Crisis is probably the most quoted of his poems. It was written in December, 1844, and refers to one of the many crises of slavery. It displays the author's noble loyalty to Truth and his withering scorn of evasion or temporizing expedients. Later he treated similar subjects with humorous form in the Biglow papers; but here he is serious in form as well as earnest in thought. Lord Bacon raised the question of "jesting Pilate." What is Truth? Lowell answers with a clarion ring :

Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne,— Yet that scaffold sways the future, and, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above His own.

History is to Lowell a divine revelation, and the crisis of which he writes has the solemnity of the Judgment Day.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side.

This leads us to speak of the religious characteristic of the author's poetry. His poems are not religious in the same sense as those of Cowper. Possibly they are not evangelical. But they are religious in the finest sense of the word, holding to an unshaken belief in God's everlasting righteousness, with sweet confidence in His overruling providence, with a profound belief in the practical piety of considering the poor and unfortunate, and especially with broad sympathy for "seekers after God." His "Vision of Sir Launfal" is a universal favorite. It tells of the quest of the Holy Grail, or the cup which Our Lord blessed in the Last Supper. The way the knight treats the beggar on his issuing from the castle and the way he treats him upon his return from his wanderings present a striking contrast. Other poems which may be classed as distinctly religious are Parable (two by this name) Ambrose, Extreme Unction, and The Cathedral. The Death of a Friend's Child may be studied profitably by every preacher, and After the Burial should be mastered by every pastor for the purpose of entering into the experiences of others where one so easily misunderstands.

The Cathedral was originally entitled "A Day at Chartres." The reader can spend with profit and delight not merely one, but many, days in that poem. It opens with a discussion of first impressions, then describes the poet's overwhelming impression of the cathedral. Within he observes a solitary beldam listlessly counting her beads and has at first a scornful feeling towards her, which quickly gives place to sympathy. This leads to the discussion of the various Faiths that grope after God, and the teaching is that God is nearer than men realize. The ancient forms, bare to the refined descendant of the Puritans, have their uses.

Be He nowhere else,
 God is in all that liberates and lifts,
 In all that humbles, sweetens, and consoles.

The cathedral was built with a sense of piety and consecration. Each person came bringing his "vote for God," for such were the stones built into that stately structure. From that work of conscience and devotion the "Western Goth" may learn that nothing pays but God,

 Served whether on the smoke-shut battle-field,
 In work obscure done honestly, or vote
 For truth unpopular, or faith maintained
 To ruinous convictions, or good deeds
 Wrought for good's sake, mindless of heaven or hell.

The poem closes with witnessing to the universal presence of God, and leaves the reader in that frame of solemn awe as if he had shared the poet's own vision and experience in the aisles of that impressive cathedral.

One further poem ought to be mentioned for its delicacy of thought and perfectness of finish, and that is Auf Wiedersehen.

Sweet piece of bashful maiden art!
 The English words had seemed to fain,
 But these—they drew us heart to heart,
 Yet held us tenderly apart;
 She said, "Auf Wiedersehen!"

Gathering together the impressions of this poet, we find him fearless in moral courage, with unconquerable devotion to truth and scorn of temporizing expedients, with passionate love of freedom and hatred of slavery, with broad philanthropy and pervading piety. His satire is clever, his imagination vivid, his range of thought wide, his intellectual grasp firm, and his expression vigorous. The introductions to the two parts of The Vision of Sir Launfal are models of graceful and delicate fancy clothed in absolute beauty of expression.

Lowell's duties as minister to England came to an end in 1885. The later years of his life, however, were well filled with work. His residence was at Elmwood, Cambridge, where for many years he had been near neighbor to Longfellow. In 1885 he had buried in England his wife. The solitude of his latest years was broken by frequent visits to England where he had many friends, while his time was also occupied by lectures and addresses. He prepared his complete works for the press, so that the public now have them in the form which the author would wish. His friend, Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, has since published his life and letters, to which the reader is referred for a fuller knowledge of this rare man.

He died at Cambridge, August 12, 1891. He left an added dignity to American letters. He not only received the highest honors which his alma mater, Harvard, could give, but he was decorated by the universities of Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Bologna, in addition to Oxford and Cambridge above mentioned. To him may be applied the words which he wrote to a friend,—

The birds are hushed, the poets gone
Where no harsh critic's lash can reach,
And still your wingèd brood sing on
To all who love our English speech.

NOTE TO TITLE-PAGE.

IT will not have escaped the attentive eye, that I have, on the title-page, omitted those honorary appendages to the editorial name which not only add greatly to the value of every book, but whet and exacerbate the appetite of the reader. For not only does he surmise that an honorary membership of literary and scientific societies implies a certain amount of necessary distinction on the part of the recipient of such decorations, but he is willing to trust himself more entirely to an author who writes under the fearful responsibility of involving the reputation of such bodies as the S. Archæol. Dahom., or the Acad. Lit. et Scient. Kamtschat. I cannot but think that the early editions of Shakspeare and Milton would have met with more rapid and general acceptance, but for the barrenness of their respective title-pages; and I believe, that, even now, a publisher of the works of either of those justly distinguished men would find his account in procuring their admission to the membership of learned bodies on the Continent,—a proceeding no whit more incongruous than the reversal of the judgment against Socrates, when he was already more than twenty centuries beyond the reach of antidotes, and when his memory had acquired a deserved respectability. I conceive that it was a feeling of the importance of this precaution which induced Mr. Locke to style himself “Gent.” on the title-page of his Essay, as who should say to his readers that they could receive his metaphysics on the honor of a gentleman.

Nevertheless, finding, that, without descending to a smaller size of type than would have been compatible with the dignity of the several societies to be named, I could not compress my intended list within the limits of a single page, and thinking, moreover, that the act would carry with it an air of decorous modesty, I have chosen to take the reader aside, as it were, into my private closet, and there not only exhibit to him the diplomas which I already possess, but also to furnish him with a prophetic vision of those which I may, without undue presumption, hope for, as not beyond the reach of human ambition and attainment. And I am the rather induced to this from the fact, that my name has been unaccountably dropped from the last triennial catalogue of our beloved Alma Mater. Whether this is to be attributed to the difficulty of Latinizing any of those honorary adjuncts (with a complete list of which I took care to furnish the proper persons nearly a year beforehand), or whether it had its origin in any more culpable motives, I forbear to consider in this place, the matter being in course of painful investigation. But, however this may be, I felt the omission the more keenly, as I had, in expectation of the new catalogue, enriched the library of the Jaalam Athenæum with the old one then in my possession, by which means it has come about that my children will be deprived of a never-wearying winter-evening's amusement in looking out the name of their parent in that distinguished roll. Those harmless innocents had at least committed no—— but I forbear, having intrusted my reflections and animadversions on this painful topic to the safe-keeping of my private diary, intended for posthumous publication. I state this fact here, in order that certain nameless individuals, who are, perhaps, overmuch congratulating themselves upon my silence, may know that a rod is in pickle which the vigorous hand of a justly incensed posterity will apply to their memories.

The careful reader will note, that, in the list which I have prepared, I have included the names of several Cisatlantic societies to which a place is not commonly assigned in processions of this nature. I have ventured to do this, not only to encourage native ambition and genius, but also because I have never been able to perceive in what way distance (unless we suppose them at the end of a lever) could increase the weight of learned bodies. As far as I have been able to extend my researches among such stuffed specimens as occasionally reach America, I have discovered no generic difference between the antipodal Fogrum Japonicum and the F. Americanum sufficiently common in our own immediate neighborhood. Yet, with a becoming deference to the popular belief, that distinctions of this sort are enhanced in value by every additional mile they travel, I have intermixed the names of some tolerably distant literary and other associations with the rest.

I add here, also, an advertisement, which, that it may be the more readily understood by those persons especially interested therein, I have written in that curtailed and otherwise maltreated canine Latin, to the writing and reading of which they are accustomed.

NOTICES OF AN INDEPENDENT PRESS.

[I HAVE observed, reader, (bene- or male-volent, as it may happen,) that it is customary to append to the second editions of books, and to the second works of authors, short sentences commendatory of the first, under the title of Notices of the Press. These, I have been given to understand, are procurable at certain established rates, payment being made either in money or advertising patronage by the publisher, or by an adequate outlay of servility on the part of the author. Considering these things with myself, and also that such notices are neither intended, nor generally believed, to convey any real opinions, being a purely ceremonial accompaniment of literature, and resembling certificates to the virtues of various morbiferal panaceas, I conceived that it would be not only more economical to prepare a sufficient number of such myself, but also more immediately subservient to the end in view to prefix them to this our primary edition rather than await the contingency of a second, when they would seem to be of small utility. To delay attaching the boobs until the second attempt at flying the kite would indicate but a slender experience in that useful art. Neither has it escaped my notice, nor failed to afford me matter of reflection, that, when a circus or a caravan is about to visit Jaalam, the initial step is to send forward large and highly ornamented bills of performance to be hung in the bar-room and the post-office. These having been sufficiently gazed at, and beginning to lose their attractiveness except for the flies, and, truly, the boys also, (in whom I find it impossible to repress, even during school hours, certain oral and telegraphic correspondences concerning the expected show,) upon some fine morning the band enters in a gaily-painted wagon, or triumphal chariot, and with noisy advertisement, by means of brass, wood, and sheepskin, makes the circuit of our startled village streets. Then, as the exciting sounds draw nearer and nearer, do I desiderate those eyes of Aristarchus, "whose looks were as a breeching to a boy." Then do I perceive, with vain regret of wasted opportunities, the advantage of a pancratic or pantechnic education, since he is most revered by my little subjects who can throw the cleanest summerset or walk most securely upon the revolving cask. The story of the Pied Piper becomes for the first time credible to me, (albeit confirmed by the Hameliners dating their legal instruments from the period of his exit,) as I behold how those strains, without pretence of magical potency, bewitch the pupillary legs, nor leave to the pedagogic an entire self-control. For these reasons, lest my kingly prerogative should suffer diminution, I prorogue my restless commons, whom I also follow into the street, chiefly lest some mischief may chance befall them. After the manner of such a band, I send forward the following notices of domestic manufacture, to make brazen proclamation, not unconscious of the advantage which will accrue, if our little craft, cymbula subtilis, shall seem to leave port with a clipping breeze, and to carry, in nautical phrase, a bone in her mouth. Nevertheless, I have chosen, as being more equitable, to prepare some also sufficiently objurgatory, that readers of every taste may find a dish to their palate. I have modelled them upon actually existing specimens, preserved in my own cabinet of natural curiosities. One, in particular, I had copied with tolerable exactness from a notice of one of my own discourses, which, from its superior tone and appearance of vast experience, I concluded to have been written by a man at least three hundred years of age, though I recollected no existing instance of such antediluvian longevity. Nevertheless, I afterward discovered the author to be a young gentleman preparing for the ministry under the direction of one of my brethren in a neighboring town, and whom I had once instinctively corrected in a Latin quantity. But this I have been forced to omit, from its too great length.—H. W.]

From the Universal Littery Universe.

Full of passages which rivet the attention of the reader. . . . Under a rustic garb, sentiments are conveyed which should be committed to the memory and engraven on the heart of every moral and social being . . . We consider this a unique performance . . . We hope to see it soon introduced into our common schools . . . Mr. Wilbur has performed his duties as editor with excellent taste and judgment . . . This is a vein which we hope to see successfully prosecuted . . . We hail the appearance of this work as a long stride toward the formation of a purely aboriginal, indigenous, native and American literature. We rejoice to meet with an author national enough to break away from the slavish deference, too common among us, to English grammar and orthography . . . Where all is so good, we are at a loss how to make extracts. . . . On the whole, we may call it a volume which no library, pretending to entire completeness, should fail to place upon its shelves.

From the Higginbottomopolis Snapping-turtle.

A collection of the merest balderdash and doggerel that it was ever our bad fortune to lay eyes on. The author is a vulgar buffoon, and the editor a talkative, tedious old fool. We use strong language, but should any of our readers peruse the book, (from which calamity Heaven preserve them!) they will find reasons for it thick as the leaves of Vallumbrozer, or, to use a still more expressive comparison, as the combined heads of author and editor. The work is wretchedly got up . . . We should like to know how much British gold was pocketed by this libeller of our country and her purest patriots.

From the Oldfogrumville Mentor.

We have not had time to do more than glance through this handsomely printed volume, but the name of its respectable editor, the Rev. Mr. Wilbur, of Jaalam, will afford a sufficient guaranty for the worth of its contents . . . The paper is white, the type clear, and the volume of a convenient and attractive size . . . In reading this elegantly executed work, it has seemed to us that a passage or two might have been retrenched with advantage, and that the general style of diction was susceptible of a higher polish . . . On the whole, we may safely leave the ungrateful task of criticism to the reader. We will barely suggest, that in volumes intended, as this is, for the illustration of a provincial dialect and turns of expression, a dash of humor or satire might be thrown in with advantage . . . The work is admirably got up . . . This work will form an appropriate ornament to the centre-table. It is beautifully printed, on paper of an excellent quality.

From the Dekay Bulwark.

We should be wanting in our duty as the conductor of that tremendous engine, a public press, as an American, and as a man, did we allow such an opportunity as is presented to us by "The Biglow Papers" to pass by without entering our earnest protest against such attempts (now, alas! too common) at demoralizing the public sentiment. Under a wretched mask of stupid drollery, slavery, war, the social glass, and, in short, all the valuable and time-honored institutions justly dear to our common humanity and especially to republicans, are made the butt of coarse and senseless ribaldry by this low-minded scribbler. It is time that the respectable and religious portion of our community should be aroused to the alarming inroads of foreign Jacobinism, sansculottism, and infidelity. It is a fearful proof of the widespread nature of this contagion, that these secret stabs at religion and virtue are given from under the cloak (credite, posteri!) of a clergyman. It is a mournful spectacle indeed to the patriot and the Christian to see liberality and new ideas (falsely so called,—they are as old as Eden) invading the sacred precincts of the pulpit . . . On the whole, we consider this volume as one of the first shocking results which we predicted would spring out of the late French “Revolution” (!)

Altogether an admirable work . . . Full of humor, boisterous, but delicate,—of wit withering and scorching, yet combined with a pathos cool as morning dew,—of satire ponderous as the mace of Richard, yet keen as the scymitar of Saladin . . . A work full of “mountain mirth,” mischievous as Puck and lightsome as Ariel . . . We know not whether to admire most the genial, fresh, and discursive concinnity of the author, or his playful fancy, weird imagination, and compass of style, at once both objective and subjective . . . We might indulge in some criticisms, but, were the author other than he is, he would be a different being. As it is, he has a wonderful pose, which flits from flower to flower, and bears the reader irresistibly along on its eagle pinions (like Gany-mede) to the “highest heaven of invention.” . . . We love a book so purely objective . . . Many of his pictures of natural scenery have an extraordinary subjective clearness and fidelity . . . In fine, we consider this as one of the most extraordinary volumes of this or any age. We know of no English author who could have written it. It is a work to which the proud genius of our country, standing with one foot on the Aroostook and the other on the Rio Grande, and holding up the star-spangled banner amid the wreck of matter and the crush of worlds, may point with bewildering scorn of the punier efforts of enslaved Europe . . . We hope soon to encounter our author among those higher walks of literature in which he is evidently capable of achieving enduring fame. Already we should be inclined to assign him a high position in the bright galaxy of our American bards.

From the Saltriver Pilot and Flag of Freedom.

A volume of bad grammar and worse taste . . . While the pieces here collected were confined to their appropriate sphere in the corners of obscure newspapers, we considered them wholly beneath contempt, but, as the author has chosen to come forward in this public manner, he must expect the lash he so richly merits . . . Contemptible slanders . . . Vilest Billingsgate . . . Has raked all the gutters of our language . . . The most pure, upright, and consistent politicians not safe from his malignant venom . . . General Cushing comes in for a share of his vile calumnies . . . the Reverend Homer Wilbur is a disgrace to his cloth . . .

From the World-Harmonic-Æolian-Attachment.

Speech is silver : silence is golden. No utterance more Orphic than this. While, therefore, as highest author, we reverence him whose works continue heroically unwritten, we have also our hopeful word for those who with pen (from wing of goose loud-cackling, or seraph God-commissioned) record the thing that is revealed . . . Under mask of quaintest irony, we detect here the deep, storm-tost (nigh shipwrecked) soul, thunder-scarred, semiarticulate, but ever climbing hopefully toward the peaceful summits of an Infinite Sorrow . . . Yes, thou poor, forlorn Hosea, with Hebrew fire-flaming soul in thee, for thee also this life of ours has not been without its aspects of heavenliest pity and laughing mirth. Conceivable enough! Through coarse Ther-sites-cloak, we have revelation of the heart, wild-glowing, world-clasping, that is in him. Bravely he grapples with the life-problem as it presents itself to him, uncombed, shaggy, careless of the "nicer proprieties," inexpert of "elegant diction," yet with voice audible enough to whoso hath ears, up there on the gravelly side-hills, or down on the splashy, India-rubber-like salt-marshes of native Jaalam. To this soul also the Necessity of Creating somewhat has unveiled its awful front. If not Œdipuses and Electras and Alcestises, then in God's name Birdofredum Sawins! These also shall get born into the world, and filch (if so need) a Zingali subsistence therein, these lank, omnivorous Yankees of his. He shall paint the Seen, since the Unseen will not sit to him. Yet in him also are Nibelungen-lays, and Iliads, and Ulysses-wanderings, and Divine Comedies,—if only once he could come at them! Therein lies much, nay all; for what truly is this which we name All, but that which we do not possess? . . . Glimpses also are given us of an old father Ezekiel, not without paternal pride, as is the wont of such. A brown, parchment-hided old man of the geoponic or bucolic species, gray-eyed, we fancy, queued perhaps, with much weather-cunning and plentiful September-gale memories, bidding fair in good time to become the Oldest Inhabitant. After such hasty apparition, he vanishes and is seen no more . . . Of "Rev. Homer Wilbur, A. M., Pastor of the First Church in Jaalam," we have small care to speak here. Spare touch in him of his Melesigenes namesake, save haply, the—blindness! A tolerably caliginose, nephelegeretous elderly gentleman, with infinite faculty of sermonizing, muscularized by long practice, and excellent digestive apparatus, and, for the rest, well-meaning enough, and with small private illuminations (somewhat tallowy, it is to be feared) of his own. To him, there, "Pastor of the First Church in Jaalam," our Hosea presents himself as a quiet inexplicable Sphinx-riddle. A rich poverty of Latin and Greek,—so far is clear enough, even to eyes peering myopic through horn-lensed editorial spectacles,—but naught farther? O pur-blind, well-meaning, altogether fuscous Melesigenes-Wilbur, there are things in him incommunicable by stroke of birch! Did it ever enter that old bewildered head of thine that there was the Possibility of the Infinite in him? To thee, quite wingless (and even featherless) biped, has not so much even as a dream of wings ever come? “Talented young parishioner”? Among the Arts whereof thou art Magister, does that of seeing happen to be one? Unhappy Artium Magister! Somehow a Nemean lion, fulvous, torrid-eyed, dry-nursed in broad-howling sand-wildernesses of a sufficiently rare spirit-Libya (it may be supposed) has got whelped among the sheep. Already he stands wild-gtaring, with feet clutching the ground as with oak-roots, gathering for a Remus-spring over the walls of thy little fold. In Heaven’s name, go not near him with that fly-bite crook of thine! In good time, thou painful preacher, thou wilt go to the appointed place of departed Artillery-Election Sermons, Right-Hands of Fellowship, and Results of Councils, gathered to thy spiritual fathers with much Latin of the Epitaphial sort; thou, too, shalt have thy reward; but on him the Eumenides have looked, not Xantippes of the pit, snake-tressed, finger-threatening, but radiantly calm as on antique gems; for him paws impatient the winged courser of the gods, champing unwelcome bit; him the starry deeps, the empyrean glooms, and far-flashing splendors await.

From the Onion Grove Phoenix.

A talented young townsman of ours, recently returned from a Continental tour, and who is already favorably known to our readers by his sprightly letters from abroad which have graced our columns, called at our office yesterday. We learn from him, that, having enjoyed the distinguished privilege, while in Germany, of an introduction to the celebrated Von Humbug, he took the opportunity to present that eminent man with a copy of the “Biglow Papers.” The next morning he received the following note, which he has kindly furnished us for publication. We prefer to print verbatim knowing that our readers will readily forgive the few errors into which the illustrious writer has fallen, through ignorance of our language.

“HIGH-WORTHY MISTER!

“I shall also now especially happy starve, because I have more or less a work of one of those aboriginal Red-Men seen in which have I so deaf an interest ever taken fullworthy on the self shelf with our Gootsched to be upset.

“Pardon my in the English-speech unpractice!

“VON HUMBUG.”

He also sent with the above note a copy of his famous work on “Cosmetics,” to be presented to Mr. Biglow; but this was taken from our friend by the English customhouse officers, probably through a petty national spite. No doubt, it has by this time found its way into the British Museum. We trust this outrage will be exposed in all our American papers. We shall do our best to bring it to the notice of the State Department. Our numerous readers will share in the pleasure we experience at seeing our young and vigorous national literature thus encouragingly patted on the head by this venerable and world-renowned German. We love to see these reciprocations of good-feeling between the different branches of the great Anglo-Saxon race.

[The following genuine “notice” having met my eye, I gladly insert a portion of it here, the more especially as it contains a portion of one of Mr. Biglow’s poems not elsewhere printed.—H. W.]

From the Jaalam Independent Blunderbuss.

. . . But, while we lament to see our young townsman thus mingling in the heated contests of party politics, we think we detect in him the presence of talents which, if properly directed, might give an innocent pleasure to many. As a proof that he is competent to the production of other kinds of poetry, we copy for our readers a short fragment of a pastoral by him, the manuscript of which was loaned us by a friend. The title of it is "The Courtin'."

LECTORI BENEVOLO S.

Toga scholastica nondum deposita, quum systemata varia entomologica, a viris ejus scientiæ cultoribus studiosissimis summa diligentia ædificata, penitus indagâssem, non fuit quin luctuose omnibus in iis, quamvis aliter laude dignissimis, hiatum magni momenti perciperem. Tunc, nescio quo motu superiore impulsus, aut qua captus dulcedine operis, ad eum implendum (Curtius alter) me solemniter devovi. Nec ab isto labore, δαίμονιως imposito, abstinui antequam tractatum sufficienter inconcinnum lingua vernacula perfeceram. Inde, juveniliter tumefactus, et barathro ineptiæ τῶν βιβλιοπωλῶν (necnon “Publici Legentis”) nusquam explorato, me composuisse quod quasi placentas præfervidas (ut sic dicam) homines ingurgitarent credidi. Sed, quum huic et alii bibliopolæ MSS. mea submissem et nihil solidius responsione valde negativa in Musæum meum retulissem, horror ingens atque misericordia, ob crassitudinem Lambertianam in cerebris homunculorum istius muneris cœlesti quadam ira infixam, me invasere. Extemplo mei solius impensis librum edere decrevi, nihil omnino dubitans quin “Mundus Scientificus” (ut aiunt) crumenam meam ampliter repletet. Nullam, attamen, ex agro illo meo parvulo segetem demessui, præter gaudium vacuum bene de Republica merendi. Iste panis meus pretiosus super aquas literarias fœculentas præfidenter jactus, quasi Harpyiarum quarundam (scilicet bibliopolarum istorum facinorosorum supradictorum) tactu rancidus, intra perpaucos dies mihi domum rediit. Et, quum ipse tali victu ali non tolerarem, primum in mentem venit pistori (typographo nempe) nihilominus solvendum esse. Animum non ideo demisi, imo æque ac pueri naviculas suas penes se lino retinent (eo ut e recto cursu delapsas ad ripam retrahant), sic ego Argô meam chartaceam fluctibus laborantem a quæsitu velleris aurei, ipse pôtius tonsus pelleque exutus, mente solida revocavi. Metaphoram ut mutem, boomarangam meam a scopo aberrantem retraxi, dum majore vi, occasione ministrante, adversus Fortunam intorquerem. Ast mihi, [talìa volventi, et, sicut Saturnus ille παιδοβόρος, liberos intellectus mei depascere fidenti, casus miserandus, nec antea inauditus, supervenit. Nam, ut ferunt Scythas pietatis causa et parsimonix, parentes suos mortuos devorâsse, sic filius hic meus primogenitus, Scythis ipsis minus mansuetus, patrem vivum totum et calcitrantem exsorbere enixus est. Nec tamen hac de causa sobolem meam esurientem exheredavi. Sed famem istam pro valido testimonio virilitatis roborisque potius habui, cibumque ad eam satiandam, salva paterna mea carne, petii. Et quia bilem illam scaturientem ad æs etiam concoquendum idoneam esse estimabam, unde æs alienum, ut minoris pretii, haberem, circumspexi. Rebus ita se habentibus, ab avunculo meo Johanne Doolittle, Armigero, impetravi ut pecunias necessarias suppeditaret, ne opus esset mihi universitatem relinquendi antequam ad gradum primum in artibus pervenissem. Tunc ego, salvum facere patronum meum munificum maxime cupiens, omnes libros primæ editionis operis mei non venditos una cum privilegio in omne ævum ejusdem imprimendi et edendi avunculo meo dicto pigneravi. Ex illo die, atro lapide notando, curae vociferantes familiæ singulis annis crescentis eo usque insultabant ut nunquam tam carum pignus e vinculis istis aheneis solvere possem.

Avunculo vero nuper mortuo, quum inter alios consanguineos testamenti ejus lectionem audiendi causa advenissem, erectis auribus verba talia sequentia accepi: —“ Quoniam persuasum habeo meum dilectum nepotem Homerum, longa et intima rerum angustarum domi experientia, aptissimum esse qui divitias tueatur, beneficenterque ac prudenter iis divinis creditis utatur,— ergo, motus hisce cogitationibus, exque amore meo in illum magno, do, legoque nepoti caro meo supranominato omnes singularesque istas possessiones nec ponderabiles nec computabiles meas quæ sequuntur, scilicet: quingentos libros quos mihi pigneravit dictus Homerus, anno lucis 1792, cum privilegio edendi et repetendi opus istud ‘scientificum’ (quod dicunt) suum, si sic elegerit. Tamen D. O. M. precor oculos Homeri nepotis mei ita aperiatur eumque moveatur, ut libros istos in bibliotheca unius e plurimis castellis suis Hispaniensibus tuto abscondat."

His verbis (vix credibilibus) auditis, cor meum in pectore exsultavit. Deinde, quoniam tractatus Anglice scriptus spem auctoris fefellerat, quippe quum studium Historiæ Naturalis in Republica nostra inter factionis strepitum languescat, Latine versum edere statui, et eo potius quia nescio quomodo disciplina academica et duo diplomata proficiant, nisi quod peritos linguarum omnino mortuarum (et damnandarum, ut dicebat iste πανοῦργος Gulielmus Cobbett) nos faciant.

Et mihi adhuc superstes est tota illa editio prima, quam quasi crepitaculum per quod dentes caninos dentibam retineo.

INTRODUCTION.

WHEN, more than three years ago, my talented young parishioner, Mr. Biglow, came to me and submitted to my animadversions the first of his poems which he intended to commit to the more hazardous trial of a city newspaper, it never so much as entered my imagination to conceive that his productions would ever be gathered into a fair volume, and ushered into the august presence of the reading public by myself. So little are we short-sighted mortals able to predict the event! I confess that there is to me a quite new satisfaction in being associated (though only as sleeping partner) in a book which can stand by itself in an independent unity on the shelves of libraries. For there is always this drawback from the pleasure of printing a sermon, that, whereas the queasy stomach of this generation will not bear a discourse long enough to make a separate volume, those religious and godly-minded children (those Samuels, if I may call them so) of the brain must at first lie buried in an undistinguished heap, and then get such resurrection as is vouchsafed to them, mummy-wrapt with a score of others in a cheap binding, with no other mark of distinction than the word "Miscellaneous" printed upon the back. Far be it from me to claim any credit for the quite unexpected popularity which I am pleased to find these bucolic strains have attained unto. If I know myself, I am measurably free from the itch of vanity ; yet I may be allowed to say that I was not backward to recognize in them a certain wild, puckery, acidulous (sometimes even verging toward that point which, in our rustic phrase, is termed shut-eye) flavor, not wholly unpleasing, nor unwholesome, to palates cloyed with the sugariness of tamed and cultivated fruit. It may be, also, that some touches of my own, here and there, may have led to their wider acceptance, albeit solely from my larger experience of literature and authorship.*

I was, at first, inclined to discourage Mr. Biglow's attempts, as knowing that the desire to poetize is one of the diseases naturally incident to adolescence, which, if the fitting remedies be not at once and with a bold hand applied, may become chronic, and render one, who might else have become in due time an ornament of the social circle, a painful object even to nearest friends and relatives. But thinking, on a further experience, that there was a germ of promise in him which required only culture and the pulling up of weeds from around it, I thought it best to set before him the acknowledged examples of English compositions in verse, and leave the rest to natural emulation. With this view, I accordingly lent him some volumes of Pope and Goldsmith, to the assiduous study of which he promised to devote his evenings. Not long afterward, he brought me some verses written upon that model,

* The reader curious in such matters may refer (if he can find them) to "A Sermon Preached on the Anniversary of the Dark Day," "An Artillery Election Sermon," "A Discourse on the Late Eclipse," "Dorcas, a Funeral Sermon on the Death of Madam Submit Tidd, Relict of the late Experience Tidd, Esq.," &c., &c.

a specimen of which I subjoin, having changed some phrases of less elegance, and a few rhymes objectionable to the cultivated ear. The poem consisted of childish reminiscences, and the sketches which follow will not seem destitute of truth to those whose fortunate education began in a country village. And, first, let us hang up his charcoal portrait of the school-dame.

“ Propt on the marsh, a dwelling now, I see
The humble schoolhouse of my A, B, C,
Where well-drilled urchins, each behind his tire,
Waited in ranks the wished command to fire,
Then all together, when the signal came,
Discharged their a-b abs against the dame,
Who, 'mid the volleyed learning, firm and calm,
Patted the furloughed ferule on her palm,
And, to our wonder, could detect at once
Who flashed the pan, and who was downright dunce.
There young Devotion learned to climb with ease
The gnarly limbs of Scripture family-trees,
And he was most commended and admired
Who soonest to the topmost twig perspired ;
Each name was called as many various ways
As pleased the reader's ear on different days,
So that the weather, or the ferule's stings,
Colds in the head, or fifty other things,
Transformed the helpless Hebrew thrice a week
To guttural Pequot or resounding Greek,
The vibrant accent skipping here and there,
Just as it pleased invention or despair ;
No controversial Hebraist was the Dame ;
With or without the points pleased her the same ;
If any tyro found a name too tough,
And looked at her, pride furnished skill enough ;
She nerved her larynx for the desperate thing,
And cleared the five-barred syllables at a spring.

Ah, dear old times ! there once it was my hap,
Perched on a stool, to wear the long-eared cap ;
From books degraded, there I sat at ease,
A drone, the envy of compulsory bees."

I add only one further extract, which will possess a melancholy interest to all such as have endeavored to gleam the materials of Revolutionary history from the lips of aged persons, who took a part in the actual making of it, and, finding the manufacture profitable, continued the supply in an adequate proportion to the demand.

" Old Joe is gone, who saw hot Percy goad
His slow artillery up the Concord road,
A tale which grew in wonder, year by year,
As, every time he told it, Joe drew near
To the main fight, till, faded and grown gray,
The original scene to bolder tints gave way ;
Then Joe had heard the foe's scared double-quick
Beat on stove drum with one uncaptured stick,
And, ere death came the lengthening tale to lop,
Himself had fired, and seen a red-coat drop ;
Had Joe lived long enough, that scrambling fight
Had squared more nearly to his sense of right,
And vanquished Percy, to complete the tale,
Had hammered stone for life in Concord jail."

I do not know that the foregoing extracts ought not to be called my own rather than Mr. Biglow's, as indeed, he maintained stoutly that my file had left nothing of his in them. I should not, perhaps, have felt entitled to take so great liberties with them, had I not more than suspected an hereditary vein of poetry in myself, a very near ancestor having written a Latin poem in the Harvard Gratulatio on the accession of George the Third.

Suffice it to say, that, whether not satisfied with such limited approbation as I could conscientiously bestow, or from a sense of natural inaptitude, I know not, certain it is that my young friend could never be induced to any further essays in this kind. He affirmed that it was to him like writing in a foreign tongue,—that Mr. Pope's versification was like the regular ticking of one of Willard's clocks, in which one could fancy, after long listening, a certain kind of rhythm or tune, but which yet was only a poverty-stricken tick, tick, after all,—and that he had never seen a sweet-water on a trellis growing so fairly, or in forms so pleasing to his eye, as a fox-grape over a scrub-oak in a swamp. He added I know not what, to the effect that the sweet-water would only be the more disfigured by having its leaves starched and ironed out, and that Pegāsus (so he called him) hardly looked right with his mane and tail in curl-papers. These and other such opinions I did not long strive to eradicate, attributing them rather to a defective education and senses untuned by too long familiarity with purely natural objects, than to a perverted moral sense. I was the more inclined to this leniency since sufficient evidence was not to seek, that his verses, as wanting as they certainly were in classic polish and point, had somehow taken hold of the public ear in a surprising manner. So, only setting him right as to the quantity of the proper name Pegasus, I left him to follow the bent of his natural genius.

There are two things upon which it would seem fitting to dilate somewhat more largely in this place,—the Yankee character and the Yankee dialect. And, first, of the Yankee character, which has wanted neither open maligners, nor even more dangerous enemies in the persons of those unskilful painters who have given to it that hardness, angularity, and want of proper perspective, which, in truth, belonged, not to their subject, but to their own niggard and unskilful pencil.

New England was not so much the colony of a mother country, as a Hagar driven forth into the wilderness. The little self-exiled band which came hither in 1620 came, not to seek gold, but to found a democracy. They came that they might have the privilege to work and pray, to sit upon hard benches and listen to painful preachers as long as they would, yea, even unto thirty-seventhly, if the spirit so willed it. And surely, if the Greek might boast his Thermopylæ, where three hundred men fell in resisting the Persian, we may well be proud of our Plymouth Rock, where a handful of men, women, and children not merely faced, but vanquished, winter, famine, the wilderness, and the yet more invincible storge that drew them back to the green island far away. These found no lotus growing upon the surly shore, the taste of which could make them forget their little native Ithaca; nor were they so wanting to themselves in faith as to burn their ship, but could see the fair west wind belly the homeward sail, and then turn unrepining to grapple with the terrible Unknown.

As Want was the prime foe these hardy exodists had to fortress themselves against, so it is little wonder if that traditional feud is long in wearing out of the stock. The wounds of the old warfare were long ahealing, and an east wind of hard times puts a new ache in every one of them. Thrift was the first lesson in their horn-book, pointed out, letter after letter, by the lean finger of the hard schoolmaster, Necessity. Neither were those plump, rosy-gilled Englishmen that came hither, but a hard-faced, atrabilious, earnest-eyed race, stiff from long wrestling with the Lord in prayer, and who had taught Satan to dread the new Puritan hug. Add two hundred years' influence of soil, climate, and exposure, with its necessary result of idiosyncrasies, and we have the present Yankee, full of expedients, half master of all trades, inventive in all but the beautiful, full of shifts, not yet capable of comfort, armed at all points against the old enemy Hunger, longanimous, good at patching, not so careful for what is best as for what will do, with a clasp to his purse and a button to his pocket, not skilled to build against Time, as in old countries, but against sore-pressing Need, accustomed to move the world with no ποῦ στή but his own two feet, and no lever but his own long forecast. A strange hybrid, indeed, did circumstances beget, here in the New World, upon the old Puritan stock, and the earth never before saw such mystic-practicalism, such niggard-geniality, such calculating-fanaticism, such cast-iron-enthusiasm, such unwilling-humor, such close-fisted-generosity. This new Græculus esuriens will make a living out of any thing. He will invent new trades as well as tools. His brain is his capital, and he will get education at all risks. Put him on Juan Fernandez, and he would make a spelling-book first, and a salt-pan afterward. In cælum jussuris, ibit,—or the other way either,—it is all one, so any thing is to be got by it. Yet, after all, thin, speculative Jonathan is more like the Englishman of two centuries ago than John Bull himself is. He has lost somewhat in solidity, has become fluent and adaptable, but more of the original groundwork of character remains. He feels more at home with Fulke Greville, Herbert of Cherbury, Quarles, George Herbert, and Browne, than with his modern English cousins. He is nearer than John, by at least a hundred years, to Naseby, Marston Moor, Worcester, and the time when, if ever, there were true Englishmen. John Bull has suffered the idea of the Invisible to be very much fattened out of him. Jonathan is conscious still that he lives in the world of the Unseen as well as of the Seen. To move John, you must make your fulcrum of solid beef and pudding ; an abstract idea will do for Jonathan.

* * TO THE INDULGENT READER.

MY friend, the Reverend Mr. Wilbur, having been seized with a dangerous fit of illness, before this Introduction had passed through the press, and being incapacitated for all literary exertion, sent to me his notes, memoranda, &c., and requested me to fashion them into some shape more fitting for the general eye. This, owing to the fragmentary and disjointed state of his manuscripts, I have felt wholly unable to do ; yet, being unwilling that the reader should be deprived of such parts of his lucubrations as seemed more finished, and not well discerning how to segregate these from the rest, I have concluded to send them all to the press precisely as they are.

COLUMBUS NYE, Pastor of a Church in Bungtown Corner.

It remains to speak of the Yankee dialect. And, first, it may be premised, in a general way, that any one much read in the writings of the early colonists need not be told that the far greater share of the words and phrases now esteemed peculiar to New England, and local there, were brought from the mother country. A person familiar with the dialect of certain portions of Massachusetts will not fail to recognize, in ordinary discourse, many words now noted in English vocabularies as archaic, the greater part of which were in common use about the time of the King James translation of the Bible. Shakspeare stands less in need of a glossary to most New Englanders than to many a native of the Old Country. The peculiarities of our speech, however, are rapidly wearing out. As there is no country where reading is so universal and newspapers are so multitudinous, so no phrase remains long local, but is transplanted in the mail bags to every remotest corner of the land. Consequently our dialect approaches nearer to uniformity than that of any other nation.

The English have complained of us for coining new words. Many of those so stigmatized were old ones by them forgotten, and all make now an unquestioned part of the currency, wherever English is spoken. Undoubtedly, we have a right to make new words, as they are needed by the fresh aspects under which life presents itself here in the New World; and, indeed, wherever a language is alive, it grows. It might be questioned whether we could not establish a stronger title to the ownership of the English tongue than the mother-islanders themselves. Here, past all question, is to be its great home and centre. And not only is it already spoken here by greater numbers, but with a far higher popular average of correctness, than in Britain. The great writers of it, too, we might claim as ours, were ownership to be settled by the number of readers and lovers.

As regards the provincialisms to be met with in this volume, I may say that the reader will not find one which is not (as I believe) either native or imported with the early settlers, nor one which I have not, with my own ears, heard in familiar use. In the metrical portion of the book, I have endeavored to adapt the spelling as nearly as possible to the ordinary mode of pronunciation. Let the reader who deems me over-particular remember this caution of Martial :—

“Quem recitas, meus est, O Fidentine libellus ; Sed male cum recitas, incipit esse tuus.”

A few further explanatory remarks will not be impertinent.

I shall barely lay down a few general rules for the reader's guidance.

1. The genuine Yankee never gives the rough sound to the r when he can help it, and often displays considerable ingenuity in avoiding it even before a vowel.

2. He seldom sounds the final g, a piece of self-denial, if we consider his partiality for nasals. The same of the final d, as han' and stan' for hand and stand.

3. The h in such words as while, when, where, he omits altogether.

4. In regard to a, he shows some inconsistency, sometimes giving a close and obscure sound, as hev for have, hendy for handy, ez for as, thet for that, and again giving it the broad sound it has in father, as hânsome for handsome.

5. To the sound ou he prefixes an e (hard to exemplify otherwise than orally).

The following passage in Shakspeare he would recite thus :—

“Neow is the winta uv eour discontent
 Med glorious summa by this sun o’ Yock,
 An’ all the cleouds thet leowered upon eour heouse
 In the deep buzzum o’ the oshin buried ;
 Neow air eour breows beound ’ith victorious wreaths ;
 Eour breused arms hung up fer monimunce ;
 Eour starn alarums chānged to merry meetins,
 Eour dreffle marches to delightful measures.
 Grim-visaged war heth smeuthed his wrinkled front,
 An’ neow, instid o’ mountin’ barebid steeds
 To fright the souls o’ ferfle edverseries,
 He capers nimly in a lady’s chāmber,
 To the lascivious pleasin’ uv a loot.”

6. Au, in such words as daughter and slaughter, he pronounces ah.

7. To the dish thus seasoned add a drawl ad libitum.

a. Unable to procure a likeness of Mr. Biglow, I thought the curious reader might be gratified with a sight of the editorial effigies. And here a choice between two was offered,—the one a profile (entirely black) cut by Doyle, the other a portrait painted by a native artist of much promise. The first of these seemed wanting in expression, and in the second a slight obliquity of the visual organs has been heightened (perhaps from an over-desire of force on the part of the artist) into too close an approach to actual strabismus. This slight divergence in my optical apparatus from the ordinary model—however I may have been taught to regard it in the light of a mercy rather than a cross, since it enabled me to give as much of directness and personal application to my discourses as met the wants of my congregation, without risk of offending any by being supposed to have him or her in my eye (as the saying is)—seemed yet to Mrs. Wilbur a sufficient objection to the engraving of the aforesaid painting. We read of many who either absolutely refused to allow the copying of their features, as especially did Plotinus and Agesilaus among the ancients, not to mention the more modern instances of Scioppius Palæottus, Pinellus, Velserus, Gataker, and others, or were indifferent thereto, as Cromwell.

β. Yet was Cæsar desirous of concealing his baldness. Per contra, my Lord Protector's carefulness in the matter of his wart might be cited. Men generally more desirous of being improved in their portraits than characters. Shall probably find very unflattered likeness of ourselves in Recording Angel's gallery.

γ. Whether any of our national peculiarities may be traced to our use of stoves, as a certain closeness of the lips in pronunciation, and a smothered smoulderingness of disposition, seldom roused to open flame? An unrestrained intercourse with fire probably conducive to generosity and hospitality of soul. Ancient Mexicans used stoves, as the friar Augustin Ruiz reports, Hakluyt, III., 468,—but Popish priests not always reliable authority.

To-day picked my Isabella grapes. Crop injured by attacks of rose-bug in the spring. Whether Noah was justifiable in preserving this class of insects?

δ. Concerning Mr. Biglow's pedigree. Tolerably certain that there was never a poet among his ancestors. An ordination hymn attributed to a maternal uncle, but perhaps a sort of production not demanding the creative faculty.

His grandfather a painter of the grandiose or Michael Angelo school. Seldom painted objects smaller than houses or barns, and these with uncommon expression.

ε. Of the Wilburs no complete pedigree. The crest said to be a wild boar, whence, perhaps, the name.(?) A connection with the Earls of Wilbraham (quasi wild boar ham) might be made out. This suggestion worth following up. In 1677, John W. m. Expect——, had issue, 1. John, 2. Haggai, 3. Expect, 4. Ruhamah, 5. Desire.

“Hear lyes y^e bodye of Mrs. Expect Wilber,
 Ye crewell salvages they kil'd her
 Together wth other Christian soles eleaven,
 October ye ix daye, 1707.
 Ye stream of Jordan sh' as crost ore
 And now expeacts me on ye other shore :
 I live in hope her soon to join ;
 Her earthlye yeeres were forty and nine.”

From Gravestone in Pekussett, North Parish.

This is unquestionably the same John who afterward (1711) married Tabitha Hagg or Ragg.

But if this were the case, she seems to have died early ; for only three years after, namely, 1714. we have evidence that he married Winifred, daughter of Lieutenant Tipping.

He seems to have been a man of substance, for we find him in 1696 conveying “one undivided eightieth part of a salt-meadow " in Yabbok, and he commanded a sloop in 1702.

Those who doubt the importance of genealogical studies fuste potius quam argumento erudiendi.

I trace him as far as 1723, and there lose him. In that year he was chosen selectman.

No gravestone. Perhaps overthrown when new hearse-house was built, 1802.

He was probably the son of John, who came from Bilham Comit. Salop. circa 1642.

This first John was a man of considerable importance, being twice mentioned with the honorable prefix of Mr. in the town records. Name spelt with two l's.

"Hear lyeth ye bod [stone unhappily broken.]

It is greatly to be lamented that this curious epitaph is mutilated. It is said that the sacrilegious British soldiers made a target of this stone during the war of Independenee. How odious an animosity which pauses not at the grave ! How brutal that which spares not the monuments of authentic history ! This is not improbably from the pen of Rev. Moody Pyram, who is mentioned by Hubbard as having been noted for a silver vein of poetry. If his papers be still extant, a copy might possibly be recovered.

A LETTER

FROM MR. EZEKIEL BIGLOW OF JAALAM TO THE HON.
JOSEPH T. BUCKINGHAM, EDITOR OF THE BOSTON
COURIER, INCLOSING A POEM OF HIS SON, MR. HOSEA BIGLOW.

JAYLEM, june 1846.

MISTER EDDYTER :—Our Hosea wuz down to Boston last week, and he see a cruetin Sarjunt a struttin round as popler as a hen with 1 chicking, with 2 fellers a drummin and fin arter him like all nater. the sarjunt he thout Hosea hedn't gut his i teeth cut cos he looked a kindo's though he's jest com down, so he cal'lated to hook him in, but Hosity woodn't take none o' his sarse for all he hed much as 20 Rooster's tales stuck onto his hat and eenamost enuf brass a bobbin up and down on his shoulders and figureed onto his coat and trousis, let alone wut nater hed sot in his featers, to make a 6 pounder out on.

wal, Hosea he com home considerabal riled, and arter I'd gone to bed I heern Him a thrashin round like a short-tailed Bull in fli-time. The old Woman ses she to me ses she, Zekle, ses she, our Hosee's gut the chollery or suthin anuther ses she, don't you Bee skeered, ses I, he's oney amakin pottery * ses i, he's ollers on hand at that ere busynes like Da & martin, and shure enuf, cum mornin, Hosity he cum down stares full chiz-zle, hare on eend and cote tales flyin, and sot rite of to go reed his varses to Parson Wilbur bein he hain't aney grate shows o' book larnin himself, bimeby he cum back and sed the parson wuz drefle tickled with 'em as i hoop you will Be, and said they wuz True grit.

Hosea ses, tain't hardly fair to call 'em hisn now, cos the parson kind o' slicked off sum o' the last varses, but he told Hosee he didn't want to put his ore in to tetch to the Rest on 'em, bein they wuz verry well As thay wuz, and then Hosity ses he sed snthin a nuther about Simplex Mundishes or sum sech feller, but I guess Hosea kind o' didn't hear him, for I never hearn o' nobody o' that name in this villadge, and I've lived here man and boy 76 year cum next tater diggin, and thair ain't no wheres a kitting spryer 'n I be.

If you print 'em I wish you'd jest let folks know who hosity's father is, cos my ant Keziah used to say it's nater to be curus ses she, she ain't livin though and he's a likely kind o' lad.

EZEKIEL BIGLOW.

THRASH away, you 'll hev to rattle
On them kittle drums o' yourn,—
'Tain't a knowin' kind o' cattle
Thet is ketched with mouldy corn ;

* Aut insanit, aut versos facit.—H. W.

Put in stiff, you fifer feller,
Let folks see how spry you be,— Guess you 'll toot till you are yellor
'Fore you git ahold o' me !

Thet air flag 's a lettle rotten,
Hope it ain't your Sunday's best ;—
Fact ! it takes a sight o' cotton
To stuff out a soger's chest :
Sence we farmers hev to pay fer 't,
Ef you must wear humps like these,
Sposin' you should try salt hay fer 't,
It would du ez slick ez grease.

'T would n't suit them Southern fellers,
They 're a dreffle graspin' set,
We must ollers blow the bellers
Wen they want their irons het ;
May be it 's all right ez preachin',
But my narves it kind o' grates,
Wen I see the overreachin'
O' them nigger-drivin' States.

Them thet rule us, them slave-traders,
Hain't they cut a thunderin' swarth,
(Helped by Yankee renegaders,)
Thru the vartu o' the North !
We begin to think it 's nater
To take sarse an' not be riled ;—
Who 'd expect to see a tater
All on eend at bein' biled ?

Ez fer war, I call it murder,—
 There you hev it plain an' flat ;
 I don't want to go no further Than my Testyment fer that ;
 God hez sed so plump an' fairly,
 It 's ez long ez it is broad,
 An' you 've gut to git up airly
 Ef you want to take in God.

'T ain't your eppyletts an' feathers
 Make the thing a grain more right ;
 'Taint afollerin' your bell-wethers
 Will excuse ye in His sight :
 Ef you take a sword an' dror it,
 An' go stick a feller thru,
 Guv'ment ain't to answer for it,
 God 'll send the bill to you.

Wut 's the use o' meeting-goin'
 Every Sabbath, wet or dry,
 Ef it 's right to go amowin'
 Feller-men like oats an' rye ?
 I dunno but wut it 's pooty
 Training round in bobtail coats,—
 But it 's curus Christian dooty
 This ere cuttin' folks's throats.

They may talk o' Freedom's airy
 Tell they 're pupple in the face,—
 It 's a grand gret cemetary
 Fer the barthrighths of our race ;

They jest want this Californy
So 's to lug new slave-states in
To abuse ye, an' to scorn ye,
An' to plunder ye like sin.

Ain't it cute to see a Yankee
Take sech everlastin' pains,
All to git the Devil's thankee,
Helpin' on 'em weld their chains ?
Wy, it 's jest ez clear ez figgers,
Clear ez one an' one make two,
Chaps thet make black slaves o' niggers
Want to make wite slaves o' you.

Tell me jest the eend I 've come to Arter cipherin' plaguy smart,
An' it makes a handy sum, tu,
Any gump could larn by heart ;
Laborin' man an' laborin' woman
Hev one glory an' one shame,
Ev'y thin' thet 's done inhuman
Injers all on 'em the same.

'Tain't by turnin' out to hack folks
You 're goin' to git your right,
Nor by lookin' down on black folks
Coz you 're put upon by wite ;
Slavery ain't o' nary color,
'Tain't the hide thet makes it wus,
All it keers fer in a feller
'S jest to make him fill its pus.

Want to tackle me in, du ye ?
 I expect you 'll hev to wait ;
 Wen cold lead puts daylight thru ye
 You 'll begin to kal'late ;
 'Spose the crows wun't fall to pickin'
 All the carkiss from your bones,
 Coz you helped to give a lickin'
 To them poor half-Spanish drones ?

Jest go home an' ask our Nancy
 Wether I 'd be sech a goose
 Ez to jine ye,—guess you 'd fancy
 The etarnal bung wuz loose !
 She wants me fer home consumption,
 Let alone the hay 's to mow,—
 Ef you 're arter folks o' gumption,
 You 've a darned long row to hoe.

Take them editors thet 's crowin'
 Like a cockerel three months old,—
 Don't ketch any on 'em goin',
 Though they be so blasted bold ;
Ain't they a prime set o' fellers ?
 'Fore they think on 't they will sprout,
 (Like a peach thet's got the yellers,)
 With the meanness bustin' out.

Wal, go 'long to help 'em stealin'
 Bigger pens to cram with slaves,
 Help the men thet 's ollers dealin'
 Insults on your fathers' graves ;

Help the strong to grind the feeble,
Help the many agin the few,
Help the men thet call your people
Witewashed slaves an' peddling crew !

Massachusetts, God forgive her,
She 's akneelin' with the rest,
She, thet ough' to ha' clung fer ever
In her grand old eagle-nest ;
She thet ough' to stand so fearless
Wile the wracks are round her hurled,
Holdin' up a beacon peerless
To the oppressed of all the world !

Hain't they sold your colored seamen ?
Hain't they made your env'ys wiz ?
Wut 'll make ye act like freemen ?
Wut 'll git your dander riz ?
Come, I 'll tell ye wut I 'm thinkin'
Is our dooty in this fix,
They 'd ha' done 't ez quick ez winkin'
In the days o' seventy-six.

Clang the bells in every steeple,
Call all true men to disown
The tradoochers of our people,
The enslavers o' their own ;
Let our dear old Bay State proudly
Put the trumpet to her mouth,
Let her ring this messidge loudly
In the ears of all the South :—

"I 'll return ye good fer evil
 Much ez we frail mortils can,
 But I wun't go help the Devil
 Makin' man the cus o' man ;
 Call me coward, call me traider,
 Jest ez suits your mean idees,—
 Here I stand a tyrant-hater,
 An' the friend o' God an' Peace !"

Ef I 'd my way I hed ruther
 We should go to work an' part,—
 They take one way, we take t'other,—
 Guess it would n't break my heart ;
 Man hed ough' to put asunder
 Them thet God has noways jined ;
 An' I should n't gretly wonder
 Ef there 's thousands o' my mind.

[The first recruiting sergeant on record I conceive to have been that individual who is mentioned in the Book of Job as going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it. Bishop Latimer will have him to have been a bishop, but to me that other calling would appear more congenial. The sect of Cainites is not yet extinct, who esteemed the firstborn of Adam to be the most worthy, not only because of that privilege of primogeniture, but inasmuch as he was able to overcome and slay his younger brother. That was a wise saying of the famous Marquis Pescara to the Papal Legate, that it was impossible for men to serve Mars and Christ at the same time. Yet in time past the profession of arms was judged to be κατ' ἐξοχήν that of a gentleman, nor does this opinion want for strenuous upholders even in our day. Must we suppose, then, that the profession of Christianity was only intended for losels, or, at best, to afford an opening for plebeian ambition? Or shall we hold with that nicely metaphysical Pomeranian, Captain Vratz, who was Count Königsmark's chief instrument in the murder of Mr. Thynne, that the Scheme of Salvation has been arranged with an especial eye to the necessities of the upper classes, and that "God would consider a gentleman and deal with him suitably to the condition and profession he had placed him in?" It may be said of us all, Exemplo plus quam ratione vivimus.—H. W.]

FROM MR. HOSEA BIGLOW TO THE HON. J. T. BUCKINGHAM, EDITOR OF THE BOSTON COURIER, COVERING A LETTER FROM MR. B. SAWIN, PRIVATE IN THE MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT.

[THIS letter of Mr. Sawin's was not originally written in verse. Mr. Biglow, thinking it peculiarly susceptible of metrical adornment, translated it, so to speak, into his own vernacular tongue. This is not the time to consider the question, whether rhyme be a mode of expression natural to the human race. If leisure from other and more important avocations be granted, I will handle the matter more at large in an appendix to the present volume. In this place I will barely remark, that I have sometimes noticed in the unlanguageed prattlings of infants a fondness for alliteration, assonance, and even rhyme, in which natural predisposition we may trace the three degrees through which our Anglo-Saxon verse rose to its culmination in the poetry of Pope. I would not be understood as questioning in these remarks that pious theory which supposes that children, if left entirely to themselves, would naturally discourse in Hebrew. For this the authority of one experiment is claimed, and I could, with Sir Thomas Browne, desire its establishment, inasmuch as the acquirement of that sacred tongue would thereby be facilitated. I am aware that Herodotus states the conclusion of Psammeticus to have been in favor of a dialect of the Phrygian. But, beside the chance that a trial of this importance would hardly be blessed to a Pagan monarch whose only motive was curiosity, we have on the Hebrew side the comparatively recent investigation of James the Fourth of Scotland. I will add to this prefatory remark, that Mr. Sawin, though a native of Jaalam, has never been a stated attendant on the religious exercises of my congregation. I consider my humble efforts prospered in that not one of my sheep hath ever indued the wolf's clothing of war, save for the comparatively innocent diversion of a militia training. Not that my flock are backward to undergo the hardship of defensive warfare. They serve cheerfully in the great army which fights even unto death pro aris et focis, accoutred with the spade, the axe, the plane, the sledge, the spelling-book, and other such effectual weapons against want and ignorance and unthrift. I have taught them (under God) to esteem our human institutions as but tents of a night, to be stricken whenever Truth puts the bugle to her lips and sounds a march to the heights of wider-viewed intelligence and more perfect organization.—H. W.]

MISTER BUCKINUM, the follerin Billet was writ hum by a Yung feller of our town that wuz cussed fool enuff to goe atrottin inter Miss Chiff arter a Drum and fife. it ain't Nater for a feller to let on that he's sick o' any bizness that He went intu off his own free will and a Cord, but I rather cal'late he's middlin tired o' voluntearin By this Time. I bleeve u may put de-pendunts on his statemence. For I never heered nothin bad on him let Alone his havin what Parson Wilbur cal's a ponyshong for cocktales, and he ses it wuz a soshiashun of idees sot him agoin arter the Crootin Sargient cos he wore a cocktale onto his hat.

[Those have not been wanting (as, indeed, when hath Satan been to seek for attorneys ?) who have maintained that our late inroad upon Mexico was undertaken, not so much for the avenging of any national quarrel, as for the spreading of free institutions and of Protestantism. Capita vix duabus Anticyris medenda! Verily I admire that no pious sergeant among these new Crusaders beheld Martin Luther riding at the front of the host upon a tamed pontifical bull, as, in that former invasion of Mexico, the zealous Diaz (spawn though he were of the Scarlet Woman) was favored with a vision of St. James of Compostella, skewering the infidels upon his apostolical lance. We read, also, that Richard of the lion heart, having gone to Palestine on a similar errand of mercy, was divinely encouraged to cut the throats of such Paynims as refused to swallow the bread of life (doubtless that they might be thereafter incapacitated for swallowing the filthy gobbets of Mahound) by angels of heaven, who cried to the king and his knights,—Seigneurs, tuez! tuez! providentially using the French tongue, as being the only one understood by their auditors. This would argue for the pantoglottism of these celestial intelligences, while, on the other hand, the Devil teste Cotton Mather, is unversed in certain of the Indian dialects. Yet must he be a semeiologist the most expert, making himself intelligible to every people and kindred by signs; no other discourse, indeed, being needful, than such as the mackerel-fisher holds with his finned quarry, who, if other bait be wanting, can by a bare bit of white rag at the end of a string captivate those foolish fishes. Such piscatorial oratory is Satan cunning in. Before one he trails a hat and feather or a bare feather without a hat; before another, a Presidential chair, or a tidewaiter's stool, or a pulpit in the city, no matter what. To us, dangling there over our heads, they seem junkets dropped out of the seventh heaven, sops dipped in nectar, but, once in our mouths, they are all one, bits of fuzzy cotton.

This, however, by the way. It is time now revocare gradum. While so many miracles of this sort, vouched by eyewitnesses, have encouraged the arms of Papists, not to speak of those Dioscuri (whom we must conclude imps of the pit) who sundry times captained the pagan Roman soldiery, it is strange that our first American crusade was not in some such wise also signalized. Yet it is said that the Lord hath manifestly prospered our armies. This opens the question, whether, when our hands are strengthened to make great slaughter of our enemies, it be absolutely and demonstratively certain that this might is added to us from above, or whether some Potentate from an opposite quarter may not have a finger in it, as there are few pies into which his meddling digits are not thrust. Would the Sanctifier and Setter-apart of the seventh day have assisted in a victory gained on the Sabbath, as was one in the late war? Or has that day become less an object of his especial care since the year 1697, when so manifest a providence occurred to Mr. William Trowbridge, in answer to whose prayers, when he and all on shipboard with him were starving, a dolphin was sent daily, "which was enough to serve 'em ; only on Saturdays they still caught a couple, and on the Lord's Days they could catch none at all" ? Haply they might have been permitted, by way of mortification, to take some few sculpins (those banes of the salt-water angler), which unseemly fish would, moreover, have conveyed to them a symbolical reproof for their breach of the day, being known in the rude dialect of our mariners as Cape Cod Clergymen.

It has been a refreshment to many nice consciences to know that our Chief Magistrate would not regard with eyes of approval the (by many esteemed) sinful pastime of dancing, and I own myself to be so far of that mind, that I could not but set my face against this Mexican Polka, though danced to the Presidential piping with a Gubernatorial second. If ever the country should be seized with another such mania de propaganda fide, I think it would be wise to fill our bombshells with alternate copies of the Cambridge Platform and the Thirty-nine Articles, which would produce a mixture of the highest explosive power, and to wrap every one of our cannon-balls in a leaf of the New Testament, the reading of which is denied to those who sit in the darkness of Popery. Those iron evangelists would thus be able to disseminate vital religion and Gospel truth in quarters inaccessible to the ordinary missionary. I have seen lads, unimpregnate with the more sublimated punctiliousness of Walton, secure pickerel, taking their unwary siesta beneath the lily-pads too nigh the surface, with a gun and small shot. Why not, then, since gunpowder was unknown to the Apostles (not to enter here upon the question whether it were discovered before that period by the Chinese), suit our metaphor to the age in which we live and say shooters as well as fishers of men?

I do much fear that we shall be seized now and then with a Protestant fervor, as long as we have neighbor Naboths whose wallowings in Papistical mire excite our horror in exact proportion to the size and desirableness of their vineyards. Yet I rejoice that some earnest Protestants have been made by this war,—I mean those who protested against it. Fewer they were than 1 could wish, for one might imagine America to have been colonized by a tribe of those nondescript African animals the Aye-Ayes, so difficult a word is No to us all. There is some malformation or defect of the vocal organs, which either prevents our uttering it at all, or gives it so thick a pronunciation as to be unintelligible. A mouth filled with the national pudding, or watering in expectation thereof, is wholly incompetent to this refractory monosyllable. An abject and herpetetic Public Opinion is the Pope, the Anti-Christ, for us to protest against e corde cordium. And by what College of Cardinals is this our God's-vicar, our binder and looser, elected? Very like, by the sacred conclave of Tag, Rag, and Bobtail, in the gracious atmosphere of the grog-shop. Yet it is of this that we must all be puppets. This thumps the pulpit-cushion, this guides the editor's pen, this wags the senator's tongue. This decides what Scriptures are canonical, and shuffles Christ away into the Apocrypha. "According to that sentence fathered upon Solon, Οὕτω δημόσιον κακὸν ἔρχεται οἴκῳ ἐξόστῳ. This unclean spirit is skilful to assume various shapes. I have known it to enter my own study and nudge my elbow of a Saturday, under the semblance of a wealthy member of my congregation. It were a great blessing, if every particular of what in the sum we call popular sentiment could carry about the name of its manufacturer stamped legibly upon it. I gave a stab under the fifth rib to that pestilent fallacy,—“Our country, right or wrong,”—by tracing its original to a speech of Ensign Cilley at a dinner of the Bungtown Fencibles.—H. W.]

No. III.

WHAT MR. ROBINSON THINKS.

[A FEW remarks on the following verses will not be out of place. The satire in them was not meant to have any personal, but only a general, application. Of the gentleman upon whose letter they were intended as a commentary Mr. Biglow had never heard, till he saw the letter itself. The position of the satirist is oftentimes one which he would not have chosen, had the election been left to himself. In attacking bad principles, he is obliged to select some individual who has made himself their exponent, and in whom they are impersonate, to the end that what he says may not, through ambiguity, be dissipated tenués in auras. For what says Seneca? Longum iter per præcepta, breve et efficace per exempla. A bad principle is comparatively harmless while it continues to be an abstraction, nor can the general mind comprehend it fully till it is printed in that large type which all men can read at sight, namely, the life and character, the sayings and doings, of particular persons. It is one of the cunningest fetches of Satan, that he never exposes himself directly to our arrows, but, still dodging behind this neighbor or that acquaintance, compels us to wound him through them, if at all. He holds our affections as hostages, the while he patches up a truce with our conscience.

Meanwhile, let us not forget that the aim of the true satirist is not to be severe upon persons, but only upon falsehood, and, as Truth and Falsehood start from the same point, and sometimes even go along together for a little way, his business is to follow the path of the latter after it diverges, and to show her floundering in the bog at the end of it. Truth is quite beyond the reach of satire. There is so brave a simplicity in her, that she can no more be made ridiculous than an oak or pine. The danger of the satirist is, that continual use may deaden his sensibility to the force of language. He becomes more and more liable to strike harder than he knows or intends. He may be careful to put on his boxing-gloves, and yet forget, that, the older they grow, the more plainly may the knuckles inside be felt. Moreover, in the heat of contest, the eye is insensibly drawn to the crown of victory, whose tawdry tinsel glitters through that dust of the ring which obscures Truth's wreath of simple leaves. I have sometimes thought that my young friend, Mr. Biglow, needed a monitory hand laid on his arm,—aliquid sufflammandus erat. I have never thought it good husbandry to water the tender plants of reform with aqua fortis, yet, where so much is to do in the beds, he were a sorry gardener who should wage a whole day's war with an iron scuffle on those ill weeds that make the garden-walks of life unsightly, when a sprinkle of Attic salt will wither them up. Est ars etiam maledicendi, says Scaliger, and truly it is a hard thing to say where the graceful gentleness of the lamb merges in downright sheepishness. We may conclude with worthy and wise Dr. Fuller, that "one may be a lamb in private wrongs, but in hearing general affronts to goodness they are asses which are not lions."—H. W.]

GUVERNER B. is a sensible man ;

General C. he goes in fer the war ;

He don't vally principle more 'n an old cud ;
Wut did God make us raytional creeturs fer,
But glory an' gunpowder, plunder an' blood ?
So John P.

Robinson he

With good old idees o' wut's right an' wut ain't,

We kind o' thought Christ went agin war an' pillage,

An' thet epplyetts worn't the best mark of a saint ;
But John P.

Parson Wilbur sez he never heerd in his life

Thet th' Apostles rigged out in their swaller-tail

An' marched round in front of a drum an' a fife,

To git some on 'em office, an' some on 'em votes ;

But John P.

Robinson he

Sez they did n't know everythin' down in Judee.

Wal, it 's a marcy we 've gut folks to tell us
The rights an' the wrongs o' these matters, I vow,—
God sends country lawyers, an' other wise fellers,
To drive the world's team wen it gits in a slough ;
Fer John P.
Robinson he
Sez the world 'll go right, ef he hollers out Gee !

[The attentive reader will doubtless have perceived in the foregoing poem an allusion to that pernicious sentiment,—“Our country, right or wrong.” It is an abuse of language to call a certain portion of land, much more, certain personages elevated for the time being to high station, our country. I would not sever nor loosen a single one of those ties by which we are united to the spot of our birth, nor minish by a tittle the respect due to the Magistrate. I love our own Bay State too well to do the one, and as for the other, I have myself for nigh forty years exercised, however unworthily, the function of Justice of the Peace, having been called thereto by the unsolicited kindness of that most excellent man and upright patriot, Caleb Strong. Patricæ fumus igne alieno luculentior is best qualified with this,—Ubi libertas, ibi patria. We are inhabitants of two worlds, and owe a double, but not a divided, allegiance. In virtue of our clay, this little ball of earth exacts a certain loyalty of us, while, in our capacity as spirits, we are admitted citizens of an invisible and holier fatherland. There is a patriotism of the soul whose claim absolves us from our other and terrene fealty. Our true country is that ideal realm which we represent to ourselves under the names of religion, duty, and the like. Our terrestrial organizations are but far-off approaches to so fair a model, and they all are verily traitors who resist not any attempt to divert them from this their original intendment. When, therefore, one would have us to fling up our caps and shout with the multitude,—“Our country, however bounded!” he demands of us that we sacrifice the larger to the less, the higher to the lower, and that we yield to the imaginary claims of a few acres of soil our duty and privilege as liegemen of Truth. Our true country is bounded on the north and the south, on the east and the west, by Justice, and when she oversteps that invisible boundary-line by so much as a hair’s breadth, she ceases to be our mother, and chooses rather to be looked upon quasi noverca. That is a hard choice, when our earthly love of country calls upon us to tread one path and our duty points us to another. We must make as noble and becoming an election as did Penelope between Icarus and Ulysses. Veiling our faces, we must take silently the hand of Duty to follow her.

Shortly after the publication of the foregoing poem, there appeared some comments upon it in one of the public prints which seemed to call for some animadversion. I accordingly addressed to Mr. Buckingham, of the Boston Courier, the following letter.

“JALAM, November 4, 1847.

“To the Editor of the Courier:

“RESPECTED SIR,—Calling at the post office this morning, our worthy and efficient postmaster offered for my perusal a paragraph in the Boston Morning Post of the 3d instant, wherein certain effusions of the pastoral muse are attributed to the pen of Mr. James Russell Lowell. For aught I know or can affirm to the contrary, this Mr. Lowell may be a very deserving person and a youth of parts (though I have seen verses of his which I could never rightly understand) ; and if he be such, he, I am certain, as well as I, would be free from any proclivity to appropriate to himself whatever of credit (or discredit) may honestly belong to another. I am confident, that, in penning these few lines, I am only forestalling a disclaimer from that young gentleman, whose silence hitherto, when rumor pointed to himward, has excited in my bosom mingled emotions of sorrow and surprise. Well may my young parishioner, Mr. Biglow, exclaim with the poet.

though, in saying this, I would not convey the impression that he is a proficient in the Latin tongue,—the tongue, I might add, of a Horace and a Tully.

“Mr. B. does not employ his pen, I can safely say, for any lucre of worldly gain, or to be exalted by the carnal plaudits of men, digito monstrari, &c. He does not wait upon Providence for mercies, and in his heart mean merces. But I should esteem myself as verily deficient in my duty (who am his friend and in some unworthy sort his spiritual fidus Achates, &c.), if I did not step forward to claim for him whatever measure of applause might be assigned to him by the judicious.

“If this were a fitting occasion, I might venture here a brief dissertation touching the manner and kind of my young friend’s poetry. But I dubitate whether this abstruser sort of speculation (though enlivened by some apposite instances from Aristophanes) would sufficiently interest your oppidan readers. As regards their satirical tone, and their plainness of speech, I will only say, that, in my pastoral experience, I have found that the Arch-Enemy loves nothing better than to be treated as a religious, moral, and intellectual being, and that there is no apage Sathanas! so potent as ridicule. But it is a kind of weapon that must have a button of good-nature on the point of it.

“The productions of Mr. B. have been stigmatized in some quarters as unpatriotic; but I can vouch that he loves his native soil with that hearty, though discriminating, attachment which springs from an intimate social intercourse of many years’ standing. In the ploughing season, no one has a deeper share in the well-being of the country than he. If Dean Swift were right in saying that he who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before confers a greater benefit on the state than he who taketh a city, Mr. B. might exhibit a fairer claim to the Presidency than General Scott himself. I think that some of those disinterested lovers of the hard-handed democracy, whose fingers have never touched anything rougher than the dollars of our common country, would hesitate to compare palms with him. It would do your heart good, respected Sir, to see that young man mow. He cuts a cleaner and wider swarth than any in his town.

“But it is time for me to be at my Post. It is very clear that my young friend’s shot has struck the lintel, for the Post is shaken (Amos ix. 1). The editor of that paper is a strenuous advocate of the Mexican war, and a colonel, as I am given to understand. I presume, that, being necessarily absent in Mexico, he has left his journal in some less judicious hands. At any rate the Post has been too swift on this occasion. It could hardly have cited a more incontrovertible line from any poem than that which it has selected for animadversion, namely,—

“If the Post maintains the converse of this proposition, it can hardly be considered as a safe guidepost for the moral and religious portions of its party, however many other excellent qualities of a post it may be blessed with. There is a sign in London on which is painted,—‘The Green Man.’ It would do very well as a portrait of any individual who would support so unscriptural a thesis. As regards the language of the line in question, I am bold to say that He who readeth the hearts of men will not account any dialect unseemly which conveys a sound and pious sentiment. I could wish that such sentiments were more common, however uncouthly expressed. Saint Ambrose affirms, that veritas a quocunque (why not, then, quomodocunque?) dicatur a spiritu sancto est. Digest also this of Baxter:—‘The plainest words are the most profitable oratory in the weightiest matters.’”

“When the paragraph in question was shown to Mr. Biglow, the only part of it which seemed to give him any dissatisfaction was that which classed him with the Whig party. He says, that, if resolutions are a nourishing kind of diet, that party must be in a very hearty and flourishing condition; for that they have quietly eaten more good ones of their own baking than he could have conceived to be possible without repletion. He has been for some years past (I regret to say) an ardent opponent of those sound doctrines of protective policy which form so prominent a portion of the creed of that party. I confess, that, in some discussions which I have had with him on this point in my study, he has displayed a vein of obstinacy which I had not hitherto detected in his composition. He is also (horresco referens) infected in no small measure with the peculiar notions of a print called the Liberator, whose heresies I take every proper opportunity of combating, and of which, I thank God, I have never read a single line.

“I did not see Mr. B.’s verses until they appeared in print, and there is certainly one thing in them which I consider highly improper. I allude to the personal references to myself by name. To confer notoriety on an humble individual who is laboring quietly in his vocation, and who keeps his cloth as free as he can from the dust of the political arena (though væ mihi si non evangelizavero), is no doubt an indecorum. The sentiments which he attributes to me I will not deny to be mine. They were embodied, though in a different form, in a discourse preached upon the last day of public fasting, and were acceptable to my entire people (of whatever political views), except the postmaster, who dissented ex officio. I observe that you sometimes devote a portion of your paper to a religious summary. I should be well pleased to furnish a copy of my discourse for insertion in this department of your instructive journal. By omitting the advertisements, it might easily be got within the limits of a single number, and I venture to insure you the sale of some scores of copies in this town. I will cheerfully render myself responsible for ten. It might possibly be advantageous to issue it as an extra. But perhaps you will not esteem it an object, and I will not press it. My offer does not spring from any weak desire of seeing my name in print; for I can enjoy this satisfaction at any time by turning to the Triennial Catalogue of the University, where it also possesses that added emphasis of Italics with which those of my calling are distinguished.

“I would simply add, that I continue to fit ingenuous youth for college, and that I have two spacious and airy sleeping apartments at this moment unoccupied. Ingenuas didicisse, &c. Terms, which vary according to the circumstances of the parents, may be known on application to me by letter, post paid. In all cases the lad will be expected to fetch his own towels. This rule, Mrs. W. desires me to add, has no exceptions.

“Respectfully, your obedient servant,
“HOMER WILBUR, A. M.”

“P. S. Perhaps the last paragraph may look like an attempt to obtain the insertion of my circular gratuitously. If it should appear to you in that light, I desire that you would erase it, or charge for it at the usual rates, and deduct the amount from the proceeds in your hands from the sale of my discourse, when it shall be printed. My circular is much longer and more explicit, and will be forwarded without charge to any who may desire it. It has been very neatly executed on a letter sheet, by a very deserving printer, who attends upon my ministry, and is a creditable specimen of the typographic art. I have one hung over my mantelpiece in a neat frame, where it makes a beautiful and appropriate ornament, and balances the profile of Mrs. W., cut with her toes by the young lady born without arms.

I have in the foregoing letter mentioned General Scott in connection with the Presidency, because I have been given to understand that he has blown to pieces and otherwise caused to be destroyed more Mexicans than any other commander. His claim would therefore be deservedly considered the strongest. Until accurate returns of the Mexicans killed, wounded, and maimed be obtained, it will be difficult to settle these nice points of precedence. Should it prove that any other officer has been more meritorious and destructive than General S., and has thereby rendered himself more worthy of the confidence and support of the conservative portion of our community, I shall cheerfully insert his name, instead of that of General S., in a future edition. It may be thought, likewise, that General S. has invalidated his claims by too much attention to the decencies of apparel, and the habits belonging to a gentleman. These abstruser points of statesmanship are beyond my scope. I wonder not that successful military achievement should attract the admiration of the multitude. Rather do I rejoice with wonder to behold how rapidly this sentiment is losing its hold upon the popular mind. It is related of Thomas Warton, the second of that honored name who held the office of Poetry Professor at Oxford, that, when one wished to find him, being absconded, as was his wont, in some obscure alehouse, he was counselled to traverse the city with a drum and fife, the sound of which inspiring music would be sure to draw the Doctor from his retirement into the street. We are all more or less bitten with this martial insanity. Nescio quâ dulcedine. . . . cunctos ducit. I confess to some infection of that itch myself. When I see a Brigadier-General maintaining his insecure elevation in the saddle under the severe fire of the training-field, and when I remember that some military enthusiasts, through haste, inexperience, or an over-desire to lend reality to those fictitious combats, will sometimes discharge their ramrods, I cannot but admire, while I deplore, the mistaken devotion of those heroic officers. Semel insanivimus omnes. I was myself, during the late war with Great Britain, chaplain of a regiment, which was fortunately never called to active military duty. I mention this circumstance with regret rather than pride. Had I been summoned to actual warfare, I trust that I might have been strengthened to bear myself after the manner of that reverend father in our New England Israel, Dr. Benjamin Colman, who, as we are told in Turell's life of him, when the vessel in which he had taken passage for England was attacked by a French privateer, "fought like a philosopher and a Christian, . . . and prayed all the while he charged and fired." As this note is already long, I shall not here enter upon a discussion of the question, whether Christians may lawfully be soldiers. I think it sufficiently evident, that, during the first two centuries of the Christian era, at least, the two professions were esteemed incompatible. Consult Jortin on this head.—H. W.

REMARKS OF INCREASE D. O'PHACE, ESQUIRE, AT AN EXTRUMPERY CAUCUS IN STATE STREET, REPORTED
By MR. H. BIGLOW.

[THE ingenious reader will at once understand that no such speech as the following was ever totidem verbis pronounced. But there are simpler and less guarded wits, for the satisfying of which such an explanation may be needful. For there are certain invisible lines, which as Truth successively overpasses, she becomes Untruth to one and another, of us, as a large river, flowing from one kingdom into another, sometimes takes a new name, albeit the waters undergo no change, how small soever. There is, moreover, a truth of fiction more veracious than the truth of fact, as that of the Poet, which represents to us things and events as they ought to be, rather than servilely copies them as they are imperfectly imaged in the crooked and smoky glass of our mundane affairs. It is this which makes the speech of Antonius, though originally spoken in no wider a forum than the brain of Shakspeare, more historically valuable than that other which Appian has reported, by as much as the understanding of the Englishman was more comprehensive than that of the Alexandrian. Mr. Biglow, in the present instance, has only made use of a license assumed by all the historians of antiquity, who put into the mouths of various characters such words as seem to them most fitting to the occasion and to the speaker. If it be objected that no such oration could ever have been delivered, I answer, that there are few assemblages for speech-making which do not better deserve the title of Parliamentum Indocorum than did the sixth Parliament of Henry the Fourth, and that men still continue to have as much faith in the Oracle of Fools as ever Pantagruel had. Howell, in his letters, recounts a merry tale of a certain ambassador of Queen Elizabeth, who, having written two letters, one to her Majesty and the other to his wife, directed them at cross-purposes, so that the Queen was beducked and bedeared and requested to send a change of hose, and the wife was beprincessed and otherwise unwontedly besuperlatived, till the one feared for the wits of her ambassador, the other for those of her husband. In like manner it may be presumed that our speaker has misdirected some of his thoughts, and given to the whole theatre what he would have wished to confide only to a select auditory at the back of the curtain. For it is seldom that we can get any frank utterance from men, who address, for the most part, a Buncombe either in this world or the next. As for their audiences, it may be truly said of our people, that they enjoy one political institution in common with the ancient Athenians : I mean a certain profitless kind of ostracism, wherewith, nevertheless, they seem hitherto well enough content. For in Presidential elections, and other affairs of the sort, whereas I observe that the oysters fall to the lot of comparatively few, the shells (such as the privileges of voting as they are told to do by the ostrivori aforesaid, and of huzzaing at public meetings) are very liberally distributed among the people, as being their prescriptive and quite sufficient portion.

The occasion of the speech is supposed to be Mr. Palfrey's refusal to vote for the Whig candidate for the Speakership.—H. W.]

No! Hez he? He hain't, though? Wut? Voted agin him?

Ef the bird of our country could ketch him, she'd skin him;

I seem 's though I see her, with wráth in each quill,
Lake a chancery lawyer, afilen' her bill,
An' grindin' her talents ez sharp ez all nater,
To pounce like a writ on the back o' the traider.
Forgive me, my friends, ef I seem to be het,
But a crisis like this must with vigor be met;
Wen an Arnold the star-spangled banner bestains,
Holl Fourth o' Julys seem to bile in my veins.

Who ever 'd ha' thought sech a pisonous rig
Would be run by a chap thet wuz chose fer a Wig?
“ We knowed wut his principles wuz 'fore we sent him ” ?

Wut wuz ther in them from this vote to pervent him?
A marciful Providence fashioned us holler
O' purpose thet we might our principles swaller;
It can hold any quantity on 'em, the belly can,
An' bring 'em up ready fer use like the pelican,
Or more like the kangaroo, who (wich is stranger)
Puts her family into her pouch wen there 's danger.
Ain't principle precious? then, who 's goin' to use it
Wen there 's resk o' some chap's gittin' up to abuse it?

I can't tell the wy on 't, but nothin' is so sure
 Ez thet principle kind o' gits spiled by exposure ;*
 A man thet lets all sorts o' folks git a sight on 't Ough' to hev it all took right away, every mite on 't ;
 Ef he can't keep it to himself when it's wise to,
 He ain't one it's fit to trust nothin' so nice to.

Besides, ther's a wonderful power in latitude
 To shift a man's morril relations an' attitude ;
 Some flossifers think thet a fakkilty's granted
 The minnit it's proved to be thoroughly wanted,
 Thet a change o' demand makes a change o' condition,

An' thet everythin' 's nothin' except by position ;
 Ez, fer instance, thet rubber-trees fust begun bearin'
 Wen p'litickle conshunces come into wearin',— Thet the fears of a monkey, whose holt chanced to fail,

Drawed the vertibry out to a prehensile tail ;
 So, wen one's chose to Congriss, ez soon ez he's in it,
 A collar grows right round his neck in a minnit,
 An' sartin it is thet a man cannot be strict
 In bein' himself, wen he gits to the Deestric,

* The speaker is of a different mind from Tully, who, in his recently discovered tractate De Rupublica, tells us,—Nec vero habere vietutem satis est, quasi artem aliquam, nisi utare, and from our Milton, who says,—“ I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race where that immortal garland is to be run for, not without dust and heat.”—Arèop. He had taken the words out of the Roman's mouth, without knowing it, and might well exclaim with Austin (if a saint's name may stand sponsor for a curse), Pereant qui ante nos nostra dixerint!—H. W.

Fer a coat thet sets wal here in ole Massachusetts,
Wen it gits on to Washinton, somehow askew sets.

Resolves, do you say, o' the Springfield Convention ?
Thet 's percisely the pint I was goin' to mention ;
Resolves air a thing we most gen'ally keep ill,
They 're a cheap kind o' dust fer the eyes o' the people ;
A parcel o' delligits jest git together
An' chat fer a spell o' the crops an' the weather,
Then, comin' to order, they squabble awile
An' let off the speeches they 're ferful 'll spile ;
Then—Resolve,—That we wunt hev an inch o' slave territory ;

Thet President Polk's holl perceedins air very tory ;
Thet the war 's a damned war, an' them thet enlist in it Should hev a cravat with a drefle tight twist in it ;
'Thet the war is a war fer the spreadin' o' slavery ;
Thet our army desarves our best thanks fer their bravery ;

Thet we 're the original friends o' the nation,
All the rest air a paltry an' base fabrication ;
Thet we highly respect Messrs. A, B, an' C,
An' ez deeply despise Messrs. E, F, an' G.

In this way they go to the eend o' the chapter,
An' then they bust out in a kind of a raptur
About their own vartoo, an' folk's stone-blindness
To the men thet 'ould actilly do 'em a kindness,—
The American eagle, the Pilgrims thet landed,
Till on ole Plymouth Rock they git finally stranded.
Wal, the people they listen and say, " Thet 's the ticket ;
Ez fer Mexico, 'tain't no great glory to lick it,

But 't would be a darned shame to go pullin' o' triggers
 To extend the aree of abusin' the niggers."
 So they march in percessions, an' git up hooraws,
 An' tramp thru the mud fer the good o' the cause,
 An' think they 're a kind o' fulfillin' the prophecies.
 Wen they 're on'y jest changin' the holders of offices
 Ware A sot afore, B is comf'tably seated,
 One humbug's victor'ous, an' t'other defeated.
 Each honnable doughface gits jest wut he axes,
 An' the people---their annooal soft sodder an' taxes,

Now, to keep unimpaired all these glorious feeturs
 Thet characterize morril an' reasonin' creeturs,
 Thet give every paytriot all he can cram,
 Thet oust the untrustworthy Presidunt Flam,
 And stick honest Presidunt Sham in his place,
 To the manifest gain o' the holl human race,
 An' to some indervidgewals on 't in partickler,
 Who love Public Opinion an' know how to tickle her,—

I say thet a party with great aims likes these Must stick jest ez close ez a hive full o' bees.

I 'm willin' a man should go tollable strong
 Agin wrong in the abstract, fer thet kind o' wrong
 Is ollers unpop'lar an' never gits pitied,
 Because it 's a crime no one never committed ;
 But he mus' n't be hard on partickler sins,
 Coz then he'll be kickin' the people's own shins ;
 On'y look at the Demmercrats, see wut they 've done
 Jest simply by stickin' together like fun ;
 They 've sucked us right into a mis'able war
 Thet no one on airth ain't responsible for ;

They 've run us a hunderd cool millions in debt,
yet);

They talk agin tayriffs, but act fer a high one,
An' so coax all parties to build up their Zion ;
To the people they 're ollers ez slick ez molasses,
An' butter their bread on both sides with The Masses,
Half o' whom they 've persuaded, by way of a joke,
Thet Washinton's mantelpiece fell upon Polk.

Now all o' these blessins the Wigs might enjoy,
Ef they 'd gumption enough the right means to imploy ;*
Fer the silver spoon born in Dermocracy's mouth
Is a kind of a scringe thet they hev to the South ;
Their masters can cuss 'em an' kick 'em an' wale 'em,
An' they notice it less 'an the ass did to Balaam ;
In this way they screw into second-rate offices
Wich the slaveholder thinks 'ould substract too much off his ease ;

The file-leaders, I mean, du, fer they, by their wiles,
Unlike the old viper, grow fat on their files.
Wal, the Wigs hev been tryin' to grab all this prey frum 'em
An' to hook his nice spoon o' good fortin' away
frum 'em,
An' they might ha' succeeded, ez likely ez not
In lickin' the Demmercrats all round the lot, Ef it warn't thet, wile all faithful Wigs were their knees on,

* That was a pithy saying of Persius, and fits our politicians without a wrinkle,—Magister artis, ingenique largitor venter.
—H. W.

Some stuffy old codger would holler out,— “Treason !—
You must keep a sharp eye on a dog thet hez bit you once,

An' I ain't a goin' to cheat my constitooounts,”—
Wen every fool knows thet a man represents
Not the fellers thet sent him, but them on the fence,— Impartially ready to jump either side
An' make the fust use of a turn o' the tide,—
The waiters on Providunce here in the city,
Who compose wut they call a State Centerl Committy.
Constitooounts air henny to help a man in,
But arterwards don't weigh the heft of a pin.
Wy, the people can't all live on Uncle Sam's pus,
So they 've nothin' to du with 't fer better or wus ;
It's the folks thet air kind o' brought up to depend on 't

'Thet hev any consarn in 't, an' thet is the end on 't.

Now here wuz New England ahevin' the honor
Of a chance at the Speakership showered upon her ;—
Do you say,—“ She don't want no more Speakers, but fewer ;

She's hed plenty o' them, wut she wants is a doer ” ?
Fer the matter o' thet, it 's notorious in town
'Thet her own representatives du her quite brown.
But thet 's nothin' to du with it ; wut right hed Palfrey

To mix himself up with fanatical small fry ?
Warn't we gittin' on prime with our hot an' cold blowin',
Acondemn'n' the war wilst we kep' it agoin' ?
We'd assumed with gret skill a commandin' position,
On this side or thet, no one could n't tell wich one,

So, wutever side wipped, we'd a chance at the plunder
 An' could sue fer infringin' our paytented thunder ;
 We were ready to vote fer whoever wuz eligible,
 Ef on all pints at issoo he'd stay unintelligible.
 Wal, sposin' we hed to gulp down our perfessions,
 We were ready to come out next mornin' with fresh ones ;

Besides, ef we did, 't was our business alone,
 Fer could n't we du wut we would with our own ?
 An' ef a man can, wen pervisions hev riz so,
 Eat up his own words, it's a marcy it is so.

Wy, these chaps frum the North, with back-bones to
 'em, darn 'em,
 'Ould be wuth more 'an Gennle Tom Thumb is to Barnum ;

Ther's enough thet to office on this very plan grow,
 By exhibitin' how very small a man can grow ;
 But an M. C. frum here ollers hastens to state he Belongs to the order called invertebraty,
 Wence some gret filologists judge primy fashy
 Thet M. C. is M. T. by paronomashy ;
 An' these few exceptions air loosus naytury
 Folks 'ould put down their quarters to stare at, like fury.

It's no use to open the door o' success,
 Ef a member can bolt so fer nothin' or less ;
 Wy, all o' them grand constitootional pillers
 Our four fathers fetched with 'em over the billers,
 Them pillers the people so soundly hev slept on,
 Wile to slav'ry, invasion, an' debt they were swept on,
 Wile our Destiny higher an' higher kep' mountin',

(Though I guess folks 'll stare wen she hend's her account in,)

Ef members in this way go kickin' agin 'em,
They wunt hev so much ez a feather left in 'em.

An', ez fer this Palfrey,* we thought wen we'd gut him in,

He'd go kindly in wutever harness we put him in ;
Supposin' we did know thet he wuz a peace man ?

Doos he think he can be Uncle Samwell's policeman,

An' wen Sam gits tipsy an' kicks up a riot,

Lead him off to the lockup to snooze till he 's quiet ?

Wy, the war is a war thet true paytriots can bear, ef

It leads to the fat promised land of a tayriff ;

We don't go an' fight it, nor ain't to be driv on,

Nor Demmercrats nuther, thet hev wut to live on ;

Ef it ain't jest the thing thet 's well pleasin' to God,

It makes us thought highly on elsewhere abroad ;

The Rooshian black eagle looks blue in his eerie

An' shakes both his heads wen he hears o' Monteery ;

In the Tower Victory sets, all of a fluster,

An' reads, with locked doors, how we won Cherry Buster ;

An' old Philip Lewis—thet come an' kep' school here

Fer the mere sake o' scorin' his ryalist ruler

On the tenderest part of our kings in futuro—

. Hides his crown underneath an old shut in his bureau,

Breaks off in his brags to a suckle o' merry kings,

How he often hed hided young native Amerrikins,

*There is truth yet in this of Juvenal,—

“Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.”

An', turnin' quite faint in the midst of his fooleries, Sneaks down stairs to bolt the front door o' the Tool-eries.*

You say,—“ We 'd ha' scared 'em by growin' in peace,
A plaguy sight more then by bobberies like these ” ?
Who is it dares say thet “ our naytional eagle
Wunt much longer be classed with the birds thet air regal,
Coz theirn be hooked beaks, an' she, arter this slaughter,
'll bring back a bill ten times longer 'n she oug't to ? ”
Wut 's your name ? Come, I see ye, you up-country feller,

You 've put me out severil times with your beller ;
Out with it ! Wut ? Biglow ? I say nothin' furdur,
Thet feller would like nothin' better 'n a murder ;
He 's a traiter, blasphemmer, an' wut ruther worse is,
He puts all his ath'ism in drefle bad verses ;

* Jortin is willing to allow of other miracles besides those recorded in Holy Writ, and why not of other prophecies ? It is granting too much to Satan to suppose him, as divers of the learned have done, the inspirer of the ancient oracles. Wiser, I esteem it, to give chance the credit of the successful ones. What is said here of Louis Philippe was verified in some of its minute particulars within a few months' time. Enough to have made the fortune of Delphi or Hammon, and no thanks to Beelzebub neither ! That of Seneca in Medea will suit here :—

“ Rapida fortuna ac levis, Præcepsque regno eripuit, exsilio dedit.”

Let us allow, even to richly deserved misfortune, our com-miseration, and be not over-hasty meanwhile in our censure of the French people, left for the first time to govern themselves, remembering that wise sentence of Æschylus,—

* Ἀπας δὲ τραχὺς ὅστις ἂν νεὸν κρατῇ.

II. W.

Society ain't safe till sech monsters air out on it,
Refer to the Post, ef you hev the least doubt on it ;
Wy, he goes agin war, agin indirect taxes,
Agin sellin' wild lands 'cept to settlers with axes,
Agin holdin' o' slaves, though he knows it 's the corner
Our libbaty rests on, the mis'able scorner !
In short, he would wholly upset with his ravages
All thet keeps us above the brute critters an' savages,
An' pitch into all kinds o' briles an' confusions
The holl of our civilized, free institutions ;
He writes fer thet rather unsafe print, the Courier,
An' likely ez not hez a squintin' to Foorier ;
I 'll be —, thet is, I mean I 'll be blest,
Ef I hark to a word frum so noted a pest ;
I shan't talk with him, my religion 's too fervent.—
Good mornin', my friends, I 'm your most humble servant.

[Into the question, whether the ability to express ourselves in articulate language has been productive of more good or evil, I shall not here enter at large. The two faculties of speech and of speech-making are wholly diverse in their natures. By the first we make ourselves intelligible, by the last unintelligible, to our fellows. It has not seldom occurred to me (noting how in our national legislature every thing runs to talk, as lettuces, if the season or the soil be unpropitious, shoot up lankly to seed, instead of forming handsome heads) that Babel was the first Congress, the earliest mill erected for the manufacture of gabble. In these days, what with Town Meetings, School Committees, Boards (lumber) of one kind and another, Congresses, Parliaments, Diets, Indian Councils, Palavers, and the like, there is scarce a village which has not its factories of this description driven by (milk-and-) water power. I cannot conceive the confusion of tongues to have been the curse of Babel, since I esteem my ignorance of other languages as a kind of Martello-tower, in which I am safe from the furious bombardments of foreign garrulity. For this reason I have ever preferred the study of the dead languages, those primitive formations being Ararats upon whose silent peaks I sit secure and watch this new deluge without fear, though it rain figures (simulacra, semblances) of speech forty days and nights together, as it not uncommonly happens. Thus is my coat, as it were, without buttons by which any but a vernacular wild bore can seize me. Is it not possible that the Shakers may intend to convey a quiet reproof and hint, in fastening their outer garments with hooks and eyes?

This reflection concerning Babel, which I find in no Commentary, was first thrown upon my mind when an excellent deacon of my congregation (being infected with the Second Advent delusion) assured me that he had received a first instalment of the gift of tongues as a small earnest of larger possessions in the like kind to follow. For, of a truth, I could not reconcile it with my ideas of the Divine justice and mercy that the single wall which protected people of other languages from the incursions of this otherwise well-meaning propagandist should be broken down.

In reading Congressional debates, I have fancied, that, after the subsidence of those painful buzzings in the brain which result from such exercises, I detected a slender residuum of valuable information. I made the discovery that nothing takes longer in the saying than any thing else, for, as ex nihilo nihil fit, so from one polypus nothing any number of similar ones may be produced. I would recommend to the attention of vivâ voce debaters and controversialists the admirable example of the monk Copres, who, in the fourth century, stood for half an hour in the midst of a great fire, and thereby silenced a Manichæan antagonist who had less of the salamander in him. As for those who quarrel in print, I have no concern with them here, since the eyelids are a Divinely-granted shield against all such. Moreover, I have observed in many modern books that the printed portion is becoming gradually smaller, and the number of blank or fly-leaves (as they are called) greater. Should this fortunate tendency of literature continue, books will grow more valuable from year to year, and the whole Serbonian bog yield to the advances of firm arable land.

I have wondered, in the Representatives' Chamber of our own Commonwealth, to mark how little impression seemed to be produced by that emblematic fish suspended over the heads of the members. Our wiser ancestors, no doubt, hung it there as being the animal which the Pythagoreans revered for its silence, and which certainly in that particular does not so well merit the epithet cold-blooded, by which naturalists distinguish it, as certain bipeds, afflicted with ditch-water on the brain, who take occasion to tap themselves in Fanueil Halls, meeting-houses, and other places of public resort.—H. THE DEBATE IN THE SENNIT.

SOT TO A NUSRY RHYME.

THE incident which gave rise to the debate satirized in the following verses was the unsuccessful attempt of Drayton and Sayres to give freedom to seventy men and women, fellow-beings and fellow-Christians. Had Tripoli, instead of Washington, been the scene of this undertaking, the unhappy leaders in it would have been as secure of the theoretic as they now are of the practical part of martyrdom. I question whether the Dey of Tripoli is blessed with a District Attorney so benighted as ours at the seat of government. Very fitly is he named Key, who would allow himself to be made the instrument of locking the door of hope against sufferers in such a cause. Not all the waters of the ocean can cleanse the vile smutch of the jailer's fingers from off that little Key. Ahenea clavis, a brazen Key indeed !

Mr. Calhoun, who is made the chief speaker in this burlesque, seems to think that the light of the nineteenth century is to be put out as soon as he tinkles his little cow-bell curfew. Whenever slavery is touched, he sets up his scare-crow of dissolving the Union. This may do for the North, but I should conjecture that something more than a pumpkin-lantern is required to scare manifest and irretrievable Destiny out of her path. Mr. Calhoun cannot let go the apron-string of the Past. The Past is a good nurse, but we must be weaned from her sooner or later, even though, like Plotinus, we should run home from school to ask the breast, after we are tolerably well-grown youths. It will not do for us to hide our faces in her lap, whenever the strange Future holds out her arms and asks us to come to her.

But we are all alike. We have all heard it said, often enough, that little boys must not play with fire; and yet, if the matches be taken away from us and put out of reach upon the shelf, we must needs get into our little corner, and scowl and stamp and threaten the dire revenge of going to bed without our supper. The world shall stop till we get our dangerous plaything again. Dame Earth, meanwhile, who has more than enough household matters to mind, goes bustling hither and thither as a hiss or a sputter tells her that this or that kettle of hers is boiling over, and before bedtime we are glad to eat our porridge cold, and gulp down our dignity along with it.

Mr. Calhoun has somehow acquired the name of a great statesman, and, if it be great statesmanship to put lance in rest and run a tilt at the Spirit of the Age with the certainty of being next moment hurled neck and heels into the dust amid universal laughter, he deserves the title. He is the Sir Kay of our modern chivalry. He should remember the old Scandinavian mythus. Thor was the strongest of gods, but he could not wrestle with Time, nor so much as lift up a fold of the great snake which knit the universe together; and when he smote the Earth, though with his terrible mallet, it was but as if a leaf had fallen. Yet all the while it seemed to Thor that he had only been wrestling with an old woman, striving to lift a cat, and striking a stupid giant on the head.

And in old times, doubtless, the giants were stupid, and there was no better sport for the Sir Launcelots and Sir Gawains than to go about cutting off their great blundering heads with enchanted swords. But things have wonderfully changed. It is the giants, nowadays, that have the science and the intelligence, while the chivalrous Don Quixotes of Conservatism still cumber themselves with the clumsy armor of a bygone age. On whirls the restless globe through unsounded time, with its cities and its silences, its births and funerals, half light, half shade, but never wholly dark, and sure to swing round into the happy morning at last. With an involuntary smile, one sees Mr. Calhoun letting slip his pack-thread cable with a crooked pin at the end of it to anchor South Carolina upon the bank and shoal of the Past.—H. W.]

“HERE we stan’ on the Constitution, by thunder!

It’s a fact o’ wich ther’s bushils o’ proofs;

Fer how could we trample on ’t so, I wonder,

.. Ef ’t worn’t thet it’s ollers under our hoofs?”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;
 “ Human rights hain’t no more
 Right to come on this floor,
No more ’n the man in the moon,” sez he.

“ The North hain’t no kind o’ bisness with nothin’,
An’ you ’ve no idee how much bother it saves ;
We ain’t none riled by their frettin’ an’ frothin’,
We ’re used to layin’ the string on our slaves,”
Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—
 Sez Mister Foote,
 “ I should like to shoot
The holl gang, by the gret horn spoon ! ” sez he.

“ Freedom’s Keystone is Slavery, thet ther ’s no doubt on,
It’s sutthin’ thet’s—wha’ d’ ye call it ?—divine,—
An’ the slaves thet we ollers make the most out on Air them north o’ Mason an’ Dixon’s line,”
Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—
 “ Fer all thet,” sez Mangum,
 “ ’T would be better to hang ’em,
An’ so git red on ’em soon,” sez he.

“ The mass ough’ to labor an’ we lay on soffies,
Thet’s the reason I want to spread Freedom’s aree ;
It puts all the cunninest on us in office,
An’ reclises our Maker’s orig’nal idee,”
Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—
 “ Thet’s ez plain,” sez Cass,
 “ Ez thet some one’s an ass,
It’s ez clear ez the sun is at noon,” sez he.

“ Now don’t go to say I ’m the friend of oppression,
But keep all your spare breath fer coolin’ your broth,
Fer I ollers hev strove (at least thet ’s my impression)
To make cussed free with the rights o’ the North,”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—

“ Yes,” sez Davis o’ Miss.,

“ The perfection o’ bliss

Is in skinnin’ thet same old coon,” sez he.

“ Slavery ’s a thing thet depends on complexion,
It ’s God’s law thet fetters on black skins don’t chafe ;
Ef brains wuz to settle it (horrid reflection !)

Wich of our onnable body ’d be safe ? ”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—

Sez Mister Hannegan,

Afore he began agin,

“ Thet exception is quite oppertoan,” sez he.

“ Gen’le Cass, Sir, you need n’t be twitchin’ your collar,

Your merit ’s quite clear by the dut on your knees,
At the North we don’t make no distinctions o’ color ;
You can all take a lick at our shoes wen you please,”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—

Sez Mister Jarnagin,

“ They want hev to larn agin,

They all on ’em know the old toon,” sez he.

“ The slavery question ain’t no ways bewilderin’.

North an’ South hev one int’rest, it ’s plain to a glance ;
No’thern men, like us patriarchs, don’t sell their children,

But they du sell themselves, ef they git a good chance,”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—

Sez Atherton here,

“ This is gittin’ severe,

I wish I could dive like a loon,” sez he.

“ It’ll break up the Union, this talk about freedom,

An’ your fact’ry gals (soon ez wesplit) ’ll make head

An’ gittin’ some Miss chief or other to lead ’em,

’ll go to work raisin’ promiscoous Ned,”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—

“ Yes, the North,” sez Colquitt,

“ Ef we Southerners all quit,

Would go down like a busted balloon,” sez he.

“ Jest look wut is doin’, wut annyky ’s brewin’

In the beautiful clime o’ the olive an’ vine,

All the wise aristoxys is tumblin’ to ruin,

An’ the sankylots drorin’ an’ drinkin’ their wine,”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—

“ Yes,” sez Johnson, “ in France

They ’re beginnin’ to dance

Beelzebub’s own rigadoon,” sez he.

“ The South’s safe enough, it don’t feel a mite skeery,

Our slaves in their darkness an’ dut air tu blest

Not to welcome with proud hallylugers the ery

Wen our eagle kicks yourn from the naytional nest,”

Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—

“ O,” sez Westcott o’ Florida,

“ Wut treason is horrid

Then our priv’leges tryin’ to proon ?” sez he.

Stick their nose in our bizness, we git so darned riled ;

We think its our dooty to give pooty sharp hints,
Thet the last crumb of Edin on airth shan't be spiled,"
Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he ;—
" Ah," sez Dixon H. Lewis,
" It perfectly true is Thet slavery's airth 's grettest boon," sez he.

[It was said of old time, that riches have wings ; and though this be not applicable in a literal strictness to the wealth of our patriarchal brethren of the South, yet it is clear that their possessions have legs, and an unaccountable propensity for using them in a northerly direction. I marvel that the grand jury of Washington did not find a true bill against the North Star for aiding and abetting Drayton and Sayres. It would have been quite of a piece with the intelligence displayed by the South on other questions connected with slavery. I think that no ship of state was ever freighted with a more veritable Jonah than this same domestic institution of ours. Mephistopheles himself could not feign so bitterly, so satirically sad a sight as this of three millions of human beings crushed beyond help or hope by this one mighty argument,—Our fathers knew no better! Nevertheless, it is the unavoidable destiny of Jonahs to be cast overboard sooner or later. Or shall we try the experiment of hiding our Jonah in a safe place, that none may lay hands on him to make jetsam of him? Let us, then, with equal forethought and wisdom, lash ourselves to the anchor. and await, in pious confidence, the certain result. Perhaps our suspicious passenger is no Jonah after all, being black. For it is well known that a superintending Providence made a kind of sandwich of Ham and his descendants, to be devoured by the Caucasian race.

In God's name, let all, who hear nearer and nearer the hungry moan of the storm and the growl of the breakers, speak out! But, alas! we have no right to interfere. If a man pluck an apple of mine, he shall be in danger of the justice; but if he steal my brother I must be silent. Who says this? Our Constitution, consecrated by the callous snetude of sixty years, and grasped in triumphant argument in the left hand of him whose right hand clutches the clotted slave-whip. Justice, venerable with the undethronable majesty of countless æons, says,—SPEAK! The Past, wise with the sorrows and desolations of ages, from amid her shattered fanes and wolf-housing palaces, echoes,—SPEAK! Nature, through her thousand trumpets of freedom, her stars, her sunrises, her seas, her winds, her cataracts, her mountains blue with cloudy pines, blows jubilant encouragement, and cries,—SPEAK! From the soul's trembling abysses the still, small voice not vaguely murmurs,—SPEAK! But alas! the Constitution and the Honorable Mr. Bagowind, M. C., say,—BE DUMB!

It occurs to me to suggest, as a topic of inquiry in this connection, whether, on that momentous occasion when the goats and the sheep shall be parted, the Constitution and the Honorable Mr. Bagowind, M. C., will be expected to take their places on the left as our hircine vicars.

*Quid sum miser tunc dicturus?
Quem patronum rogaturus?*

There is a point where toleration sinks into sheer base-ness and poltroonery. The toleration of the worst leads us to look on what is barely better as good enough and to worship what is only moderately good. Woe to that man, or that nation, to whom mediocrity has become an ideal!

Has our experiment of self-government succeeded, if it barely manage to rub and go? Here, now, is a piece of barbarism which Christ and the nineteenth century say shall cease, and which Messrs. Smith, Brown, and others say shall not cease. I would by no means deny the eminent respectability of these gentlemen, but I confess, that, in such a wrestling-match, I cannot help having my fears for them.

Discite justitiam, moniti, et non temnere divos.

No. VI.

THE PIOUS EDITOR'S CREED.

“Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel.” Since the Sabbath on which this discourse was delivered, the editor of the “Jaalam Independent Blunderbuss” has unaccountably absented himself from our house of worship.

“I know of no so responsible position as that of the public journalist. The editor of our day bears the same relation to his time that the clerk bore to the age before the invention of printing. Indeed, the position which he holds is that which the clergyman should hold even now. But the clergyman chooses to walk off to the extreme edge of the world, and to throw such seed as he has clear over into that darkness which he calls the Next Life. As if next did not mean nearest, and as if any life were nearer than that immediately present one which boils and eddies all around him at the caucus, the ratification meeting, and the polls! Who taught him to exhort men to prepare for eternity, as for some future era of which the present forms no integral part? The furrow which Time is even now turning runs through the Everlasting, and in that must he plant, or nowhere. Yet he would fain believe and teach that we are going to have more of eternity than we have now. This going of his is like that of the auctioneer, on which gone follows before we have made up our minds to bid,—in which manner, not three months back, I lost an excellent copy of Chappelow on Job. So it has come to pass that the preacher, instead of being a living force, has faded into an emblematic figure at christenings, weddings, and funerals. Or, if he exercise any other function, it is as keeper and feeder of certain theologic dogmas, which, when occasion offers, he unkennels with a staboy! “to bark and bite as ’t is their nature to,” whence that reproach of odium theologicum has arisen.

“Meanwhile, see what a pulpit the editor mounts daily, sometimes with a congregation of fifty thousand within reach of his voice, and never so much as a nodder, even, among them! And from what a Bible can he choose his text,—a Bible which needs no translation, and which no priestcraft can shut and clasp from the laity,—the open volume of the world, upon which, with a pen of sunshine or destroying fire, the inspired Present is even now writing the annals of God! Methinks the editor who should understand his calling, and be equal thereto, would truly deserve that title of ποιητὴν λαῶν, which Homer bestows upon princes. He would be the Moses of our nineteenth century, and whereas the old Sinai, silent now, is but a common mountain stared at by the elegant tourist and crawled over by the hammering geologist, he must find his tables of the new law here among factories and cities in this Wilderness of Sin (Numbers xxxiii. 12), called Progress of Civilization; and be the captain of our Exodus into the Canaan of a truer social order.

“Nevertheless, our editor will not come so far within even the shadow of Sinai as Mahomet did, but chooses rather to construe Moses by Joe Smith. He takes up the crook, not that the sheep may be fed, but that he may never want a warm woollen suit and a joint of mutton.

Immemor, O, fidei pecorumque oblite tuorum!

For which reason I would derive the name editor not so much from edo, to publish, as from edo, to eat, that being the peculiar profession to which he esteems himself called. He blows up the flames of political discord for no other occasion than that he may thereby handily boil his own pot. I believe there are two thousand of these mutton-loving shepherds in the United States, and of these, how many have even the dimmest perception of their immense power, and the duties consequent thereon? Here and there, haply, one. Nine hundred and ninety-nine labor to impress upon the people the great principles of Tweedledum, and other nine hundred and ninety-nine preach with equal earnestness the gospel according to Tweedledee.”—H. W.]

I DU believe in Freedom's cause,
 Ez fur away ez Paris is ;
 I love to see her stick her claws
 In them infarnal Pharisees ;
 It 's wal enough agin a king
 To dror resolves an' triggers,—
 But libbaty 's a kind o' thing
 Thet don't agree with niggers.

I du believe the people want
A tax on teas an' coffees,
Thet nothin' ain't extravygunt,— Purvidin' I 'm in office ;
Fer I hev loved my country sence
My eye-teeth filled their sockets,
An' Uncle Sam I reverence,
Partic'larly his pockets.

I du believe in any plan
O' levyin' the taxes,
Ez long ez, like a lumberman,
I git jest wut I axes :
I go free-trade thru thick an' thin,
Because it kind o' rouses
The folks to vote,—an' keeps us in Our quiet customhouses.

I du believe it 's wise an' good
To sen' out furrin missions,
Thet is, on sartin understood
An' orthydox conditions ;—
I mean nine thousan' dolls. per ann.,
Nine thousan' more fer outfit,
An' me to recommend a man
The place 'ould jest about fit.

I du believe in special ways
O' prayin' an' convartin' ;
The bread comes back in many days,
An' buttered, tu, fer sartin ;—

I mean in preyin' till one busts
 On wut the party chooses,
 An' in convartin' public trusts
 To every privit uses.

I du believe hard coin the stuff
 Fer 'lectioneers to spout on ;
 The people's ollers soft enough
 To make hard money out on ;
 Dear Uncle Sam pervides fer his,
 An' gives a good-sized junk to all,—
 I don't care how hard money is,
 Ez long ez mine's paid punctooal.

I du believe with all my soul
 In the gret Press's freedom,
 To pint the people to the goal
 An' in the traces lead 'em ;
 Palsied the arm thet forges yokes
 At my fat contracts squintin',
 An' withered be the nose thet pokes
 Inter the gov'ment printin' !

I du believe thet I should give Wut's his'n unto Cæsar,
 Fer it 's by him I move an' live,
 Frum him my bread an' cheese air ;
 I du believe thet all o' me
 Doth bear his souperscription,—
 Will, conscience, honor, honesty,
 An' things o' thet description.

I du believe in prayer an' praise
To him thet hez the grantin'
O' jobs,—in every thin' thet pays,
But most of all in CANTIN' ;
This doth my cup with marcies fill,
This lays all thought o' sin to rest,—
I don't believe in princerple,
But, O, I du in interest.

I du believe in bein' this
Or thet, ez it may happen
One way or t'other hendiest is
To ketch the people nappin' ;
It ain't by princerples nor men
My preudunt course is steadied,—
I scent wich pays the best, an' then Go into it baldheaded.

I du believe thet holdin' slaves
Comes nat'ral tu a Presidunt,
Let 'lone the rowdedow it saves
To hev a wal-broke precedunt ;
Fer any office, small or gret,
I could n't ax with no face,
Without I'd ben, thru dry an' wet,
Th' unrizzest kind o' doughface.

I du believe wutever trash
'll keep the people in blindness,—
Thet we the Mexicuns can thrash
Right inter brotherly kindness,

Thet bombshells, grape, an' powder 'n' ball
Air good-will's strongest magnets,
Thet peace, to make it stick at all,
Must be druv in with bagnets.

In short, I firmly du believe
In Humbug generally,
Fer it's a thing thet I perceive
To hev a solid vally ;
This heth my faithful shepherd ben,
In pasturs sweet heth led me,
An' this 'll keep the people green
To feed ez they hev fed me.

[I subjoin here another passage from my before-mentioned discourse.

“ Wonderful, to him that has eyes to see it rightly, is the newspaper. To me, for example, sitting on the critical front bench of the pit, in my study here in Jaalam, the advent of my weekly journal is as that of a strolling theatre, or rather of a puppet-show, on whose stage, narrow as it is, the tragedy, comedy, and farce of life are played in little. Behold the whole huge earth sent to me hebdomadally in a brown paper wrapper !

“ Hither, to my obscure corner, by wind or steam, on horseback or dromedary-back, in the pouch of the Indian runner, or clicking over the magnetic wires, troop all the famous performers from the four quarters of the globe. Looked at from a point of criticism, tiny puppets they seem all, as the editor sets up his booth upon my desk and officiates as showman. Now I can truly see how little and transitory is life. The earth appears almost as a drop of vinegar, on which the solar microscope of the imagination must be brought to bear in order to make out anything distinctly. That animalcule there, in the pea-jacket, is Louis Philippe, just landed on the coast of England. That other, in the gray surtout and cocked hat, is Napoleon Bonaparte Smith, assuring France that she need apprehend no interference from him in the present alarming juncture. At that spot, where you seem to see a speck of something in motion, is an immense mass meeting. Look sharper, and you will see a mite brandishing his mandibles in an excited manner. That is the great Mr. Soandso, defining his position amid tumultuous and irrepressible cheers. That infinitesimal creature, upon whom some score of others, as minute as he, are gazing in open-mouthed admiration, is a famous philosopher, expounding to a select audience their capacity for the Infinite. That scarce discernible puff of smoke and dust is a revolution. That speck there is a reformer, just arranging the lever with which he is to move the world. And lo, there creeps forward the shadow of a skeleton that blows one breath between its grinning teeth, and all our distinguished actors are whisked off the slippery stage into the dark Beyond.

“Yes, the little show box has its solemn suggestions. Now and then we catch a glimpse of a grim old man, who lays down a scythe and hour-glass in the corner while he shifts the scenes. There, too, in the dim background, a weird shape is ever delving. Sometimes he leans upon his mattock, and gazes, as a coach whirls by, bearing the newly married on their wedding jaunt, or glances carelessly at a babe brought home from christening. Suddenly (for the scene grows larger and larger as we look) a bony hand snatches back a performer in the midst of his part, and him, whom yesterday two infinities (past and future) would not suffice, a handful of dust is enough to cover and silence forever. Nay, we see the same fleshless fingers opening to clutch the showman himself, and guess, not without a shudder, that they are lying in wait for spectators also.

“Think of it : for three dollars a year I buy a season ticket to this great Globe Theatre, for which God would write the dramas (only that we like farces, spectacles, and the tragedies of Apollyon better), whose scene-shifter is Time, and whose curtain is rung down by Death.

“Such thoughts will occur to me sometimes as I am tearing off the wrapper of my newspaper. Then suddenly that otherwise too often vacant sheet becomes invested for me with a strange kind of awe. Look ! deaths and marriages, notices of inventions, discoveries and books, lists of promotions, of killed, wounded, and missing, news of fires, accidents, of sudden wealth and as sudden poverty ;—I hold in my hand the ends of myriad invisible electric conductors, along which tremble the joys, sorrows, wrongs, triumphs, hopes, and despairs of as many men and women everywhere. So that upon that mood of mind which seems to isolate me from mankind as a spectator of their puppet-pranks, another supervenes, in which I feel that I, too, unknown and unheard of, am yet of some import to my fellows. For, through my newspaper here, do not families take pains to send me, an entire stranger, news of a death among them ? Are not here two who would have me know of their marriage ? And, strangest of all, is not this singular person anxious to have me informed that he has received a fresh supply of Dimitry Bruisgins ?

But to none of us does the Present (even if for a moment discerned as such) continue miraculous. We glance carelessly at the sunrise, and get used to Orion and the Pleiades. The wonder wears off, and to-morrow this sheet, in which a vision was let down to me from Heaven, shall be the wrappage to a bar of soap or the platter for a beggar's broken victuals."—H. W.]

A LETTER

FROM A CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY IN ANSWER
TO SUTTIN QUESTIONS PROPOSED BY MR. HOSEA BIG-LOW, INCLOSED IN A NOTE FROM MR. BIGLOW TO S. H.
GAY, ESQ., EDITOR OF THE NATIONAL ANTI-SLAVERY STANDARD.

[CURIOSITY may be said to be the quality which pre-eminently distinguishes and segregates man from the lower animals. As we trace the scale of animated nature downward, we find this faculty of the mind (as it may truly be called) diminished in the savage, and quite extinct in the brute. The first object which civilized man proposes to himself I take to be the finding out whatsoever he can concerning his neighbors. Nihil humanum a me alienum puto ; I am curious about even John Smith. The desire next in strength to this (an opposite pole, indeed, of the same magnet) is that of communicating intelligence.

Men in general may be divided into the inquisitive and the communicative. To the first class belong Peeping Toms, eavesdroppers, navel-contemplating Brahmins, metaphysicians, travelers, Empedocleses, spies, the various societies for promoting Rhinotherism, Columbuses, Yankees, discoverers, and men of science, who present themselves to the mind as so many marks of interrogation wandering up and down the world, or sitting in studies and laboratories. The second class I should again subdivide into four. In the first subdivision I would rank those who have an itch to tell us about themselves,—as keepers of diaries, insignificant persons generally, Montaignes, Horace Walpoles, autobiographers, poets. The second includes those who are anxious to impart information concerning other people,—as historians, barbers, and such. To the third belong those who labor to give us intelligence about nothing at all,—as novelists, political orators, the large majority of authors, preachers, lecturers, and the like. In the fourth come those who are communicative from motives of public benevolence,—as finders of mares'-nests and bringers of ill news. Each of us two-legged fowls without feathers embraces all these subdivisions in himself to a greater or less degree, for none of us so much as lays an egg, or incubates a chalk one, but straightway the whole barnyard shall know it by our cackle or our cluck. Omnibus hoc vitium est. There are different grades in all these classes. One will turn his telescope toward a backyard, another toward Uranus; one will tell you that he dined with Smith, another that he supped with Pl.to. In one particular, all men may be considered as belonging to the first grand division, inasmuch as they all seem equally desirous of discovering the mote in their neighbor's eye.

To one or another of these species every human being may safely be referred. I think it beyond a peradventure that Jonah prosecuted some inquiries into the digestive apparatus of whales, and that Noah sealed up a letter in an empty bottle, that news in regard to him might not be wanting in case of the worst. They had else been super or subter human. I conceive, also, that, as there are certain persons who continually peep and pry at the keyhole of that mysterious door through which, sooner or later, we all make our exits, so there are doubtless ghosts fidgiting and fretting on the other side of it, because they have no means of conveying back to the world the scraps of news they have picked up. For there is an answer ready somewhere to every question, the great law of give and take runs through all nature, and if we see a hook, we may be sure that an eye is waiting for it. I read in every face I meet a standing advertisement of information wanted in regard to A. B., or that the friends of C. D. can hear of him by application to such a one.

It was to gratify the two great passions of asking and answering that epistolary correspondence was first invented. Letters (for by this usurped title epistles are now commonly known) are of several kinds. First, there are those which are not letters at all,—as letters patent, letters dismissory, letters inclosing bills, letters of administration, Pliny's letters, letters of diplomacy, of Cato, of Mentor, of Lords Lyttelton, Chesterfield, and Orrery, of Jacob Behmen, Seneca (whom St. Jerome includes in his list of sacred writers), letters from abroad, from sons in college to their fathers, letters of marque, and letters generally, which are in no wise letters of mark. Second, are real letters, such as those of Gray, Cowper, Walpole, Howel, Lamb, the first letters from children (printed in staggering capitals) Letters from New York, letters of credit, and others, interesting for the sake of the writer or the thing written. I have read also letters from Europe by a gentleman named Pinto, containing some curious gossip, and which I hope to see collected for the benefit of the curious. There are, besides, letters addressed to posterity,—as epitaphs, for example, written for their own monuments, by monarchs, whereby we have lately become possessed of the names of several great conquerors and kings of kings, hitherto unheard of and still unpronounceable, but valuable to the student of the entirely dark ages. The letter which St. Peter sent to King Pepin in the year of grace 755 I would place in a class by itself, as also the letters of candidates, concerning which I shall dilate more fully in a note at the end of the following poem. At present, sat prata biberunt. Only, concerning the shape of letters, they are all either square or oblong, to which general figures, circular letters and round-robins also conform themselves.—H. W.]

DEER SIR its gut to be the fashun now to rite letters to the candid 8s and i wus chose at a publick Meetin in Jaalam to du wut wus nessary fur that town. i writ to 271 ginerals and gut ansers to 209. tha air called candid 8s but I don't see nothin candid about em. this here 1 wich I send wus thought satty's factory. I dunno as it's ushle to print Poscrips, but as all the ansers I got hed the saim, I sposed it wus best. times has gretly changed. Formaly to knock a man into a cocked hat wus to use him up, but now it ony gives him a chance fur the cheef madgustracy.—H. B.

DEAR SIR,—You wish to know my notions
 On sartin pints thet rile the land ;
 There 's nothin' thet my natur so shuns
 Ez bein' mum or underhand ;

I 'm a straight-spoken kind o' creetur
Thet blurts right out wut 's in his head,
An' ef I 've one pecooler feetur,
It is a nose thet wunt be led.

So, to begin at the beginnin',
An' come directly to the pint,
I think the country's underpinnin'
Is some consid'ble out o' jint ;
I ain't agoin' to try your patience
By tellin' who done this or thet,
I don't make no insinooations,
I jest let on I smell a rat.

Thet is, I mean, it seems to me so,
But, ef the public think I 'm wrong,
I wunt deny but wut I be so,—
An', fact, it don't smell very strong ;
My mind 's tu fair to lose its balance
An' say wich party hez most sense ;
There may be folks o' greater talence
Thet can't set stiddier on the fence.

I 'm an eclectic ; ez to choosin'
'Twixt this an' thet, I 'm plaguy lawth ;
I leave a side thet looks like losin',
But (wile there 's doubt) I stick to both ;
I stan' upon the Constitution,
Ez preudent statesmun say, who 've planned
A way to git the most profusion
O' chances ez to ware they 'll stand.

Ez fer the war, I go agin it,—
I mean to say I kind o' du,—

Thet is, I mean thet, bein' in it,
The best way wuz to fight it thru ;
Not but wut abstract war is horrid,
I sign to thet with all my heart,—
But civlyzation doos git forrid
Sometimes upon a powder-cart.

About thet darned Proviso matter
I never hed a grain o' doubt,
Nor I ain't one my sense to scatter
So 's no one could n't pick it out ;
My love fer North an' South is equil,
So I 'll jest answer plump an' frank,
No matter wut may be the sequil,—
Yes, Sir, I am agin a Bank.

Ez to the answerin' o' questions,
I 'm an off ox at bein' druv,
Though I ain't one thet ary test shuns
'll give our folks a helpin' shove ;
Kind o' promiscoous I go it
Fer the holl country, an' the ground
I take, ez nigh ez I can show it,
Is pooty gen'ally all round.

I don't appruve o' givin' pledges ;
You 'd ough' to leave a feller free,
An' not go knockin' out the wedges
To ketch his fingers in the tree ;
Pledges air awfle breachy cattle
Thet preudent farmers don't turn out,—
Ez long 'z the people git their rattle,
Wut is there fer 'm to grout about ?

Ez to the slaves, there's no confusion
 In my idees consarnin' them,—
I think they air an Institution,
 A sort of—yes—yes, jest so,—ahem :
 Do I own any ? Of my merit
 On thet pint you yourself may jedge :
 All is, I never drink no sperit,
 Nor I hain't never signed no pledge.

Ez to my principles, I glory
 In hevin' nothin' o' the sort.
I ain't a Wig, I ain't a Tory,
 I'm jest a candidate, in short ,
 Thet 's fair an' square an' parpendicularer,
 But, ef the Public cares a fig
 To hev me an'thin' in particler,
 Wy, I'm a kind o' peri-wig.

P. S.

Ez we're a sort o' privateerin',
 O' course, you know, it 's sheer an' sheer,
 An' there is sutthin' wuth your hearin'
 I 'll mention in your privit ear ;
 Ef you git me inside the White House,
 Your head with ile I 'll kin' o' 'nint
 By gittin' you inside the Lighthouse
 Down to the eend o' Jaalam Pint.

An' ez the North hez took to brustlin'
 At bein' serouged frum off the roost,
 I 'll tell ye wut 'll save all tusslin'
 An' give our side a harnsome boost,—

Tell 'em thet on the Slavery question
I 'm RIGHT, although to speak I 'm lawth ;
This gives you a safe pint to rest on,
An' leaves me frontin' South by North.

[And now of epistles candidatial, which are of two kinds,—namely, letters of acceptance, and letters definitive of position. Our republic, on the eve of an election, may safely enough be called a republic of letters. Epistolary composition becomes then an epidemic, which seizes one candidate after another, not seldom cutting short the thread of political life. It has come to such a pass that a party dreads less the attacks of its opponents than a letter from its candidate. Litera scripta manet, and it will go hard if something bad cannot be made of it. General Harrison, it is well understood, was surrounded, during his candidacy, with the cordon sanitaire of a vigilance committee. No prisoner in Spielberg was ever more cautiously deprived of writing materials. The soot was scraped carefully from the chimney-places ; outposts of expert rifle-shooters rendered it sure death for any goose (who came clad in feathers) to approach within a certain limited distance of North Bend ; and all domestic fowls about the premises were reduced to the condition of Plato's original man. By these precautions the General was saved. Parva componere magnis, I remember, that, when party-spirit once ran high among my people, upon occasion of the choice of a new deacon, I, having my preferences, yet not caring too openly to express them, made use of an innocent fraud to bring about that result which I deemed most desirable. My strata-gem was no other than the throwing a copy of the Complete Letter-Writer in the way of the candidate whom I wished to defeat. He caught the infection, and addressed a short note to his constituents, in which the opposite party detected so many and so grave improprieties, (he had modelled it upon the letter of a young lady accepting a proposal of marriage,) that he not only lost his election, but, falling under a suspicion of Sabelianism and I know not what, (the widow Endive assured me that he was a Paralipomenon, to her certain knowledge,) was forced to leave the town. Thus it is that the letter killeth.

The object which candidates propose to themselves in writing is to convey no meaning at all. And here is a quite unsuspected pitfall into which they successively plunge headlong. For it is precisely in such cryptographies that mankind are prone to seek for and find a wonderful amount and variety of significance. Omne ignotum pro mirifico. How do we admire at the antique world striving to crack those oracular nuts from Delphi, Hammon, and elsewhere, in only one of which can I so much as surmise that any kernel had ever lodged; that, namely, wherein Apollo confessed that he was mortal. One Didymus is, moreover, related to have written six thousand books on the single subject of grammar, a topic rendered only more tenebrific by the labors of his successors, and which seems still to possess an attraction for authors in proportion as they can make nothing of it. A singular loadstone for theologians, also, is the Beast in the Apocalypse, whereof, in the course of my studies, I have noted two hundred and three several interpretations, each lethal to all the rest. Non nostrum est tantas componere lites, yet I have myself ventured upon a two hundred and fourth, which I embodied in a discourse preached on occasion of the demise of the late usurper, Napoleon Bonaparte, and which quieted, in a large measure, the minds of my people. It is true that my views on this important point were ardently controverted by Mr. Shearjashub Holden, the then preceptor of our academy, and in other particulars a very deserving and sensible young man, though possessing a somewhat limited knowledge of the Greek tongue. But his heresy struck down no deep root, and, he having been lately removed by the hand of Providence, I had the satisfaction of reaffirming my cherished sentiments in a sermon preached upon the Lord's day immediately succeeding his funeral. This might seem like taking an unfair advantage, did I not add that he had made provision in his last will (being celibate) for the publication of a posthumous tractate in support of his own dangerous opinions.

I know of nothing in our modern times which approaches so nearly to the ancient oracle as the letter of a Presidential candidate. Now, among the Greeks, the eating of beans was strictly forbidden to all such as had it in mind to consult those expert amphibologists, and this same prohibition on the part of Pythagoras to his disciples is understood to imply an abstinence from politics, beans having been used as ballots. That other explication, quod videlicet sensus eo cibo obtundi existimaret, though supported pugnis et calcibus by many of the learned, and not wanting the countenance of Cicero, is confuted by the larger experience of New England. On the whole, I think it safer to apply here the rule of interpretation which now generally obtains in regard to antique cosmogonies, myths, fables, proverbial expressions, and knotty points generally, which is, to find a common-sense meaning, and then select whatever can be imagined the most opposite thereto. In this way we arrive at the conclusion, that the Greeks objected to the questioning of candidates. And very properly, if, as I conceive, the chief point be not to discover what a person in that position is, or what he will do, but whether he can be elected. Vos exemplaria Græca nocturna versate manu, versate diurna.

But, since an imitation of the Greeks in this particular (the asking of questions being one chief privilege of freemen) is hardly to be hoped for, and our candidates will answer, whether they are questioned or not, I would recommend that these ante-electionary dialogues should be carried on by symbols, as were the diplomatic correspondences of the Scythians and Macrobiani, or confined to the language of signs, like the famous interview of Panurge and Goatsnose. A candidate might then convey a suitable reply to all committees of inquiry by closing one eye, or by presenting them with a phial of Egyptian darkness to be speculated upon by their respective constituencies. These answers would be susceptible of whatever retrospective construction the exigencies of the political campaign might seem to demand, and the candidate could take his position on either side of the fence with entire consistency. Or, if letters must be written, profitable use might be made of the Dighton rock hieroglyphic or the cuneiform script, every fresh decipherer of which is enabled to educe a different meaning, whereby a sculptured stone or two supplies us, and will probably continue to supply posterity, with a very vast and various body of authentic history. For even the briefest epistle in the ordinary chirography is dangerous. There is scarce any style so compressed that superfluous words may not be detected in it. A severe critic might curtail that famous brevity of Caesar's by two-thirds, drawing his pen through the supererogatory veni and vidi. Perhaps, after all, the surest footing of hope is to be found in the rapidly increasing tendency to demand less and less of qualification in candidates. Already have statesmanship, experience, and the possession (nay, the profession, even) of principles been rejected as superfluous, and may not the patriot reasonably hope that the ability to write will follow? At present, there may be death in pot-hooks as well as pots, the loop of a letter may suffice for a bow-string, and all the dreadful heresies of Anti-slavery may lurk in a flourish.—H. W.]

No. VIII.

A SECOND LETTER FROM B. SAWIN, Esq.

[IN the following epistle, we behold Mr. Sawin returning, a miles emeritus, to the bosom of his family. Quantum mutatus! The good Father of us all had doubtless intrusted to the keeping of this child of his certain faculties of a constructive kind. He had put in him a share of that vital force, the nicest economy of every minute atom of which is necessary to the perfect development of Humanity. He had given him a brain and heart, and so had equipped his soul with the two strong wings of knowledge and love, whereby it can mount to hang its nest under the eaves of heaven. And this child, so dowered, he had intrusted to the keeping of his vicar, the State. How stands the account of that stewardship? The State, or Society, (call her by what name you will,) had taken no manner of thought of him till she saw him swept out into the street, the pitiful leavings of last night's debauch, with cigar-ends, lemon-parings, tobacco-quids, slops, vile stench, and the whole loathsome next-morning of the barroom,—an own child of the Almighty God! I remember him as he was brought to be christened, a ruddy, rugged babe; and now there he wallows, reeking, seething,—the dead corpse, not of a man, but of a soul,—a putrefying lump, horrible for the life that is in it. Comes the wind of heaven, that good Samaritan, and parts the hair upon his forehead, nor is too nice to kiss those parched, cracked lips, the morning opens upon him her eyes full of pitying sunshine, the sky yearns down to him,—and there he lies fermenting. O sleep! let me not profane thy holy name by calling that stertorous unconsciousness a slumber! By and by comes along the State, God's vicar. Does she say,—“My poor, forlorn foster-child! Behold here a force which I will make dig and plant and build for me?” Not so, but,—“Here is a recruit ready-made to my hand, a piece of destroying energy lying unprofitably idle.” So she claps an ugly gray suit on him, puts a musket in his grasp, and sends him off, with Gubernatorial and other godspeeds, to do duty as a destroyer.

I made one of the crowd at the last Mechanics' Fair, and, with the rest, stood gazing in wonder at a perfect machine, with its soul of fire, its boiler-heart that sent the hot blood pulsing along the iron arteries, and its thews of steel. And while I was admiring the adaptation of means to end, the harmonious involutions of contrivance, and the never-bewildered complexity, I saw a grimed and greasy fellow, the imperious engine's lackey and drudge, whose sole office was to let fall, at intervals, a drop or two of oil upon a certain joint. Then my soul said within me, See there a piece of mechanism to which that other you marvel at is but as the rude first effort of a child,—a force which not merely suffices to set a few wheels in motion, but which can send an impulse all through the infinite future,—a contrivance, not for turning out pins, or stitching buttonholes, but for making Hamlets and Lears. And yet this thing of iron shall be housed, waited on, guarded from rust and dust, and it shall be a crime but so much as to scratch it with a pin ; while the other, with its fire of God in it shall be buffeted hither and thither, and finally sent carefully a thousand miles to be the target for a Mexican cannon-ball. Unthrifty Mother State ! My heart burned within me for pity and indignation, and I renewed this covenant with my own soul,—In aliis mansuetus ero, at, in blasphemis contra Christum, non ita.—H. W.]

I SPOSE you wonder ware I be ; I can't tell, fer the soul
o' me,
Exacly ware I be myself,—meanin' by thet the holl o'
me.
Wen I left hum, I hed two legs, an' they worn't bad ones neither,
(The scaliest trick they ever played wuz bringin' on me hither,)
Now one on 'em 's I dunno ware ;—they thought I wuz adyin',
An' sawed it off because they said 'twuz kin' o' mor-tifyin' ;
I'm willin' to believe it wuz, an' yit I don't see, nuther, Wy one should take to feelin' cheap a minnit sooner 'n
t'other,
Sence both wuz equilly to blame ; but things is ez they be ;
It took on so they took it off, an' thet 's enough fer me :
There 's one good thing, though, to be said about my wooden new one,—
The liquor can't git into it ez 't used to in the true one ;
So it saves drink ; an' then, besides, a feller could n't beg
A gretter blessin' then to hev one ollers sober peg ;

It 's true a chap 's in want o' two fer follerin' a drum,
But all the march I 'm up to now is jest to Kingdom Come.

I 'və lost one eye, but thet 's a loss it 's easy to supply
Out o' the glory thet I 've gut, fer thet is all my eye ;
An' oae is big enough, I guess, by diligently usin' it,
To see all I shall ever git by way o' pay fer losin' it ;
Off'cers, I notice, who git paid fer all our thumps an'
kickins,

Du wal by keepin' single eyes arter the fattest pickins ;
So, ez the eye 's put fairly out, I 'll larn to go without it,

An' not allow myself to be no gret put out about it.
Now, le' me see, thet is n't all ; I used, 'fore leavin'
Jaalam,

To count things on my finger-eends, but sutthin' seems to ail 'em :

Ware 's my left hand ? O, darn it, yes, I recollect wut 's come on 't ;

I hain't no left arm but my right, an' thet 's gut jest a thumb on 't ;

It ain't so hendy ez it wuz to cal'late a sum on 't.

I 've had some ribs broke,—six (I b'lieve),—I hain't kep' no account on 'em ;

Wen pensions git to be the talk, I 'll settle the amount on 'em.

An' now I 'm speakin' about ribs, it kin' o' brings to mind

One thet I could n't never break,—the one I lef' behind ;

Ef you should see her, jest clear out the spout o' your invention

An' pour the longest sweetnin' in about an annoa' pension,
An' kin o' hint (in case, you know, the critter shoud refuse to be Consoled) I ain't so 'xpensive now to keep ez wut I used to be ;
There 's one arm less, ditto one eye, an' then the leg thet 's wooden
Can be took off an' sot away wenever ther' 's a puddin'.

I spose you think I 'm comin' back ez opperlunt ez thunder,
With shiploads o' gold images an' varus sorts o' plunder ;
Wal, 'fore I vullinteed, I thought this country wuz a sort o'
Canaan, a reg'lar Promised Land flowin' with rum an'
water,
Ware propaty growed up like time, without no cultivation,
An' gold wuz dug ez taters be among our Yankee nation,
Ware nateral advantages were pufficly amazin',
Ware every rock there wuz about with precious stuns wuz blazin',
Ware mill-sites filled the country up ez thick ez you could cram 'em,
An' desput rivers run about abeggin' folks to dam 'em ;
Then there were meetinhouses, tu, chockful o' gold an' silver
Thet you could take, an' no one could n't hand ye in no bill fer ;—
Thet 's wut I thought afore I went, thet 's wut them fellers told us

Thet stayed to hum an' speechified an' to the buzzards sold us ;

I thought thet gold mines could be gut cheaper than china asters,

An' see myself acomin' back like sixty Jacob Astors ;
But sech idees soon melted down an' did n't leave a grease-spot ;

I vow my holl sheer o' the spiles would n't come nigh a V spot ;

Although, most anywares we've ben, you need n't break
no locks,

Nor run no kin' o' risks, to fill your pocket full o' rocks.

I guess I mentioned in my last some o' the nateral feeturs

O' this all-fiered buggy hole in th' way o' awfle cree-turs,

But I fergut to name (new things to speak on so abounded)

How one day you'll most die o' thust, an' 'fore the next git drowned.

The clymit seems to me just like a teapot made o' pewter

Our Prudence hed, thet would n't pour (all she could du) to suit her ;

Fust place the leaves 'ould choke the spout, so 's not a drop 'ould drean out,

Then Prude 'ould tip an' tip an' tip, till the holl kit bust clean out,

The kiver-hinge-pin bein' lost, tea-leaves an' tea an' kiver

'ould all come down kerswosh ! ez though the dam broke in a river.

Jest so 't is here ; holl months there ain't a day o' rainy weather,
An' jest ez th' officers 'ould be alayin' heads together
Ez t' how they 'd mix their drink at sech a milingtary deepot,—
'T 'ould pour ez though the lid wuz off the everlastin' teapot.
The cons'quence is, thet I shall take, wen I'm allowed to leave here,
One piece o' propaty along,—an' thet 's the shakin' fever ;
It 's reggilar employment, though, an' thet ain't thought to harm one,
Nor 't ain't so tiresome ez it wuz with t' other leg an'
arm on ;
An' it 's a consolation, tu, although it does n't pay,
To hev it said you're some gret shakes in any kin' o'
way.
'T worn't very long, I tell ye wut, I thought o' fortin-makin',—
One day a reg'lar shiver-de-freeze, an' next ez good ez bakin',—
One day abrin' in the sand, then smoth'rin' in the mashes,—
Git up all sound, be put to bed a mess o' hacks an' smashes.
But then, thinks I, at any rate there 's glory to be hed,—
Thet 's an investment, arter all, that may n't turn out so bad ;
But somehow, wen we 'd fit an' licked, I ollers found the thanks

Gut kin' o' lodged afore they come ez low down ez the ranks ;

The Gin'ra's gut the biggest sheer, the Cunnles next, an' so on,—

We never gut a blasted mite o' glory ez I know on ;
An' spose we hed, I wonder how you're goin' to contrive its

Division so 's to give a piece to twenty thousand privits ;

Ef you should multiply by ten the portion o' the brav'st
one,

You would n't git more 'n half enough to speak of on a grave-stun ;

We git the licks.—we 're jest the grist thet 's put into War's hoppers ;

Leftenants is the lowest grade thet helps pick up the coppers.

It may suit folks thet go agin a body with a soul in 't,
An' ain't contented with a hide without a bagnet hole in 't ;

But glory is a kin' o' thing I shan't pursue no further,
Coz thet 's the off'cers parquisite,—yourn 's on'y jest the murder.

Wal, arter I gin glory up, thinks I at least there 's one Thing in the bills we ain't hed yit, an' thet 's the GLORI-OUS FUN ;

Ef once we git to Mexico, we fairly may presume we
All day an' night shall revel in the halls o' Montezumy.
I 'll tell ye wut my revels wuz, an' see how you would like 'em ;

We never gut inside the hall : the nighest ever I come Wuz stan'in' sentry in the sun (an', fact, it seemed a cent'ry)

A ketchin' smells o' biled an' roast thet come out thru the entry,
An' hearin', ez I sweltered thru my passes an' repasses,
A rat-tat-too o' knives an' forks, a clinkty-clink o' glasses :
I can't tell off the bill o' fare the Gin'ral's hed inside ;
All I know is, thet out o' doors a pair o' soles wuz fried,
An' not a hundred miles away frum ware this child wuz posted,
A Massachusetts citizen wuz baked an' biled an' roasted ;
The on'y thing like revellin' thet ever come to me
Wuz bein' routed out o' sleep by thet darned revelee.

They say the quarrel 's settled now ; fer my part I 've some doubt on 't,
'T 'll take more fish-skin than folks think to take the rile clean out on 't ;
At any rate, I 'm so used up I can't do no more fightin',
'The on'y chance thet 's left to me is politics or writin' ;
Now, ez the people 's gut to hev a milingtary man,
An' I ain't nothin' else jest now, I 've hit upon a plan ;
The can'idatin' line, you know, 'ould suit me to a T,
An' ef I lose, 't wunt hurt my ears to lodge another flea ;
So I 'll set up ez can'idate fer any kin' o' office,
(I mean fer any thet includes good easy-cheers an'
soffies ;
Fer ez to runnin' fer a place ware work 's the time o'
day,
You know thet 's wut I never did,—except the other way ;))
Ef it 's the Presidential cheer fer wich I 'd better run,

Wut two legs anywares about could keep up with my one ?

There ain't no kin' o' quality in can'idates, it 's said,
So useful ez a wooden leg,—except a wooden head ;
There's nothin' ain't so poppylar—(wy, it 's a parfect sin
To think wut Mexico hez paid fer Santy Anny's pin ;)—
Then I hain't gut no principles, an', sence I wuz knee-high,

I never did hev any gret, ez you can testify ;
I'm decided peace-man, tu, an' go agin the war,— Fer now the holl on 't 's gone an' past, wut is there to go for ?

Ef, wile you 're 'lectioneerin' round, some curus chaps should beg

To know my views o' state affairs, jest answer WOODEN LEG !

Ef they ain't settisfied with thet, an' kin' o' pry an' doubt

An' ax fersutthin' deffynit, jest say ONE EYE PUT OUT !
Thet kin' o' talk I guess you 'll find 'll answer to a charm,

An' wen you 're druv tu nigh the wall, hol' up my missin' arm ;

Ef they should nose round fer a pledge, put on a vartooou- look

An' tell 'em thet 's precisely wut I never gin nor—took !

Then you can call me “Timbertoes,”—that's wut the people likes ;

Sutthin' combinin' morril truth with phrases sech ez strikes ;

Some say the people 's fond o' this, or thet, or wut you please,—

I tell ye wut the people want is jest correct idee ;
 " Old Timbertoes," you see, 's a creed it 's safe to be quite bold on,
 Ther 's nothin' in 't the other side can any ways git hold on ;
 It 's a good tangible idee, a sutthin' to embody Thet valooable class o' men who look thru brandy-toddy ;
 It gives a Party Platform, tu, jest level with the mind
 Of all right-thinkin', honest folks thet mean to go it blind ;
 Then there air other good hooraws to dror on ez you need 'em,
 Sech ez the ONE-EYED SLARTERER, the BLOODY BIRDO-FREDUM :
 Them 's wut takes hold o' folks thet think, ez well ez o'
 the masses,
 An' makes you sartin o' the aid o' good men of all classes.

There 's one thing I 'm in doubt about ; in order to be Presidunt,
 It 's absolutely ne'ssary to be a Southern residunt ;
 The Constitution settles thet, an' also thet a feller Must own a nigger o' some sort, jet black, or brown, or yeller.
 Now I hain't no objections agin particklar climes,
 Nor agin ownin' anythin' (except the truth sometimes),
 But, ez I hain't no capital, up there among ye, may be,
 You might raise funds enough fer me to buy a low-priced baby,
 An' then, to suit the No'thern folks, who feel obleeged to say

They hate an' cuss the very thing they vote fer every day,

Say you're assured I go full butt fer Libbaty's diffusion
An' made the purchis on'y jest to spite the Institoo-
tion ;—

But, golly ! there's the currier's hoss upon the pavement pawin' !

I'll be more 'xplicit in my next.

Yourn,

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN.

[We have now a tolerably fair chance of estimating how the balance-sheet stands between our returned volunteer and glory. Supposing the entries to be set down on both sides of the account in fractional parts of one hundred, we shall arrive at something like the following result :—

It would appear that Mr. Sawin found the actual feast curiously the reverse of the bill of fare advertised in Faneuil Hall and other places. His primary object seems to have been the making of his fortune. Quærenda pecunia primum, virtus post nummos. He hoisted sail for Eldorado, and shipwrecked on Point Tribulation. Quid non mortalia pectora cogis auri sacra fames? The speculation has sometimes crossed my mind, in that dreary interval of drought which intervenes between quarterly stipendiary showers, that Providence, by the creation of a money-tree, might have simplified wonderfully the sometimes perplexing problem of human life. We read of bread-trees, the butter for which lies ready churned in Irish bogs. Milk-trees we are assured of in South America, and stout Sir John Hawkins testifies to water-trees in the Canaries. Boot-trees bear abundantly in Lynn and elsewhere; and I have seen, in the entries of the wealthy, hat-trees with a fair show of fruit. A family-tree I once cultivated myself, and found therefrom but a scanty yield, and that quite tasteless and innutritious. Of trees bearing men we are not without examples; as those in the park of Louis the Eleventh of France. Who has forgotten, moreover, that olive-tree, growing in the Athenian's back-garden with its strange uxorious crop, for the general propagation of which, as of a new and precious variety, the philosopher Diogenes, hitherto uninterested in arboriculture, was so zealous? In the sylva of our own Southern States, the females of my family have called my attention to the china-tree. Not to multiply examples, I will barely add to my list the birch-tree, in the smaller branches of which has been implanted so miraculous a virtue for communicating the Latin and

Greek languages, and which may well, therefore, be classed among the trees producing necessities of life,—venerabile donum fatalis virgæ. That money-trees existed in the golden age there want not prevalent reasons for our believing. For does not the old proverb, when it asserts that money does not grow on every bush, imply a fortiori that there were certain bushes which did produce it? Again, there is another ancient saw to the effect that money is the root of all evil. From which two adages it may be safe to infer that theafore-said species of tree first degenerated into a shrub, then absconded underground, and finally, in our iron age, vanished altogether. In favorable exposures it may be conjectured that a specimen or two survived to a great age, as in the garden of the Hesperides; and, indeed, what else could that tree in the Sixth Æneid have been, with a branch whereof the Trojan hero procured admission to a territory, for the entering of which money is a surer passport than to a certain other more profitable (too) foreign kingdom? Whether these speculations of mine have any force in them, or whether they will not rather, by most readers, be deemed impertinent to the matter in hand, is a question which I leave to the determination of an indulgent posterity. That there were, in more primitive and happier times, shops where money was sold,—and that, too, on credit and at a bargain,—I take to be matter of demonstration. For what but a dealer in this article was that Æolus who supplied Ulysses with motive power for his fleet in bags? What that Ericus, king of Sweden, who is said to have kept the winds in his cap? What, in more recent times, those Lapland Nornas who traded in favorable breezes? All which will appear the more clearly when we consider, that, even to this day, raising the wind is proverbial for raising money, and that brokers and banks were invented by the Venetians at a later period.

And now for the improvement of this digression. I find a parallel to Mr. Sawin's fortune in an adventure of my own. For, shortly after I had first broached to myself the before-stated natural-historical and archæological theories, as I was passing, hæc negotia penitus mecum revolvens, through one of the obscure suburbs of our New England metropolis, my eye was attracted by these words upon a signboard,—CHEAP CASH-STORE. Here was at once the confirmation of my speculations, and the substance of my hopes. Here lingered the fragment of a happier past, or stretched out the first tremulous organic filament of a more fortunate future. Thus glowed the distant Mexico to the eyes of Sawin, as he looked through the dirty pane of the recruiting-office window, or speculated from the summit of that mirage-Pisgah which the imps of the bottle are so cunning in raising up. Already had my Alnaschar-fancy (even during that first half-believing glance) expended in various useful directions the funds to be obtained by pledging the manuscript of a proposed volume of discourses. Already did a clock ornament the tower of the Jaalam meeting-house, a gift appropriately, but modestly, commemorated in the parish and town records, both, for now many years, kept by myself. Already had my son Seneca completed his course at the University. Whether, for the moment, we may not be considered as actually lording it over those Baratarias with the viceroyalty of which Hope invests us, and whether we are ever so warmly housed as in our Spanish castles, would afford matter of argument. Enough that I found that signboard to be no other than a bait to the trap of a decayed grocer. Nevertheless, I bought a pound of dates (getting short weight by reason of immense flights of harpy flies who pursued and lighted upon their prey even in the very scales), which purchase I made, not only with an eye to the little ones at home, but also as a figurative reproof of that too frequent habit of my mind, which, forgetting the due order of chronology, will often persuade me that the happy sceptre of Saturn is stretched over this Astræa-forsaken nineteenth century.

Having glanced at the ledger of Glory under the title Savin, B., let us extend our investigations, and discover if that instructive volume does not contain some charges more personally interesting to ourselves. I think we should be more economical of our resources, did we thoroughly appreciate the fact, that, whenever Brother Jonathan seems to be thrusting his hand into his own pocket, he is, in fact, picking ours. I confess that the late muck which the country has been running has materially changed my views as to the best method of raising revenue. If, by means of direct taxation, the bills for every extraordinary outlay were brought under our immediate eye, so that, like thrifty housekeepers, we could see where and how fast the money was going, we should be less likely to commit extravagances. At present, these things are managed in such a hugger-mugger way, that we know not what we pay for; the poor man is charged as much as the rich; and, while we are saving and scrimping at the spigot, the government is drawing off at the bung. If we could know that a part of the money we expend for tea and coffee goes to buy powder and balls, and that it is Mexican blood which makes the clothes on our backs more costly, it would set some of us athinking. During the present fall, I have often pictured to myself a government official entering my study and handing me the following bill:—

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30, 1848.

N. B. Thankful for former favors, U. S. requests a continuance of patronage. Orders executed with neatness and despatch. Terms as low as those of any other contractor for the same kind and style of work.

[I can fancy the official answering my look of horror with,—“ Yes, Sir, it looks like a high charge, Sir ; but in these days slaughtering is slaughtering.” Verily, I would that every one understood that it was ; for it goes about obtaining money under the false pretence of being glory. For me, I have an imagination which plays me uncomfortable tricks. It happens to me sometimes to see a slaughterer on his way home from his day’s work, and forthwith my imagination puts a cocked-hat upon his head and epaulettes upon his shoulders, and sets him up as a candidate for the Presidency. So, also, on a recent public occasion, as the place assigned to the “ Reverend Clergy ” is just behind that of “ Officers of the Army and Navy ” in processions, it was my fortune to be seated at the dinner-table over against one of these respectable persons. He was arrayed as (out of his own profession) only kings, court-officers, and footmen are in Europe, and Indians in America. Now what does my over-officious imagination but set to work upon him, strip him of his gay livery, and present him to me coatless, his trowsers thrust into the tops of a pair of boots thick with clotted blood, and a basket on his arm out of which lolled a gore-smeared axe, thereby destroying my relish for the temporal mercies upon the board before me ?—H. W.]

No. IX.

A THIRD LETTER FROM B. SAWIN, Esq.

[UPON the following letter slender comment will be needful. In what river Selemnus has Mr. Sawin bathed, that he has become so swiftly oblivious of his former loves? From an ardent and (as befits a soldier) confident wooer of that coy bride, the popular favor, we see him subside of a sudden into the (I trust not jilted) Cincinnatus, returning to his plough with a goodly-sized branch of willow in his hand; figuratively returning, however, to a figurative plough, and from no profound affection for that honored implement of husbandry, (for which, indeed, Mr. Sawin never displayed any decided predilection,) but in order to be gracefully summoned therefrom to more congenial labors. It would seem that the character of the ancient Dictator had become part of the recognized stock of our modern political comedy, though, as our term of office extends to a quadrennial length, the parallel is not so minutely exact as could be desired. It is sufficiently so, however, for purposes of scenic representation. An humble cottage (if built of logs, the better) forms the Arcadian background of the stage. This rustic paradise is labelled Ashland, Jaalam, North Bend, Marshfield, Kinderhook, or Bâton Rouge, as occasion demands. Before the door stands a something with one handle (the other painted in proper perspective), which represents, in happy ideal vagueness, the plough. To this the defeated candidate rushes with delirious joy, welcomed as a father by appropriate groups of happy laborers, or from it the successful one is torn with difficulty, sustained alone by a noble sense of public duty. Only I have observed, that, if the scene be laid at Bâton Rouge or Ashland, the laborers are kept carefully in the background, and are heard to shout from behind the scenes in a singular tone resembling ululation, and accompanied by a sound not unlike vigorous clapping. This, however, may be artistically in keeping with the habits of the rustic population of those localities. The precise connection between agricultural pursuits and statesmanship I have not been able, after diligent inquiry, to discover. But, that my investigations may not be barren of all fruit, I will mention one curious statistical fact, which I consider thoroughly established, namely, that no real farmer ever attains practically beyond a seat in General Court, however theoretically qualified for more exalted station.

It is probable that some other prospect has been opened to Mr. Sawin, and that he has not made this great sacrifice without some definite understanding in regard to a seat in the cabinet or a foreign mission. It may be supposed that we of Jaalam were not untouched by a feeling of villatic pride in beholding our townsman occupying so large a space in the public eye. And to me, deeply revolving the qualifications necessary to a candidate in these frugal times, those of Mr. S. seemed peculiarly adapted to a successful campaign. The loss of a leg, an arm, an eye, and four fingers, reduced him so nearly to the condition of a vox et præterea nihil, that I could think of nothing but the loss of his head by which his chance could have been bettered. But since he has chosen to balk our suffrages, we must content ourselves with what we can get, remembering lactucas non esse dandas, dum cardui sufficiant.—H. W.]

I SPOSE you recollect that I explained my gennle views
In the last billet that I writ, 'way down from Veery Cruze,

Jest arter I 'd a kind o' ben spontaneously sot up
To run unanimously fer the Presidential cup ;
O' course it worn't no wish o' mine, 't wuz ferflely dis-tressin,'

But poppiler enthusiasm gut so almighty pressin'
Thet, though like sixty all along I fumed an' fussed an' sorrered.

There did n't seem no ways to stop their bringin' on me
forrerd:

Fact is, they udged the matter so, I could n't help ad-mittin'

The Father o' his Country's shoes no feet but mine
'ould fit in,

Besides the savin' o' the soles fer ages to succeed,
Seen' thet with one wannut foot, a pair 'd be more 'n I need ;

An', tell ye wut, them shoes 'll want a thund'rin' sight
o' patchin',

Ef this ere fashion is to last we 've gut into o' hatchin'
A pair o' second Washintons fer every new election,— Though, fur ez number one 's consarned, I don't make no objection.

I wuz agoin' on to say thet wen at fust I saw
The masses would stick to 't I wuz the Country's father-
'n-law,
(They would ha' hed it Father, but I told 'em 't would n't du,
Coz thet wuz sutthin' of a sort they could n't split in tu,
An' Washinton hed hed the thing laid fairly to his door,
Nor dars n't say 't worn't his'n, much ez sixty year afore,)
But 't ain't no matter ez to thet ; wen I wuz nomer-nated,
'T worn't natur but wut I should feel consid'able elated,
An' wile the hooraw o' the thing wuz kind o' noo an'
fresh,
I thought our ticket would ha' caird the country with a resh.

Sence I 've come hum, though, an' looked round, I think
I seem to find
Strong argimunts ez thick ez fleas to make me change
my mind ;
It's clear to any one whose brain ain't fur gone in a phthisis,
Thet hail Columby's happy land is goin' thru a crisis,
An' 't would n't noways du to hev the people's mind distracted
By bein' all to once by sev'ral pop'lar names attackted ;
'T would save holl haycartloads o' fuss an' three four months o' jaw,
Ef some illustrious paytriot should back out an' withdraw ;

So, ez I ain't a crooked stick, jest like—like ole (I sow,
I dunno ez I know his name)—I 'll go back to my plough.
Now, 't ain't no more 'n is proper 'n' right in sech a sitooation
To hint the course you think 'll be the savin' o' the nation ;
'To funk right out o' p'lit'cal strife ain't thought to be the thing,
Without you deacon off the toon you want your folks should sing ;
So I edvise the noomrous friends thet's in one boat with me
To jest up killock, jam right down their hellum hard a lee,
Haul the sheets taut, an', laying out upon the Suthun tack,
Make fer the safest port they can, wich, I think, is Ole Zack.
Next thing you'll want to know, I spose, wut argi-munts I seem
To see that makes me think this ere 'll be the strongest team ;
Fust place, I've ben consid'ble round in barrooms an' saloons
Agethrin' public sentiment, 'mongst Demmercrats and Coons,
An' 't ain't ve'y offen thet I meet a chap but wut goes in Fer Rough an' Ready, fair an' square, hufs, taller, horns, an' skin ;
I don't deny but wut, fer one, ez fur ez I could see,

I didn't like at fust the Pheladelpy nomernee ;
 I could ha' pintoed to a man thet wuz, I guess, a peg
 Higher than him,—a soger, tu, an' with a wooden leg ;
 But every day with more an' more o' Taylor zeal I 'm burnin',

Seein' wich way the tide thet sets to office is aturnin' ;
 Wy, into Beller's we notched the votes down on three sticks,—

'T wuz Birdofredum one, Cass ought, an' Taylor twenty- six,

An', bein' the on'y canderdate thet wuz upon the ground,

They said 't wuz no more 'n right thet I should pay the drinks all round ;

Ef I'd expected sech a trick, I would n't ha' cut my foot

By goin' an' votin' fer myself like a consumed coot :

It did n't make no diff'rence, though ; I wish I may be cust,

Ef Bellers wuz n't slim enough to say he would n't trust !

Another pint thet influences the minds o' sober jedges
 Is thet the Gin'ral hez n't gut tied hand an' foot with pledges ;

He hez n't told ye wut he is, an' so there ain't no knowin'

But wut he may turn out to be the best there is agoin' ;
 This, at the on'y spot thet pinched, the shoe directly eases,

Coz every one is free to 'xpect percisely wut he pleases :
 I want free-trade ; you don't ; the Gin'ral is n't bound to neither ;—

I vote my way ; you, yourn ; an' both air sooted to a T there.

Ole Rough an' Ready, tu, 's a Wig, but without bein' ultry

(He's like a holsome hayinday, thet 's warm, but is n't sultry) ;

He 's jest wut I should call myself, a kin' o' scratch, ez
't ware,

Thet ain't exactly all a wig nor wholly your own hair ;

I've ben a Wig three weeks myself, jest o' this mod'rate sort,

An' don't find them an' Demmercrats so different ez I thought ;

They both act pooty much alike, an' push an' scrouge an' cus ;

They 're like two pickpockets in league for Uncle Sam-well's pus ;

Each takes a side, an' then they squeeze the old man in between 'em,

Turn all his pockets wrong side out an' quick ez light-nin' clean 'em ;

To nary one on em I 'd trust a secon'-handed rail

No furdur off 'an I could sling a bullock by the tail.

Webster sot matters right in thet air Mashfiel' speech
o' his'n ;—

“Taylor,” sez he, “ain't nary ways the one thet I'd a chizzen,

Nor he ain't fittin' fer the place, an' like ez not he ain't
No more 'n a tough ole bullethead, an' no gret of a saint ;

But then,” sez he, “obsarve my pint, he's jest ez good to vote fer

Ez though the greasin' on him worn't a thing to hire
Choate fer ;

Ain't it ez easy done to drop a ballot in a box

Fer one ez 't is fer t'other, fer the bulldog ez the fox ? ”

It takes a mind like Dannel's, fact, ez big ez all ou' doors,

To find out thet it looks like rain arter it fairly pours ;
I 'gree with him, it ain't so dreffle troublesome to vote

Fer Taylor arter all,—it 's jest to go an' change your coat ;

Wen he 's once greased, you'll swaller him an' never know on 't, scource,

Unless he scratches, goin' down, with them air Gin'ral's spurs.

I've ben a votin' Demmercrat, ez reg'lar ez a clock,

But don't find goin' Taylor gives my narves no gret 'f a shock ;

Truth is, the cutest leadin' Wigs, ever sence fust they found

Wich side the bread gut buttered on, hev kep a edgin'
round ;

They kin' o' slipt the planks frum out th' ole platform
one by one

An' made it gradooally noo, 'fore folks know'd wut wuz done,

Till, fur 'z I know, there ain't an inch thet I could lay my han' on,

But I, or any Demmercrat, feels comf'table to stan' on,
An' ole Wig doctrines act'lly look, their occ'pants bein'
gone,

Lonesome ez staddles on a mash without no hayricks
on.

I spose it 's time now I shall give my thoughts upon the plan,

Thet chipped the shell at Buffalo, o' settin' up ole Van.

I used to vote fer Martin, but, I swan, I 'm clean disgusted,—

He ain't the man thet I can say is fittin' to be trusted ;
He ain't half antislav'ry 'nough, nor I ain't sure, ez some
be,

He 'd go in fer abolishin' the Deestrick o' Columby ;
An', now I come to recollect, it kin' o' makes me sick 'z

A horse, to think o' wut he wuz in eighteen thirty-six.
An' then, another thing ;—I guess, though mebbly I am wrong,

This Buff'lo plaster ain't agoin' to dror almighty strong ;

Some folks, I know, hev gut th' idee thet No'thun dough
'll rise,

Though, 'fore I see it riz an' baked, I would n't trust
my eyes ;

'T will take more emptins, a long chalk, than this noo party 's gut,

To give sech heavy cakes ez them a start, I tell ye wut.

But even ef they caird the day, there would n't be no endurin'

To stand upon a platform with sech critters ez Van Buren ;—

An' his son John, tu, I can't think how thet air chap should dare

To speak ez he doos ; wy, they say he used to cuss an' swear !

I spose he never read the hymn thet tells how down the stairs

A feller with long legs wuz throwed thet would n't say his prayers.

This brings me to another pint : the leaders o' the party Ain't jest sech men ez I can act along with free an heartly ;

They ain't not quite respectable, an' wen a feller's morrils

Don't toe the straightest kin' o' mark, wy, him an' me jest quarrils.

I went to a free soil meetin' once, an' wut d' ye think
I see ?

A feller wuz aspoutin' there thet act'lly come to me,
About two year ago last spring, ez nigh ez I can jedge,
An' axed me ef I didn't want to sign the Temprunce pledge !

He 's one o' them thet goes about an' sez you hed n't ough' to

Drink nothin', mornin', noon, or night, stronger 'an Taunton water.

There 's one rule I 've ben guided by, in settlin' how to vote, ollers,—

I take the side thet is n't took by them consarned tee-totallers.

Ez fer the niggers, I 've ben South, an' thet hez changed
my mind ;

A lazier, more ungrateful set you could n't nowers find.

You know I mentioned in my last thet I should buy a nigger,

Ef I could make a purchase at a pooty mod'rate figger ;

So, ez there 's nothin' in the world I 'm fonder of 'an gunnin',

I closed a bargain finally to take a feller runnin'.

I shou'dered queen's-arm an' stumped out, an' wen I come t' th' swamp,

'T worn't very long afore I gut upon the nest o' Pomp ;

I come acrost a kin' o' hut, an', playin' round the door,

Some little woolly-headed cubs, ez many 'z six or more.

At fust I thought o' firin', but think twice is safest ollers ;

There ain't, thinks I, not one on 'em but 's wuth his twenty dollars,

Or would be, ef I hed 'em back into a Christian land,—

How temptin' all on 'em would look upon an auction-stand!

(Not but wut I hate Slavery in th' abstract, stem to starn,—

I leave it ware our fathers did, a privit State consarn.)

Soon 'z they see me, they yelled an' run, but Pomp wuz out ahoein'

A leetle patch o' corn he hed, or else there ain't no knowin'

He would n't ha' took a pop at me ; but I hed gut the start,

An' wen he looked, I vow he groaned ez though he 'd broke his heart ;

He done it like a wite man, tu, ez nat'ral ez a pictur,

The imp'dunt, pis'nous hypocrite ! wus 'an a boy constrictur.

“ You can't gum me, I tell ye now, an' so you need n't try,

I 'xpect my eye-teeth every mail so jest shet up," sez I.
"Don't go to actin' ugly now, or else I'll jest let strip, You'd best draw kindly, seein' 'z how I've gut ye on the hip ;

Besides, you darned ole fool, it ain't no gret of a disaster

To be benev'lently druv back to a contented master, Ware you hed Christian priv'ledges you don't seem quite aware of,

Or you'd ha' never run away from bein' well took care of ;

Ez fer kin' treatment, wy, he wuz so fond on ye, he said
He'd give a fifty spot right out, to git ye, 'live or dead ;
Wite folks ain't sot by half ez much ; 'member I run away,

Wen I wuz bound to Cap'n Jakes, to Mattysqumscot bay ;
Don' know him, likely ? Spose not ; wal, the mean ole codger went

An' offered—wut reward, think ? Wal, it worn 't no less
'n a cent."

Wal, I jest gut 'em into line, an druv 'em on afore me,
The pis'nous brutes, I 'd no idee o' the ill-will they bore me ;

We walked till som'ers about noon, an' then it grew so hot

I thought it best to camp awile, so I chose out a spot
Jest under a magnoly tree, an' there right down I sot ;
Then I unstrapped my wooden leg, coz it begun to chafe,

An' laid it down jest by my side, supposin' all wuz safe ;
I made my darkies all set down around me in a ring,

An' sot an' kin' o' ciphered up how much the lot would bring ;

But, wile I drinked the peaceful cup of a pure heart an' mind,

(Mixed with some wiskey, now an' then,) Pomp he snaked up behind,

An', creepin, grad'lly close tu, ez quiet ez a mink, Jest grabbed my leg, and then pulled foot, quicker 'an you could wink,

An', come to look, they each on 'em hed gut behin' a tree,

An' Pomp poked out the leg a piece, jest so ez I could see,

An' yelled to me to throw away my pistils an' my gun,
Or else thet they'd cair off the leg an' fairly cut the run.

I vow I didn't b'lieve there wuz a decent alligatur
Thet hed a heart so destitoot o' common human natur ;

However, ez there worn't no help, I finally give in

An, heft my arms away to git my leg safe back agin.

Pomp gethered all the weapins up, an' then he come an' grinned,

He showed his ivory some, I guess, an' sez, " You 're fairly pinned ;

Jest buckle on your leg agin, an' git right up an' come,
'T wun't du fer fammerly men like me to be so long from hum."

At fust I put my foot right down an' swore I would n't budge.

" Jest ez you choose," sez he, quite cool, " either be shot or trudge."

So this black-hearted monster took an' act'lly druv me, back

Along the very feet marks o' my happy mornin' track

An' kep' me pris'ner 'bout six months, an' worked me, tu, like sin,
Till I hed gut his corn an' his Carliny taters in ;
He made me larn him readin', tu, (although the crittur saw
How much it hut my morril sense to act agin the law,)
So 'st he could read a Bible he 'd gut ; an' axed ef I could pint
The North Star out ; but there I put his nose some out o' jint,
Fer I weeled roun' about sou'west, an', lookin' up a bit,
Picked out a middlin' shiny one an' tole him thet wuz it.
Fin'lly, he took me to the door, an', givin' me a kick,
Sez —“ Ef you know wut's best for ye, be off, now, double-quick ;
The winter-time 's a comin' on, an', though I gut ye cheap,
You 're so darned lazy, I don't think you 're hardly wuth your keep ;
Besides, the childrin 's growin' up, an' you ain't jest
the model
I 'd like to hev 'em immertate, an' so you 'd better toddle !”

Now is there any thin' on airth 'll ever prove to me
Thet renegader slaves like him air fit fer bein' free ?
D'you think they 'll suck me in to jine the Buff'lo chaps, an' them
Rank infidels thet go agin the Scriptur'l cus o' Shem ?
Not by a jugfull ! sooner 'n thet, I 'd go thru fire an'
water ;
Wen I hev once made up my mind, a meet'nhus ain't sotter ;

No, not though all the crows thet flies to pick my bones wuz cawin'—

I guess we 're in a Christian land,—

Yourn,

BIRDOFREDUM SAWIN.

It may seem to some that too much space has been usurped by my own private lucubrations, and some may be fain to bring against me that old jest of him who preached all his hearers out of the meeting-house save only the sexton, who, remaining for yet a little space, from a sense of official duty, at last gave out also, and, presenting the keys, humbly requested our preacher to lock the doors, when he should have wholly relieved himself of his testimony. I confess to a satisfaction in the self act of preaching, nor do I esteem a discourse to be wholly thrown away even upon a sleeping or unintelligent auditory. I cannot easily believe that the Gospel of Saint John, which Jacques Cartier ordered to be read in the Latin tongue to the Canadian savages, upon his first meeting with them, fell altogether upon stony ground. For the earnestness of the preacher is a sermon appreciable by dullest intellects and most alien ears. In this wise did Episcopi^{us} convert many to his opinions, who yet understood not the language in which he discoursed. The chief thing is, that the messenger believe that he has an authentic message to deliver. For counterfeit messengers that mode of treatment which Father John de Plano Carpini relates to have prevailed among the Tartars would seem effectual, and, perhaps, deserved enough. For my own part, I may lay claim to so much of the spirit of martyrdom as would have led me to go into banishment with those clergymen whom Alphonso the Sixth of Portugal drove out of his kingdom for refusing to shorten their pulpit eloquence. It is possible, that, having been invited into my brother Biglow's desk, I may have been too little scrupulous in using it for the venting of my own peculiar doctrines to a congregation drawn together in the expectation and with the desire of hearing him.

I am not wholly unconscious of a peculiarity of mental organization which impels me, like the railroad-engine with its train of cars, to run backward for a short distance in order to obtain a fairer start. I may compare myself to one fishing from the rocks when the sea runs high, who, misinterpreting the suction of the undertow for the biting of some larger fish, jerks suddenly, and finds that he has caught bottom, hauling in upon the end of his line a trail of various algæ, among which, nevertheless, the naturalist may haply find somewhat to repay the disappointment of the angler. Yet have I conscientiously endeavored to adapt myself to the impatient temper of the age, daily degenerating more and more from the high standard of our pristine New England. To the catalogue of lost arts I would mournfully add also that of listening to two-hour sermons. Surely we have been abridged into a race of pigmies. For, truly, in those of the old discourses yet subsisting to us in print, the endless spinal column of divisions and subdivisions can be likened to nothing so exactly as to the vertebræ of the saurians, whence the theorist may conjecture a race of Anakim proportionate to the withstanding of these other monsters. I say Anakim rather than Nephelim, because there seem reasons for supposing that the race of those whose heads (though no giants) are constantly enveloped in clouds (which that name imports) will never become extinct. The attempt to vanquish the innumerable heads of one of those aforementioned discourses may supply us with a plausible interpretation of the second labor of Hercules, and his successful experiment with fire affords us a useful precedent.

But while I lament the degeneracy of the age in this regard, I cannot refuse to succumb to its influence. Looking out through my study window, I see Mr. Biglow at a distance busy in gathering his Baldwins, of which, to judge by the number of barrels lying about under the trees, his crop is more abundant than my own,—by which sight I am admonished to turn to those orchards of the mind wherein my labors may be more prospered, and apply myself diligently to the preparation of my next Sabbath's discourse.—H. SET FORTH IN October, the 21st day, in the year '48

G. P. PUTNAM, BROADWAY.

It being the commonest mode of procedure, I premise a few candid remarks

TO THE READER :

This trifle, begun to please only myself and my own private fancy, was laid on the shelf. But some friends, who had seen it, induced me, by dint of saying they liked it, to put it in print. That is, having come to that very conclusion, I consulted them when it could make no confusion. For, (though in the gentlest of ways,) they had hinted it was scarce worth the while, I should doubtless have printed it.

I began it, intending a Fable, a frail, slender thing, rhyme-ywinged, with a sting in its tail. But, by additions and alterings not previously planned,—digressions chance-hatched, like birds' eggs in the sand,—and dawdlings to suit every whimsy's demand, (always freeing the bird which I held in my hand, for the two perched, perhaps out of reach, in the tree,)—it grew by degrees to the size which you see. I was like the old woman that carried the calf, and my neighbors, like hers, no doubt, wonder and laugh, and when, my strained arms with their grown burthen full, I call it my Fable, they call it a bull.

Having scrawled at full gallop (as far as that goes) in a style that is neither good verse nor bad prose, and being a person whom nobody knows, some people will say I am rather more free with my readers than it is becoming to be, that I seem to expect them to wait on my leisure in following wherever I wander at pleasure, that, in short, I take more than a young author's lawful ease, and laugh in a queer way so like Mephistopheles, that the public will doubt, as they grope through my rhythm, if in truth I am making fun at them or with them.

So the excellent Public is hereby assured that the sale of my book is already secured. For there is not a poet throughout the whole land, but will purchase a copy or two out of hand, in the fond expectation of being amused in it, by seeing his betters cut-up and abused in it. Now, I find, by a pretty exact calculation, there are something like ten thousand bards in the nation, of that special variety whom the Review and Magazine critics call lofty and true, and about thirty thousand (this tribe is increasing) of the kinds who are termed full of promise and pleasing. The Public will see by a glance at this schedule, that they cannot expect me to be over-sedulous about courting them, since it seems I have got enough fuel made sure of for boiling my pot.

As for such of our poets as find not their names mentioned once in my pages, with praises or blames, let them SEND IN THEIR CARDS, without further DELAY, to my friend G. P. PUTNAM, Esquire, in Broadway, where a LIST will be kept with the strictest regard to the day and the hour of receiving the card. Then, taking them up as I chance to have time, (that is, if their names can be twisted in rhyme,) I will honestly give each his PROPER POSITION, at the rate of ONE AUTHOR to each NEW EDITION. Thus a PREMIUM is offered sufficiently HIGH (as the magazines say when they tell their best lie) to induce bards to CLUB their resources and buy the balance of every edition, until they have all of them fairly been run through the mill.

One word to such readers (judicious and wise) as read books with something behind the mere eyes, of whom in the country, perhaps, there are two, including myself, gentle reader, and you. All the characters sketched in this slight jeu d'esprit, though, it may be, they seem, here and there, rather free, and drawn from a Mephistophelian stand-point, are meant to be faithful, and that is the grand point, and none but an owl would feel sore at a rub from a jester who tells you, without any subterfuge, that he sits in Diogenes' tub.

A FABLE FOR THE CRITICS.

PHŒBUS, sitting one day in a laurel-tree's shade,
Was reminded of Daphne, of whom it was made,
For the god being one day too warm in his wooing,
She took to the tree to escape his pursuing ;
Be the cause what it might, from his offers she shrunk,
And, Ginevra-like, shut herself up in a trunk ;
And, though 't was a step into which he had driven
 her,
He somehow or other had never forgiven her ;
Her memory he nursed as a kind of a tonic,
Something bitter to chew when he 'd play the Byronic,
And I can't count the obstinate nymphs that he brought over,
By a strange kind of smile he put on when he thought of her.
" My case is like Dido's," he sometimes remark'd,
" When I last saw my love, she was fairly embark'd ;
Let hunters from me take this saw when they need it,
—You 're not always sure of your game when you've tree'd it.
Just conceive such a change taking place in one's mistress !

What romance would be left?—who can flatter or kiss trees?

And for mercy's sake, how could one keep up a dialogue

With a dull wooden thing that will live and will die a log,—

Not to say that the thought would forever intrude
That you've less chance to win her the more she is wood?

Ah! it went to my heart, and the memory still grieves,
To see those loved graces all taking their leaves;
Those charms beyond speech, so enchanting but now,

As they left me forever, each making its bough!
If her tongue had a tang sometimes more than was right,

Her new bark is worse than ten times her old bite."

Now, Daphne,—before she was happily treeified,—

Over all other flowers the lily had deified,

And when she expected the god on a visit,

('T was before he had made his intentions explicit,)

Some buds she arranged with a vast deal of care,

To look as if artlessly twined in her hair,

Where they seemed, as he said, when he paid his addresses,

Like the day breaking through the long night of her tresses;

So, whenever he wished to be quite irresistible,

Like a man with eight trumps in his hand at a whisttable,

(I feared me at first that the rhyme was untwistable, Though I might have lugged in an allusion to Christabel,)—

He would take up a lily, and gloomily look in it,
As I shall at the —, when they cut up my book in it.

Well, here, after all the bad rhyme I 've been spinning,
I 've got back at last to my story's beginning :
Sitting there as I say, in the shade of his mistress,
As dull as a volume of old Chester mysteries,
Or as those puzzling specimens, which, in old histories,
We read of his verses—the Oracles, namely,—

(I wonder the Greeks should have swallowed them tamely,

For one might bet safely whatever he has to risk,
They were laid at his door by some ancient Miss Asterisk,

And so dull that the men who retailed them out doors Got the ill name of “augurs,” because they were bores,)—

First, he mused what the animal substance or herb is
Would induce a moustache, for you know he 's im- berbis ;

Then he shuddered to think how his youthful position

Was assailed by the age of his son the physician ;
At some poems he glanced, had been sent to him lately,

And the metre and sentiment puzzled him greatly ;
“ Mehercle ! I 'd make such proceedings felonious,—
Have they all of them slept in the cave of Trophonius ?
Look well to your seat, 't is like taking an airing
On a corduroy road, and that out of repairing ;
It leads one, 't is true, through the primitive forest,

Grand natural features—but, then, one has no rest ;
You just catch a glimpse of some ravishing distance,
When a jolt puts the whole of it out of existence,— Why not use their ears, if they happen to have any ? ”
—Here the laurel-leaves murmured the name of poor Daphne.

“ O, weep with me, Daphne,” he sighed, “ for you know it ’s

A terrible thing to be pestered with poets ! ”

But, alas, she is dumb, and the proverb holds good,
She never will cry till she ’s out of the wood !

What would n’t I give if I never had known of her ?

’T were a kind of relief had I something to groan over ;

If I had but some letters of hers, now, to toss over,

I might turn for the nonce a Byronic philosopher,

And bewitch all the flats by bemoaning the loss of her.

One needs something tangible though to begin on—

A loom, as it were, for the fancy to spin on ;

What boots all your grist ? it can never be ground

Till the breeze makes the arms of the windmill go round,

(Or, if ’t is a water-mill, alter the metaphor,

And say it won’t stir, save the wheel be well wet afore,

Or lug in some stuff about water “ so dreamily,”—

It is not a metaphor, though, ’t is a simile ;)

A lily, perhaps, would set my mill agoing,

For just at this season, I think, they are blowing,

Here, somebody, fetch one, not very far hence

They ’re in bloom by the score, ’t is but climbing a fence ;

There ’s a poet hard by, who does nothing but fill his Whole garden, from one end to t’ other, with lilies ;

A very good plan, were it not for satiety,
One longs for a weed here and there, for variety ;
Though a weed is no more than a flower in disguise,
Which is seen through at once, if love gives a man eyes.

Now there happened to be among Phœbus's followers,

A gentleman, one of the omnivorous swallows
Who bolt every book that comes out of the press,
Without the least question of larger or less,
Whose stomachs are strong at the expense of their head,—

For reading new books is like eating new bread,
One can bear it at first, but by gradual steps he
Is brought to death's door of a mental dyspepsy.

On a previous stage of existence, our Hero
Had ridden outside, with the glass below zero ;
He had been, 't is a fact you may safely rely on,
Of a very old stock a most eminent scion,—

A stock all fresh quacks their fierce boluses ply on,
Who stretch the new boots Earth 's unwilling to try
on,

Whom humbugs of all shapes and sorts keep their eye
on,

Whose hair 's in the mortar of every new Zion,
Who, when whistles are dear, go directly and buy one,
Who think slavery a crime that we must not say fie
on,

Who hunt, if they e'er hunt at all, with the lion,
(Though they hunt lions also, whenever they spy one,)
Who contrive to make every good fortune a wry one,
And at last choose the hard bed of honor to die on,

Whose pedigree traced to earth's earliest years,
Is longer than any thing else but their ears ;—
In short, he was sent into life with the wrong key,
He unlocked the door, and stept forth a poor donkey.
Though kicked and abused by his bipedal betters,
Yet he filled no mean place in the kingdom of letters ;
Far happier than many a literary hack,
He bore only paper-mill rags on his back ;
(For it makes a vast difference which side the mill
One expends on the paper his labor and skill ;)
So, when his soul waited a new transmigration,
And Destiny balanced 'twixt this and that station,
Not having much time to expend upon bothers,
Remembering he 'd had some connections with authors,
And considering his four legs had grown paralytic,—
She set him on too, and he came forth a critic.

Through his babyhood no kind of pleasure he took
In any amusement but tearing a book ;
For him there was no intermediate stage,
From babyhood up to strait-laced middle age ;
There were years when he did n't wear coat-tails behind,
But a boy he could never be rightly defined ;
Like the Irish Good Folk, though in length scarce a span,
From the womb he came gravely, a little old man ;
While other boys' trousers demanded the toil
Of the motherly fingers on all kinds of soil,
Red, yellow, brown, black, clayey, gravelly, loamy,
He sat in a corner and read Viri Romæ.
He never was known to unbend or to revel once
In base, marbles, hockey, or kick up the devil once ;

He was just one of those who excite the benevolence
Of old prigs who sound the soul's depths with a ledger,

And are on the look out for some young men to "edger-

-cate," as they call it, who won't be too costly,
And who'll afterward take to the ministry mostly ;
Who always wear spectacles, always look bilious,
Always keep on good terms with each materfamilias
Throughout the whole parish, and manage to rear
Ten boys like themselves, on four hundred a year ;
Who, fulfilling in turn the same fearful conditions,
Either preach through their noses, or go upon missions.

In this way our hero got safely to College,
Where he bolted alike both his commons and knowledge ;

A reading-machine, always wound up and going,
He mastered whatever was not worth the knowing,
Appeared in a gown, and a vest of black satin,
To spout such a Gothic oration in Latin,
That Tully could never have made out a word in it, (Though himself was the model the author preferred in it,)

And grasping the parchment which gave him in fee,
All the mystic and so-forths contained in A. B.,
He was launched (life is always compared to a sea,)
With just enough learning, and skill for the using it,
To prove he'd a brain, by forever confusing it.
So worthy Saint Benedict, piously burning
With the holiest zeal against secular learning,
Nesciensque scienter, as writers express it,
Indoctusque sapienter á Româ recessit.

'T would be endless to tell you the things that he knew,
All separate facts, undeniably true,
But with him or each other they'd nothing to do ;
No power of combining, arranging, discerning,
Digested the masses he learned into learning ;
There was one thing in life he had practical knowledge
for,
(And, this you will think, he need scarce go to college for,)
Not a deed would he do, not a word would he utter,
Till he'd weighed its relations to plain bread and butter.
When he left Alma Mater, he practised his wits
In compiling the journals' historical bits,—
Of shops broken open, men falling in fits,
Great fortunes in England bequeathed to poor printers,
And cold spells, the coldest for many past winters,—
Then, rising by industry, knack, and address,
Got notices up for an unbiassed press,
With a mind so well poised, it seemed equally made for Applause or abuse, just which chanced to be paid for ;
From this point his progress was rapid and sure,
To the post of a regular heavy reviewer.

And here I must say, he wrote excellent articles
On the Hebraic points, or the force of Greek particles,
They filled up the space nothing else was prepared for,
And nobody read that which nobody cared for ;
If any old book reached a fiftieth edition,
He could fill forty pages with safe erudition ;
He could gauge the old books by the old set of rules,
And his very old nothings pleased very old fools ;

But give him a new book, fresh out of the heart,
And you put him at sea without compass or chart,—
His blunders aspired to the rank of an art ;
For his lore was engraft, something foreign that grew in him,

Exhausting the sap of the native and true in him,
So that when a man came with a soul that was new in him,

Carving new forms of truth out of Nature's old granite,
New and old at their birth, like Le Verrier's planet,
Which, to get a true judgment, themselves must create

In the soul of their critic the measure and weight,
Being rather themselves a fresh standard of grace,
To compute their own judge, and assign him his place,
Our reviewer would crawl all about it and round it,
And, reporting each circumstance just as he found it,
Without the least malice,—his record would be Profoundly æsthetic as that of a flea,
Which, supping on Wordsworth, should print, for our sakes,

Recollections of nights with the Bard of the Lakes,
Or, borne by an Arab guide, ventured to render a General view of the ruins at Denderah.

As I said, he was never precisely unkind,
The defect in his brain was mere absence of mind ;
If he boasted, 't was simply that he was self-made,
A position which I, for one, never gainsaid,
My respect for my Maker supposing a skill
In his works which our hero would answer but ill ;
And I trust that the mould which he used may be cracked, or he,

Made bold by success, may make broad his phylactery,
And set up a kind of a man-manufactory,
An event which I shudder to think about, seeing That Man is a moral, accountable being.

He meant well enough, but was still in the way,
As a dunce always is, let him be where he may ;
Indeed, they appear to come into existence
To impede other folks with their awkward assistance ;
If you set up a dunce on the very North pole,
All alone with himself, I believe, on my soul,
He 'd manage to get betwixt somebody's shins,
And pitch him down bodily, all in his sins,
To the grave polar bears sitting round on the ice,
All shortening their grace, to be in for a slice ;
Or, if he found nobody else there to pother,
Why, one of his legs would just trip up the other,
For there's nothing we read of in torture's inventions,
Like a well-meaning dunce, with the best of intentions.

A terrible fellow to meet in society,
Not the toast that he buttered was ever so dry at tea ;
There he 'd sit at the table and stir in his sugar, Crouching close for a spring, all the while, like a cougar ;
Be sure of your facts, of your measures and weights,
Of your time—he 's as fond as an Arab of dates ;—
You 'll be telling, perhaps, in your comical way,
Of something you've seen in the course of the day ;
And, just as you 're tapering out the conclusion,
You venture an ill-fated classic allusion,—
The girls have all got their laughs ready, when, whack !
The cougar comes down on your thunderstruck back ;

You had left out a comma,—your Greek 's put in joint,
And pointed at cost of your story's whole point.

In the course of the evening, you venture on certain
Soft speeches to Anne, in the shade of the curtain ;
You tell her your heart can be likened to one flower,
“ And that, oh most charming of women, 's the sunflower,

Which turns ”—here a clear nasal voice, to your terror,
From outside the curtain, says, “ that 's all an error.”
As for him, he's—no matter, he never grew tender,
Sitting after a ball, with his feet on the fender,
Shaping somebody's sweet features out of cigar smoke, (Though he 'd willingly grant you that such doings are smoke ;)

All women he damns with mutabile semper,
And if ever he felt something like love's distemper,
'T was toward a young lady who spoke ancient Mexican,
And assisted her father in making a lexicon ;
Though I recollect hearing him get quite ferocious
About one Mary Clausum, the mistress of Grotius,
Or something of that sort,—but, no more to bore ye.
With character-painting, I 'll turn to my story.

Now, Apollo, who finds it convenient sometimes
To get his court clear of the makers of rhymes,
The genus, I think it is called, irritabile,
Every one of whom thinks himself treated most shab-bily,

And nurses a—what is it ?—immedicabile,
Which keeps him at boiling-point, hot for a quarrel,
As bitter as wormwood, and sourer than sorrel,
If any poor devil but looks at a laurel ;—
Apollo, I say, being sick of their rioting, (Though he sometimes acknowledged their verse had a quieting

Effect after dinner, and seemed to suggest a Retreat to the shrine of a tranquil siesta,)

Kept our Hero at hand, who, by means of a bray,
Which he gave to the life, drove the rabble away ;
And if that would n't do, he was sure to succeed,
If he took his review out and offered to read ;

Or, failing in plans of this milder description,
He would ask for their aid to get up a subscription,
Considering that authorship was n't a rich craft,
To print the " American drama of Witchcraft."

" Stay, I 'll read you a scene,"—but he hardly began,
Ere Apollo shrieked " Help !" and the authors all ran :
And once, when these purgatives acted with less spirit,
And the desperate case asked a remedy desperate,
He drew from his pocket a foolscap epistle,
As calmly as if 't were a nine-barrelled pistol,
And threatened them all with the judgment to come,
Of " A wandering Star's first impressions of Rome."

" Stop ! stop !" with their hands o'er their ears screamed the Muses,

" He may go off and murder himself, if he chooses,
'T was a means self-defence only sanctioned his trying,
'T is mere massacre now that the enemy 's flying ;
If he 's forced to 't again, and we happen to be there,
Give us each a large handkerchief soaked in strong ether."

I called this a " Fable for Critics ;" you think it 's
More like a display of my rhythmical trinkets ;
My plot, like an icicle, 's slender and slippery,
Every moment more slender, and likely to slip awry,

And the reader unwilling in loco desipere,
Is free to jump over as much of my frippery
As he fancies, and, if he's a provident skipper, he May have an Odyssean sway of the gales,
And get safe into port, ere his patience all fails ;
Moreover, although 't is a slender return
For your toil and expense, yet my paper will burn,
And, if you have manfully struggled thus far with
me,

You may e'en twist me up, and just light your cigar
with me :

If too angry for that, you can tear me in pieces,
And my membra disjecta consign to the breezes,
A fate like great Ratzau's, whom one of those bores,
Who befleaded with bad verses poor Louis Quatorze,
Describes, (the first verse somehow ends with victoire,)
As dispersant partout et ses membres et sa gloire ;
Or, if I were over-desirous of earning
A repute among noodles for classical learning,
I could pick you a score of allusions, I wis,
As new as the tests of Didaskalos tis ;
Better still, I could make out a good solid list
From recondite authors who did not exist,—
But that would be naughty : at least, I could twist
Something out of Absyrtus, or turn your inquiries
After Milton's prose metaphor, drawn from Osiris ;—
But, as Cicero says he won't say this or that,
(A fetch, I must say, most transparent and flat,)
After saying whate'er he could possibly think of,—
I simply will state that I pause on the brink of
A mire, ankle-deep, of deliberate confusion,
Made up of old jumbles of classic allusion,
So, when you were thinking yourselves to be pitied,

Just conceive how much harder your teeth you 'd have gritted,
An 't were not for the dulness I 've kindly omitted.

I 'd apologize here for my many digressions,
Were it not that I 'm certain to trip into fresh ones,
('T is so hard to escape if you get in their mesh once ;)
Just reflect, if you please, how 't is said by Horatius,
That Mæonides nods now and then, and, my gracious !
It certainly does look a little bit ominous
When he gets under way with ton d'apameibomenos.
(Here a something occurs which I'll just clap a rhyme to,
And say it myself, ere a Zoilus has time to,—
Any author a nap like Van Winkle's may take,
If he only contrive to keep readers awake,
But he 'll very soon find himself laid on the shelf,
If they fall a nodding when he nods himself.)

Once for all, to return, and to stay, will I, nill I—
When Phœbus expressed his desire for a lily,
Our hero, whose homœopathic sagacity
With an ocean of zeal mixed his drop of capacity,
Set off for the garden as fast as the wind,
(Or, to take a comparison more to my mind,
As a sound politician leaves conscience behind,)
And leaped the low fence, as a party hack jumps
O'er his principles, when something else turns up trumps.

He was gone a long time, and Apollo meanwhile,
Went over some sonnets of his with a file,
For of all compositions, he thought that the sonnet
Best repaid all the toil you expended upon it ;

It should reach with one impulse the end of its course,
 And for one final blow collect all of its force ;
 Not a verse should be salient, but each one should tend

With a wave-like up-gathering to burst at the end ;—
 So, condensing the strength here, there smoothing a wry kink,

He was killing the time, when up walked Mr. — ;
 At a few steps behind him, a small man in glasses',
 Went dodging about, muttering "murderers ! asses !"
 From out of his pocket a paper he 'd take,
 With the proud look of martyrdom tied to its stake,
 And, reading a squib at himself, he 'd say, "Here I see

'Gainst American letters a bloody conspiracy,
 They are all by my personal enemies written ;
 I must post an anonymous letter to Britain,
 And show that this gall is the merest suggestion
 Of spite at my zeal on the Copyright question,
 For, on this side the water, 't is prudent to pull
 O'er the eyes of the public their national wool,
 By accusing of slavish respect to John Bull,
 All American authors who have more or less
 Of that anti-American humbug—success,
 While in private we 're always embracing the knees
 Of some twopenny editor over the seas,
 And licking his critical shoes, for you know 't is
 The whole aim of our lives to get one English 'notice' ;

My American puffs I would willingly burn all,
 (They 're all from one source, monthly, weekly, diurnal) nal)

To get but a kick from a transmarine journal !"

So, culling the gibes of each critical scorner
 As if they were plums, and himself were Jack Horner,
 He came cautiously on, peeping round every corner
 And into each hole where a weasel might pass in,
 Expecting the knife of some critic assassin,
 Who stabs to the heart with a caricature,
 Not so bad as those daubs of the Sun, to be sure,
 Yet done with a dagger-o-type, whose vile portraits
 Disperse all one's good, and condense all one's poor traits.

Apollo looked up, hearing footsteps approaching,
 And slipped out of sight the new rhymes he was broach-
 ing,—

“ Good day, Mr. ——, I 'm happy to meet
 With a scholar so ripe, and a critic so neat,
 Who through Grub-street the soul of a gentleman carries,—

What news from that suburb of London and Paris
 Which latterly makes such shrill claims to monopolize
 The credit of being the New World's metropolis ? ”

“ Why, nothing of consequence, save this attack
 On my friend there, behind, by some pitiful hack,
 Who thinks every national author a poor one,
 That is n't a copy of something that 's foreign,
 And assaults the American Dick—

 “ Nay, 't is clear
 That your Damon there 's fond of a flea in his ear,
 And, if no one else furnished them gratis, on tick
 He would buy some himself, just to hear the old click ;
 Why, I honestly think, if some fool in Japan

Should turn up his nose at the ‘Poems on Man,’
Your friend there by some inward instinct would know
it,
Would get it translated, reprinted, and show it ;
As a man might take off a high stock to exhibit
The autograph round his own neck of the gibbet,
Nor would let it rest so, but fire column after column,
Signed Cato, or Brutus, or something as solemn,
By way of displaying his critical crosses,
And tweaking that poor transatlantic proboscis,
His broadsides resulting (and this there’s no doubt of,)
In successively sinking the craft they’re fired out of.
Now nobody knows when an author is hit,
If he don’t have a public hysterical fit ;
Let him only keep close in his snug garret’s dim ether,
And nobody’d think of his critics—or him either ;
If an author have any least fibre of worth in him,
Abuse would but tickle the organ of mirth in him,
All the critics on earth cannot crush with their ban,
One word that’s in tune with the nature of man.”

“Well, perhaps so ; meanwhile I have brought you a book,
Into which if you’ll just have the goodness to look,
You may feel so delighted, when you have got through it,
As to think it not unworth your while to review it,
And I think I can promise your thoughts, if you do,
A place in the next Democratic Review.”

“The most thankless of gods you must surely have tho’t me,
For this is the forty-fourth copy you’ve brought me,

I have given them away, or at least I have tried,
But I've forty-two left, standing all side by side,
(The man who accepted that one copy, died,)—
From one end of a shelf to the other they reach,
'With the author's respects' neatly written in each.
The publisher, sure, will proclaim a Te Deum,
When he hears of that order the British Museum
Has sent for one set of what books were first printed
In America, little or big,—for 't is hinted
That this is the first truly tangible hope he
Has ever had raised for the sale of a copy.
I've thought very often 't would be a good thing
In all public collections of books, if a wing
Were set off by itself, like the seas from the dry lands,
Marked Literature suited to desolate islands,
And filled with such books as could never be read Save by readers of proofs, forced to do it for bread,—
Such books as one's wrecked on in small countrytaverns,
Such as hermits might mortify over in caverns,
Such as Satan, if printing had then been invented,
As the climax of woe, would to Job have presented,
Such as Crusoe might dip in, although there are few so Outrageously cornered by fate as poor Crusoe;
And since the philanthropists just now are banging
And gibbeting all who're in favor of hanging,— (Though Cheever has proved that the Bible and Altar
Were let down from Heaven at the end of a halter,
And that vital religion would dull and grow callous.
Unrefreshed, now and then, with a sniff of the gallows,)—

And folks are beginning to think it looks odd,
 To choke a poor scamp for the glory of God ;
 And that He who esteems the Virginia reel
 A bait to draw saints from their spiritual weal,
 And regards the quadrille as a far greater knavery
 Than crushing His African children with slavery,—
 Since all who take part in a waltz or cotillion
 Are mounted for hell on the Devil's own pillion,
 Who, as every true orthodox Christian well knows, Approaches the heart through the door of the toes,—
 That He, I was saying, whose judgments are stored
 For such as take steps in despite of his word,
 Should look with delight on the agonized prancing
 Of a wretch who has not the least ground for his dancing,
 While the State, standing by, sings a verse from the Psalter
 About offering to God on his favorite halter,
 And, when the legs droop from their twitching divergence,
 Sells the clothes to the Jew, and the corpse to the surgeons ;—

Now, instead of all this, I think I can direct you all
 To a criminal code both humane and effectual ;—
 I propose to shut up every doer of wrong
 With these desperate books, for such terms, short or long,
 As by statute in such cases made and provided,
 Shall be by your wise legislators decided

Thus :—Let murderers be shut, to grow wiser and cooler,

At hard labor for life on the works of Miss —— ;

Petty thieves, kept from flagranter crimes by their fears,

Shall peruse Yankee Doodle a blank term of years,—

That American Punch, like the English, no doubt—

Just the sugar and lemons and spirit left out.

“ But stay, here comes Tityrus Griswold, and leads on The flocks whom he first plucks alive, and then feeds
on,—

A loud cackling swarm, in whose feathers warmdrest,

He goes for as perfect a—swan, as the rest.

“ There comes Emerson first, whose rich words, every one,
Are like gold nails in temples to hang trophies on,
Whose prose is grand verse, while his verse, the Lord knows,

Is some of it pr—— No, 't is not even prose ;

I'm speaking of metres ; some poems have welled

From those rare depths of soul that have ne'er been excelled ;

They're not epics, but that does n't matter a pin,

In creating, the only hard thing's to begin ;

A grass-blade's no easier to make than an oak,

If you've once found the way, you've achieved the grand stroke ;

In the worst of his poems are mines of rich matter,

But thrown in a heap with a crush and a clatter ;

Now it is not one thing nor another alone

Makes a poem, but rather the general tone,
 The something pervading, uniting the whole,
 The before unconceived, unconceivable soul,
 So that just in removing this trifle or that, you
 Take away, as it were, a chief limb of the statue ;
 Roots, wood, bark, and leaves, singly perfect may be,
 But, clapt hodge-podge together, they don't make a tree.

“ But, to come back to Emerson, (whom by the way,

I believe we left waiting,) —his is, we may say,
 A Greek head on right Yankee shoulders, whose range
 Has Olympus for one pole, for t' other the Exchange ;
 He seems, to my thinking, (although I'm afraid
 The comparison must, long ere this, have been made,)

A Plotinus-Montaigne, where the Egyptian's gold mist

And the Gascon's shrewd wit cheek-by-jowl co-exist ;
 All admire, and yet scarcely six converts he 's got
 To I don't (nor they either) exactly know what ;
 For though he builds glorious temples, 't is odd
 He leaves never a doorway to get in a god.

'T is refreshing to old-fashioned people like me,
 To meet such a primitive Pagan as he,

In whose mind all creation is duly respected

As parts of himself—just a little projected ;

And who's willing to worship the stars and the sun,

A convert to—nothing but Emerson.

So perfect a balance there is in his head,

That he talks of things sometimes as if they were dead ;

Life, nature, love, God, and affairs of that sort,
He looks at as merely ideas ; in short,
As if they were fossils stuck round in a cabinet,
Of such vast extent that our earth 's a mere dab in it ;
Composed just as he is inclined to conjecture her,
Namely, one part pure earth, ninety-nine parts pure lecturer ;
You are filled with delight at his clear demonstration,
Each figure, word, gesture, just fits the occasion,
With the quiet precision of science he'll sort 'em,
But you can't help suspecting the whole a post mortem.

“ There are persons, mole-blind to the soul's make and style,
Who insist on a likeness 'twixt him and Carlyle ;
To compare him with Plato would be vastly fairer,
Carlyle 's the more burly, but E. is the rarer ;
He sees fewer objects, but clearer, truelier,
If C. 's as original, E. 's more peculiar ;
That he 's more of a man you might say of the one,
Of the other he 's more of an Emerson ;
C. 's the Titan, as shaggy of mind as of limb,—
E. the clear-eyed Olympian, rapid and slim ;
The one 's two-thirds Norseman, the other half Greek,
Where the one 's most abounding, the other 's to seek ;
C.'s generals require to be seen in the mass,—
E.'s specialties gain if enlarged by the glass ;
C. gives nature and God his own fits of the blues,
And rims common-sense things with mystical hues,—
E. sits in a mystery calm and intense,
And looks coolly around him with sharp commonsense ;

C. shows you how every-day matters unite
 With the dim transdiurnal recesses of night,—
 While E., in a plain, preternatural way,
 Makes mysteries matters of mere every day ;
 C. draws all his characters quite à la Fuseli,—
 He don't sketch their bundles of muscles and thews illy,
 But he paints with a brush so untamed and profuse,
 They seem nothing but bundles of muscles and thews ;
 E. is rather like Flaxman, lines strait and severe,
 And a colorless outline, but full, round, and clear ;—
 To the men he thinks worthy he frankly accords
 The design of a white marble statue in words.
 C. labors to get at the centre, and then
 Take a reckoning from there of his actions and men ;
 E. calmly assumes the said centre as granted,
 And, given himself, has whatever is wanted.

“ He has imitators in scores, who omit
 No part of the man but his wisdom and wit,—
 Who go carefully o'er the sky-blue of his brain,
 And when he has skimmed it once, skim it again ;
 If at all they resemble him, you may be sure it is Because their shoals mirror his mists and obscurities,
 As a mud-puddle seems deep as heaven for a minute,
 While a cloud that floats o'er is reflected within it.

“ There comes ——, for instance ; to see him's rare sport,
 Tread in Emerson's tracks with legs painfully short ;
 How he jumps, how he strains, and gets red in the face,
 To keep step with the mystagogue's natural pace !

He follows as close as a stick to a rocket,
His fingers exploring the prophet's each pocket.
Fie, for shame, brother bard ; with good fruit of your own

Can't you let neighbor Emerson's orchards alone ?
Besides, 't is no use, you 'll not find e'en a core,— —— has picked up all the windfalls before.
They might strip every tree, and E. never would catch
'em,

His Hesperides have no rude dragon to watch 'em ;
When they send him a dishfull, and ask him to try 'em,
He never suspects how the sly rogues came by 'em ;
He wonders why 't is there are none such his trees on,
And thinks 'em the best he has tasted this season.

“ Yonder, calm as a cloud, Alcott stalks in a dream,
And fancies himself in thy groves, Academe,
With the Parthenon nigh, and the olive-trees o'er him,
And never a fact to perplex him or bore him,
With a snug room at Plato's, when night comes, to walk to,

And people from morning till midnight to talk to,
And from midnight till morning, nor snore in their listening ;—

So he muses, his face with the joy of it glistening,
For his highest conceit of a happiest state is Where they 'd live upon acorns, and hear him talk gratis ;

And indeed, I believe, no man ever talked better—
Each sentence hangs perfectly poised to a letter ;
He seems piling words, but there 's royal dust hid
In the heart of each sky-piercing pyramid.
While he talks he is great, but goes out like a taper,

If you shut him up closely with pen, ink, and paper ;
Yet his fingers itch for 'em from morning till night,
And he thinks he does wrong if he don't always write ;
In this, as in all things, a lamb among men,
He goes to sure death when he goes to his pen.

“ Close behind him is Brownson, his mouth very full
With attempting to gulp a Gregorian bull ;
Who contrives, spite of that, to pour out as he goes
A stream of transparent and forcible prose ;
He shifts quite about, then proceeds to expound
That 't is merely the earth, not himself, that turns round,

And wishes it clearly impressed on your mind,
That the weather-cock rules and not follows the wind ;
Proving first, then as deftly confuting each side,
With no doctrine pleased that 's not somewhere denied,
He lays the denier away on the shelf,
And then—down beside him lies gravely himself.
He 's the Salt River boatman, who always stands willing

To convey friend or foe without charging a shilling,
And so fond of a trip that, when leisure 's to spare,
He 'll row himself up, if he can't get a fare.
The worst of it is, that his logic 's so strong,
That of two sides he commonly chooses the wrong ;
If there is only one, why, he 'll split it in two,
And first pummel this half, then that, black and blue.
That white 's white needs no proof, but it takes a deep fellow

To prove it jet-black, and that jet-black is yellow.
He offers the true faith to drink in a sieve,—
When it reaches your lips there 's naught left to believe

But a few silly- (syлло-, I mean,) -gisms that squat 'em
Like tadpoles, o'erjoyed with the mud at the bottom.

“ There is Willis, so natty and jaunty and gay,
Who says his best things in so foppish a way,
With conceits and pet phrases so thickly o'erlaying 'em,
That one hardly knows whether to thank him for saying 'em ;

Over-ornament ruins both poem and prose,
Just conceive of a muse with a ring in her nose !
His prose had a natural grace of its own,
And enough of it, too, if he 'd let it alone ;
But he twitches and jerks so, one fairly gets tired,
And is forced to forgive where he might have admired ;
Yet whenever it slips away free and unlaced,
It runs like a stream with a musical waste,
And gurgles along with the liquidest sweep ;—
'T is not deep as a river, but who 'd have it deep ?
In a country where scarcely a village is found
That has not its author sublime and profound,
For some one to be slightly shoal is a duty,
And Willis's shallowness makes half his beauty.
His prose winds along with a blithe, gurgling error,
And reflects all of Heaven it can see in its mirror.
'T is a narrowish strip, but it is not an artifice,—
'T is the true out-of-doors with its genuine hearty phiz ;
It is Nature herself, and there 's something in that,
Since most brains reflect but the crown of a hat.
No volume I know to read under a tree,
More truly delicious than his A l'Abri,
With the shadows of leaves flowing over your book,
Like ripple-shades netting the bed of a brook ;
With June coming softly your shoulder to look over.

Breezes waiting to turn every leaf of your book over,
 And Nature to criticise still as you read,—
 The page that bears that is a rare one indeed.

“He’s so innate a cockney, that had he been born Where plain bare-skin ’s the only full-dress that is worn,

He ’d have given his own such an air that you ’d say
 ’T had been made by a tailor to lounge in Broadway.
 His nature ’s a glass of champagne with the foam on ’t,
 As tender as Fletcher, as witty as Beaumont ;
 So his best things are done in the flush of the moment,
 If he wait, all is spoiled ; he may stir it and shake it,
 But the fixed air once gone, he can never re-make it ;
 He might be a marvel of easy delightfulness,
 If he would not sometimes leave the r out of sprightfulness ;

And he ought to let Scripture alone—’t is self-slaughter,
 For nobody likes inspiration and water.

He’d have been just the fellow to sup at the Mermaid, Cracking jokes at rare Ben, with an eye to the barmaid,

His wit running up as Canary ran down,—
 The topmost bright bubble on the wave of The Town.

“Here comes Parker, the Orson of parsons, a man Whom the Church undertook to put under her ban,—
 (The Church of Socinus, I mean)—his opinions
 Being So- (ultra) -cinian, they shocked the Socinians ;
 They believed—faith I’m puzzled— I think I may call
 Their belief a believing in nothing at all,
 Or something of that sort ; I know they all went
 For a general union of total dissent :

He went a step farther ; without cough or hem,
 He frankly avowed he believed not in them ;
 And, before he could be jumbled up or prevented,
 From their orthodox kind of dissent he dissented.
 There was heresy here, you perceive, for the right
 Of privately judging means simply that light
 Has been granted to me, for deciding on you,
 And, in happier times, before Atheism grew,
 The deed contained clauses for cooking you, too.
 Now at Xerxes and Knut we all laugh, yet our foot
 With the same wave is wet that mocked Xerxes and Knut ;

And we all entertain a sincere private notion,
 That our Thus far ! will have a great weight with the ocean.

'T was so with our liberal Christians : they bore
 With sincerest conviction their chairs to the shore ;
 They brandished their worn theological birches,
 Bade natural progress keep out of the Churches,
 And expected the lines they had drawn to prevail
 With the fast-rising tide to keep out of their pale ;
 They had formerly dammed the Pontifical See,
 And the same thing, they thought, would do nicely for P. ;

But he turned up his nose at their murmuring and shamming,

And cared (shall I say ?) not a d— for their damming ;

So they first read him out of their Church, and next minute

Turned round and declared he had never been in it.
 But the ban was too small or the man was too big,
 For he recks not their bells, books, and candles a fig ;

(He don't look like a man who would stay treated shabbily, Sophroniscus' son's head o'er the features of Rab-lais ;)—

He bangs and bethwacks them,—their backs he salutes
With the whole tree of knowledge torn up by the roots ;
His sermons with satire are plenteously verjuiced,
And he talks in one breath of Confutzee, Cass, Zerduscht

Jack Robinson, Peter the Hermit, Strap, Dathan, Cush, Pitt (not the bottomless, that he 's no faith in),
Pan, Pillicock, Shakspeare, Paul, Toots, Monsieur Tonson,

Aldebaran, Alcander, Ben Khorat, Ben Jonson,
Thoth, Richter, Joe Smith, Father Paul, Judah Monis, Musæus, Muretus,— μ Scorpionis,

Maccabee, Maccaboy, Mac—Mac—ah ! Machiavelli,
Condorcet, Count d'Orsay, Conder, Say, Ganganelli,
Orion, O'Connell, the Chevalier D'O,

(Whom the great Sully speaks of,) το παν, the great toe

Of the statue of Jupiter, now made to pass
For that of Jew Peter by good Romish brass,—
(You may add for yourselves, for I find it a bore,
All the names you have ever, or not, heard before,
And when you 've done that—why, invent a few more.)
His hearers can't tell you on Sunday beforehand,
If in that day's discourse they 'll be Bibled or Koraned,
For he 's seized the idea (by his martyrdom fired),
That all men (not orthodox) may be inspired ;
Yet, though wisdom profane with his creed he may weave in,

He makes it quite clear what he does n't believe in,

While some, who decry him, think all Kingdom Come
 Is a sort of a, kind of a, species of Hum,
 Of which, as it were, so to speak, not a crumb
 Would be left, if we did n't keep carefully mum,
 And, to make a clean breast, that 't is perfectly plain
 That all kinds of wisdom are somewhat profane ;
 Now P.'s creed than this may be lighter or darker,
 But in one thing, 't is clear, he has faith, namely—Parker ;

And this is what makes him the crowd-drawing preacher,
 There 's a back-ground of god to each hard-working feature,

Every word that he speaks has been fierily furnaced
 In the blast of a life that has struggled in earnest :
 There he stands, looking more like a ploughman than priest,

If not dreadfully awkward, not graceful at least,
 His gestures all downright and same, if you will,
 As of brown-fisted Hobnail in hoeing a drill,
 But his periods fall on you, stroke after stroke,
 Like the blows of a lumberer felling an oak,
 You forget the man wholly, you 're thankful to meet
 With a preacher who smacks of the field and the street,
 And to hear, you 're not over-particular whence,
 Almost Taylor's profusion, quite Latimer's sense.

“There is Bryant, as quiet, as cool, and as dignified,

As a smooth, silent iceberg, that never is ignifed,
 Save when by reflection 't is kindled o' nights
 With a semblance of flame by the chill Northern Lights.

He may rank (Griswold says so) first bard of your nation,

(There's no doubt that he stands in supreme iceolation,)

Your topmost Parnassus he may set his heel on,
But no warm applauses come, peal following peal on,—
He 's too smooth and too polished to hang any zeal on :
Unqualified merits, I 'll grant, if you choose, he has
'em,

But he lacks the one merit of kindling enthusiasm ;
If he stir you at all, it is just, on my soul,
Like being stirred up with the very North Pole.

“ He is very nice reading in summer, but inter
Nos, we don't want extra freezing in winter ;
Take him up in the depth of July, my advice is,
When you feel an Egyptian devotion to ices.
But, deduct all you can, there 's enough that's right good in him,

He has a true soul for field, river, and wood in him ;
And his heart, in the midst of brick walls, or where'er
it is,

Glow, softens, and thrills with the tenderest charities,—

To you mortals that delve in this trade-ridden planet ?
No, to old Berkshire's hills, with their limestone and granite.

If you 're one who in loco (add foco here) desipis,
You will get of his outermost heart (as I guess) a piece ;
But you 'd get deeper down if you came as a precipice,
And would break the last seal of its inwardest fountain,

If you only could palm yourself off for a mountain.

Mr. Quivis, or somebody quite as discerning,
 Some scholar who 's hourly expecting his learning,
 Calls B. the American Wordsworth ; but Wordsworth
 Is worth near as much as your whole tuneful herd's worth.

No, don't be absurd, he 's an excellent Bryant ;
 But, my friends, you'll endanger the life of your client,
 By attempting to stretch him up into a giant :
 If you choose to compare him, I think there are two per-

-sons fit for a parallel—Thomson and Cowper ;¹
 I don't mean exactly,—there's something of each,
 There 's 'T.'s love of nature, C.'s penchant to preach ;
 Just mix up their minds so that C.'s spice of craziness
 Shall balance and neutralize T.'s turn for laziness,
 And it gives you a brain cool, quite frictionless, quiet,
 Whose internal police nips the buds of all riot,—
 A brain like a permanent strait-jacket put on
 The heart which strives vainly to burst off a button,—
 A brain which, without being slow or mechanic,
 Does more than a larger less drilled, more volcanic ;
 He 's a Cowper condensed, with no craziness bitten,
 And the advantage that Wordsworth before him has written.

“ But, my dear little bardlings, don't prick up your ears,

Nor suppose I would rank you and Bryant as peers :
 If I call him an iceberg, I don't mean to say

¹ To demonstrate quickly and easily how per-versely absurd 't is to sound this name Cowper,
 As people in general call him named super,
 I just add that he rhymes it himself with horse-trooper.

There is nothing in that which is grand, in its way ;
 He is almost the one of your poets that knows How much grace, strength, and dignity lie in Repose ;

If he sometimes fall short, he is too wise to mar
 His thought's modest fulness by going too far ;
 'T would be well if your authors should all make a trial

Of what virtue there is in severe self-denial,
 And measure their writings by Hesiod's staff,
 Which teaches that all has less value than half.

“There is Whittier, whose swelling and vehement heart

Strains the strait-breasted drab of the Quaker apart,
 And reveals the live Man, still supreme and erect Underneath the bemummying wrappers of sect ;
 There was ne'er a man born who had more of the swing

Of the true lyric bard and all that kind of thing ;
 And his failures arise, (though perhaps he don't know it,)

From the very same cause that has made him a poet,—

A fervor of mind which knows no separation
 'Twixt simple excitement and pure inspiration,
 As my Pythoness erst sometimes erred from not knowing

If 't were I or mere wind through her tripod was blowing ;

Let his mind once get head in its favorite direction
 And the torrent of verse bursts the dams of reflection,

While, borne with the rush of the meter along,
 The poet may chance to go right or go wrong,
 Content with the whirl and delirium of song ;
 Then his grammar's not always correct, nor his rhymes,
 And he's prone to repeat his own lyrics sometimes,
 Not his best, though, for those are struck off at white-heats

When the heart in his breast like a trip-hammer beats,

And can ne'er be repeated again any more
 Than they could have been carefully plotted before :
 Like old what's-his-name there at the battle of Hastings,

(Who, however, gave more than mere rhythmical bast-ings,)

Our Quaker leads off metaphorical fights
 For reform and whatever they call human rights,
 Both singing and striking in front of the war
 And hitting his foes with the mallet of Thor ;
Anne haec, one exclaims, on beholding his knocks,
Vestis filii tui, O, leather-clad Fox ?

Can that be thy son, in the battle's mid din,
 Preaching brotherly love and ther driving it in
 To the brain of the tough old Goliath of sin,
 With the smoothest of pebbles from Castaly's spring
 Impressed on his hard moral sense with a sling ?

“ All honor and praise to the right-hearted bard
 Who was true to The Voice when such service was hard,

Who himself was so free he dared sing for the slave
 When to look but a protest in silence was brave ;
 All honor and praise to the women and men

Who spoke out for the dumb and the down-trodden then !

I need not to name them, already for each
I see History preparing the statue and niche ;
They were harsh, but shall you be so shocked at hard words

Who have beaten your pruning hooks up into swords,
Whose rewards and hurrahs men are surer to gain
By the reaping of men and of women than grain ?
Why should you stand aghast at their fierce wordy war, if

You scalp one another for Bank or for Tariff ?
Your calling them cut-throats and knaves all day long

Don't prove that the use of hard language is wrong ;
While the World's heart beats quicker to think of such men

As signed Tyranny's doom with a bloody steel-pen,
While on Fourth-of-July's beardless orators fright one
With hints at Harmodius and Aristogeiton,
You need not look shy at your sisters and brothers
Who stab with sharp words for the freedom of others ;—

No, a wreath, twine a wreath for the loyal and true
Who, for sake of the many, dared stand with the few,
Not of blood-spattered laurel for enemies braved,
But of broad, peaceful oak-leaves for citizens saved !

“ Here comes Dana, abstractedly loitering along,
Involved in a paulo-post-future of song,
Who 'll be going to write what 'll never be written Till the Muse, ere he thinks of it, gives him the mitten,—

Who is so well aware of how things should be done,
That his own works displease him before they're begun,—

Who so well all that makes up good poetry knows,
That the best of his poems is written in prose ;
All saddled and bridled stood Pegasus waiting,
He was booted and spurred, but he loitered debating,
In a very grave question his soul was immersed,—
Which foot in the stirrup he ought to put first ;
And, while this point and that he judicially dwelt on,
He, somehow or other, had written Paul Felton,
Whose beauties or faults, whichsoever you see there,
You'll allow only genius could hit upon either.
That he once was the Idle Man none will deplore,
But I fear he will never be any thing more ;
The ocean of song heaves and glitters before him,
The depth and the vastness and longing sweep o'er
him,
He knows every breaker and shoal on the chart,
He has the Coast Pilot and so on by heart,
Yet he spends his whole life, like the man in the fable,
In learning to swim on his library-table.

“There swaggers John Neal, who has wasted in Maine

The sinews and chords of his pugilist brain,
Who might have been poet, but that, in its stead, he

Preferred to believe that he was so already ;
Too hasty to wait till Art's ripe fruit should drop,
He must pelt down an unripe and colicky crop ;
Who took to the law, and had this sterling plea for it,

It required him to quarrel, and paid him a fee for it ;
A man who 's made less than he might have, because He always has thought himself more than he was,—
Who, with very good natural gifts as a bard,
Broke the strings of his lyre out by striking too hard,
And cracked half the notes of a truly fine voice,
Because song drew less instant attention than noise.
Ah, men do not know how much strength is in poise,
That he goes the farthest who goes far enough,
And that all beyond that is just bother and stuff.
No vain man matures, he makes too much new wood ;
His blooms are too thick for the fruit to be good ;
'T is the modest man ripens, 't is he that achieves,
Just what 's needed of sunshine and shade he receives ;
Grapes, to mellow, require the cool dark of their leaves ;
Neal wants balance ; he throws his mind always too far,
And whisks out flocks of comets, but never a star ;
He has so much muscle, and loves so to show it,
'That he strips himself naked to prove he 's a poet,
And, to show he could leap Art's wide ditch, if he tried,
Jumps clean o'er it, and into the hedge t' other side.
He has strength, but there 's nothing about him in keeping ;
One gets surelier onward by walking than leaping ;
He has used his own sinews himself to distress,
And had done vastly more had he done vastly less ;
In letters, too soon is as bad as too late,
Could he only have waited he might have been great,
But he plumped into Helicon up to the waist,
And muddied the stream ere he took his first taste.

“ There is Hawthorne, with genius so shrinking and rare

That you hardly at first see the strength that is there ;
A frame so robust, with a nature so sweet,
So earnest, so graceful, so solid, so fleet,
Is worth a descent from Olympus to meet ;
'T is as if a rough oak that for ages had stood,
With his gnarled bony branches like ribs of the wood,
Should bloom, after cycles of struggle and scathe,
With a single anemone trembly and rathe ;
His strength is so tender, his wildness so meek,
That a suitable parallel sets one to seek,—
He 's a John Bunyan Fouqué, a Puritan Tieck ;
When Nature was shaping him, clay was not granted
For making so full-sized a man as she wanted,
So, to fill out her model, a little she spared
From some finer-grained stuff for a woman prepared,
And she could not have hit a more excellent plan
For making him fully and perfectly man.
The success of her scheme gave her so much delight,
That she tried it again, shortly after, in Dwight ;
Only, while she was kneading and shaping the clay,
She sang to her work in her sweet childish way,
And found, when she 'd put the last touch to his soul,
That the music had somehow got mixed with the whole.

“ Here 's Cooper, who 's written six volumes to show
He 's as good as a lord : well, let 's grant that he 's so ,
If a person prefer that description of praise,
Why, a coronet 's certainly cheaper than bays ;
But he need take no pains to convince us he 's not (As his enemies say) the American Scott.
Choose any twelve men, and let C. read aloud

That one of his novels of which he 's most proud,
 And I 'd lay any bet that, without ever quitting
 Their box, they 'd be all, to a man, for acquitting.
 He has drawn you one character, though, that is new,
 One wildflower he 's plucked that is wet with the dew
 Of this fresh Western world, and, the thing not to mince,

He has done naught but copy it ill ever since ;
 His Indians, with proper respect be it said,
 Are just Natty Bumppo daubed over with red,
 And his very Long Toms are the same useful Nat,
 Rigged up in duck pants and a sou'-wester hat,
 (Though, once in a Coffin, a good chance was found To have slipt the old fellow away underground.)
 All his other men-figures are clothes upon sticks,
 The dernier chemise of a man in a fix,
 (As a captain besieged, when his garrison 's small, Sets up caps upon poles to be seen o'er the wall ;)
 And the women he draws from one model don't vary,
 All sappy as maples and flat as a prairie.
 When a character 's wanted, he goes to the task
 As a cooper would do in composing a cask ;
 He picks out the staves, of their qualities heedful,
 Just hoops them together as tight as is needful,
 And, if the best fortune should crown the attempt, he Has made at the most something wooden and empty.

“ Don't suppose I would underrate Cooper's abilities,
 If I thought you 'd do that, I should feel very ill at ease ;
 The men who have given to one character life
 And objective existence, are not very rife,
 You may number them all, both prose-writers and singers,

Without overrunning the bounds of your fingers,
And Natty won't go to oblivion quicker
Than Adams the parson or Primrose the vicar.

“There is one thing in Cooper I like, too, and that is

That on manners he lectures his countrymen gratis ;
Not precisely so either, because, for a rarity,
He is paid for his tickets in unpopularity.
Now he may overcharge his American pictures,
But you 'll grant there 's a good deal of truth in his strictures ;

And I honor the man who is willing to sink
Half his present repute for the freedom to think,
And, when he has thought, be his cause strong or weak,

Will risk t' other half for the freedom to speak, Caring naught for what vengeance the mob has in store,

Let that mob be the upper ten thousand or lower.

“There are truths you Americans need to be told,
And it never 'll refute them to swagger and scold ;
John Bull, looking o'er the Atlantic, in choler
At your aptness for trade, says you worship the dollar ;
But to scorn such i-dollar-try 's what very few do,
And John goes to that church as often as you do.
No matter what John says, don't try to outcrow him,
'T is enough to go quietly on and outgrow him ;
Like most fathers, Bull hates to see Number One
Displacing himself in the mind of his son,
And detests the same faults in himself he 'd neglected
When he sees them again in his child's glass reflected ;

To love one another you 're too likely by half,
If he is a bull, you 're a pretty stout calf,
And tear your own pasture for naught but to show
What a nice pair of horns you 're beginning to grow.

“ There are one or two things I should just like to hint,

For you don't often get the truth told you in print ;
The most of you (this is what strikes all beholders)
Have a mental and physical stoop in the shoulders ;
Though you ought to be free as the winds and the waves,

You 've the gait and the manners of runaway slaves ;
Tho' you brag of your New World, you don't half believe in it,

And as much of the Old as is possible weave in it ;
Your goddess of freedom, a tight, buxom girl,
With lips like a cherry and teeth like a pearl,
With eyes bold as Herè's, and hair floating free,
And full of the sun as the spray of the sea,
Who can sing at a husking or romp at a shearing,
Who can trip through the forests alone without fearing,
Who can drive home the cows with a song through the grass,

Keeps glancing aside into Europe's cracked glass, Hides her red hands in gloves, pinches up her lithe waist,

And makes herself wretched with transmarine taste ;
She loses her fresh country charm when she takes
Any mirror except her own rivers and lakes.

“ You steal Englishmen's books and think English-men's thought,

With their salt on her tail your wild eagle is caught ;

Your literature suits its each whisper and motion
To what will be thought of it over the ocean ;
The cast clothes of Europe your statesmanship tries
And mumbles again the old blarneys and lies ;—
Forget Europe wholly, your veins throb with blood
To which the dull current in hers is but mud ;
Let her sneer, let her say your experiment fails,
In her voice there 's a tremble e'en now while she rails,
And your shore will soon be in the nature of things
Covered thick with gilt driftwood of runaway kings,
Where alone, as it were in a Longfellow's Waif,
Her fugitive pieces will find themselves safe.
O, my friends, thank your God, if you have one, that he
'Twixt the Old World and you set the gulf of a sea ;
Be strong-backed, brown-handed, upright as your pines,
By the scale of a hemisphere shape your designs,
Be true to yourselves and this new nineteenth age,
As a statue by Powers, or a picture by Page, Plough, dig, sail, forge, build, carve, paint, make all things new,
To your own New-World instincts contrive to be true,
Keep your ears open wide to the Future's first call,
Be whatever you will, but yourselves first of all,
Stand fronting the dawn on Toil's heaven-scaling peaks,
And become my new race of more practical Greeks.—
Hem ! your likeness at present, I shudder to tell o' 't,
Is that you have your slaves, and the Greek had his helot."

Here a gentleman present, who had in his attic
More pepper than brains, shrieked—"The man 's a fanatic,
I'm a capital tailor with warm tar and feathers,

And will make him a suit that 'll serve in all weathers ;
 But we 'll argue the point first, I'm willing to reason 't,

Palaver before condemnation 's but decent,
 So, through my humble person, Humanity begs
 Of the friends of true freedom a loan of bad eggs."

But Apollo let one such a look of his show forth
 As when ἤϊε νόστι ἐοικώς, and so forth,

And the gentleman somehow slunk out of the way;

But, as he was going, gained courage to say,—

“ At slavery in the abstract my whole soul rebels,
 I am as strongly opposed to 't as any one else.”

“ Ay, no doubt, but whenever I've happened to meet
 With a wrong or a crime, it is always concrete,”

Answered Phœbus severely ; then turning to us,

“ The mistakes of such fellows as just made the fuss
 Is only in taking a great busy nation

For a part of their pitiful cotton-plantation.—

But there comes Miranda, Zeus ! where shall I flee to ?

She has such a penchant for bothering me too !

She always keeps asking if I don't observe a Particular likeness 'twixt her and Minerva :

She tells me my efforts in verse are quite clever ;—

She's been travelling now, and will be worse than ever ;

One would think, though, a sharp-sighted noter she'd be

Of all that's worth mentioning over the sea,

For a woman must surely see well, if she try,

The whole of whose being's a capital ! :

She will take an old notion and make it her own

By saying it o'er in her Sybilline tone,

Or persuade you 't is something tremendously deep,

By repeating it so as to put you to sleep ;

And she well may defy any mortal to see through it,
When once she has mixed up her infinite me through it.

There is one thing she owns in her own single right,
It is native and genuine—namely, her spite :
Though, when acting as censor, she privately blows
A censor of vanity 'neath her own nose.”

Here Miranda came up, and said, “Phœbus ! you know

That the infinite Soul has its infinite woe,
As I ought to know, having lived cheek by jowl,
Since the day I was born, with the Infinite Soul ;
I myself introduced, I myself, I alone,
To my Land's better life authors solely my own,
Who the sad heart of earth on their shoulders have taken,

Whose works sound a depth by Life's quiet unshaken,
Such as Shakspeare, for instance, the Bible, and Bacon,

Not to mention my own works ; Time's nadir is fleet,
And, as for myself, I 'm quite out of conceit,”—

“Quite out of conceit ! I 'm enchanted to hear it.”
Cried Apollo aside, “Who 'd have thought she was near it ?

To be sure one is apt to exhaust those commodities
He uses too fast, yet in this case as odd it is
As if Neptune should say to his turbot and whittings,
'I 'm as much out of salt as Miranda's own writings,' (Which, as she in her own happy manner has said, Sound a depth, for 't is one of the functions of lead.)
She often has asked me if I could not find

A place somewhere near me that suited her mind ;
 I know but a single one vacant, which she,
 With her rare talent that way, would fit to a T.
 And it would not imply any pause of cessation
 In the work she esteems her peculiar vocation,—
 She may enter on duty to-day, if she chooses,
 And remain 'Tiring-woman for life to the Muses."

(Miranda meanwhile has succeeded in driving
 Up into a corner, in spite of their striving,
 A small flock of terrified victims, and there,
 With an I-turn-the-crank-of-the-Universe air
 And a tone which, at least to my fancy, appears
 Not so much to be entering as boxing your ears,
 Is unfolding a tale (of herself, I surmise,
 For 't is dotted as thick as a peacock's with I's.)
Apropos of Miranda, I 'll rest on my oars
 And drift through a trifling digression on bores,
 For, though not wearing ear-rings in more majorum,
 Our ears are kept bored just as if we still wore 'em.
 There was one feudal custom worth keeping, at least,
 Roasted bores made a part of each well-ordered feast,
 And of all quiet pleasures the very ne plus
 Was in hunting wild bores as the tame ones hunt us.
 Archæologists, I know, who have personal fears
 Of this wise application of hounds and of spears,
 Have tried to make out, with a zeal more than wonted,
 'T was a kind of wild swine that our ancestors hunted ;
 But I 'll never believe that the age which has strewn
 Europe o'er with cathedrals, and otherwise shown That it knew what was what, could by chance not have known.

(Spending, too, its chief time with its buff on, no doubt,)

Which beast 't would improve the world most to thin out,
I divide bores myself, in the manner of rifles,
Into two great divisions, regardless of trifles ;—
There 's your smooth-bore and screw-bore, who do not much vary

In the weight of cold lead they respectively carry.
The smooth-bore is one in whose essence the mind
Not a corner nor cranny to cling by can find ;
You feel as in nightmares sometimes, when you slip
Down a steep slated roof where there 's nothing to grip,
You slide and you slide, the blank horror increases,
You had rather by far be at once smashed to pieces,
You fancy a whirlpool below white and frothing,
And finally drop off and light upon—nothing.
The screw-bore has twists in him, faint predilections
For going just wrong in the tritest directions ;
When he 's wrong he is flat, when he 's right he can't show it,

He 'll tell you what Snooks said about the new poet,¹
Or how Fogrum was outraged by Tennyson's Princess ;
He has spent all his spare time and intellect since his Birth in perusing, on each art and science,
Just the books in which no one puts any reliance;
And though nemo, we 're told, horis omnibus sapit,
The rule will not fit him, however you shape it,
For he has a perennial foison of sappiness ;
He has just enough force to spoil half your day's happiness,

¹ If you call Snooks an owl, he will show by his looks
That he 's morally certain you 're jealous of Snooks.)

And to make him a sort of mosquito to be with,
But just not enough to dispute or agree with.

These sketches I made (not to be too explicit)
From two honest fellows who made me a visit,
And broke, like the tale of the Bear and the Fiddle,
My reflections on Halleck short off by the middle ;
I shall not now go into the subject more deeply,
For I notice that some of my readers look sleep'ly,
I will barely remark that, 'mongst civilized nations,
There 's none that displays more exemplary patience
Under all sorts of boring, at all sorts of hours,
From all sorts of desperate persons, than ours.
Not to speak of our papers, our state legislatures,
And other such trials for sensitive natures,
Just look for a moment at Congress,—appalled,
My fancy shrinks back from the phantom it called ;
Why, there 's scarcely a member unworthy to frown
'Neath what Fourier nicknames the Boreal crown ;
Only think what that infinite bore-pow'r could do
If applied with a utilitarian view ;
Suppose, for example, we shipped it with care
To Sahara's great desert and let it bore there,
If they held one short session and did nothing else,
They 'd fill the whole waste with Artesian wells.
But 'tis time now with pen phonographic to follow
Through some more of his sketches our laughing
Apollo :—

“ There comes Harry Franco, and, as he draws near,
You find that 's a smile which you took for a sneer ;
One half of him contradicts t' other, his wont
Is to say very sharp things and do very blunt ;

His manner 's as hard as his feelings are tender,
 And a sortie he 'll make when he means to surrender ;
 He 's in joke half the time when he seems to be sternest,
 When he seems to be joking, be sure he 's in earnest ;
 He has common sense in a way that 's uncommon,
 Hates humbug and cant, loves his friends like a woman,
 Builds his dislikes of cards and his friendships of oak,
 Loves a prejudice better than aught but a joke,
 Is half upright Quaker, half downright Come-outer,
 Loves freedom too well to go stark mad about her,
 Quite artless himself is a lover of Art,
 Shuts you out of his secrets and into his heart,
 And though not a poet, yet all must admire
 In his letters of Pinto his skill on the liar.

"There comes Poe with his raven, like Barnaby Rudge,
 Three-fifths of him genius and two-fifths sheer fudge,
 Who talks like a book of iambs and pentameters,
 In a way to make people of common-sense damn metres,
 Who has written some things quite the best of their kind
 But the heart somehow seems all squeezed out by the mind,
 Who—but hey-day ! What 's this ? Messieurs Matthews and Poe,
 You must n't fling mud-balls at Longfellow so,
 Does it make a man worse that his character 's such As to make his friends love him (as you think) too much ?
 Why, there is not a bard at this moment alive

More willing than he that his fellows should thrive ;
 While you are abusing him thus, even now
 He would help either one of you out of a slough ;
 You may say that he 's smooth and all that till you 're hoarse,

But remember that elegance also is force ;
 After polishing granite as much as you will,
 The heart keeps its tough old persistency still ;
 Deduct all you can that still keeps you at bay,—
 Why, he 'll live till men weary of Collins and Gray ;
 I 'm not over-fond of Greek metres in English,
 To me rhyme 's a gain, so it be not too jinglish,
 And your modern hexameter verses are no more Like Greek ones than sleek Mr. Pope is like Homer ;
 As the roar of the sea to the coo of a pigeon is,
 So, compared to your moderns, sounds old Melesigenes ;
 I may be too partial, the reason, perhaps, o' 't is That I 've heard the old blind man recite his own rhapsodies,

And my ear with that music impregnate may be,
 Like the poor exiled shell with the soul of the sea,
 Or as one can't bear Strauss when his nature is cloven
 To its deeps within deeps by the stroke of Beethoven ;
 But, set that aside, and 't is truth that I speak,
 Had Theocritus written in English, not Greek,
 I believe that his exquisite sense would scarce change a line

In that rare, tender, virgin-like pastoral Evangeline.
 That 's not ancient nor modern, its place is apart
 Where time has no sway, in the realm of pure Art,
 'T is a shrine of retreat from Earth's hubbub and strife

As quiet and chaste as the author's own life.

“ There comes Philothea, her face all aglow,
She has just been dividing some poor creature’s woe,
And can’t tell which pleases her most, to relieve
His want, or his story to hear and believe ;
No doubt against many deep griefs she prevails,
For her ear is the refuge of destitute tales ;
She knows well that silence is sorrow’s best food,
And that talking draws off from the heart its black blood,

So she ’ll listen with patience and let you unfold
Your bundle of rags as ’t were pure cloth of gold,
Which, indeed, it all turns to as soon as she’s touched it,
And, (to borrow a phrase from the nursery,) muched it,
She has such a musical taste, she will go
Any distance to hear one who draws a long bow ;
She will swallow a wonder by mere might and main
And thinks it geometry’s fault if she’s fain
To consider things flat, inasmuch as they’re plain ;
Facts with her are accomplished, as Frenchmen would say,

They will prove all she wishes them to—either way,
And, as fact lies on this side or that, we must try,
If we’re seeking the truth, to find where it don’t lie ;
I was telling her once of a marvellous aloe
That for thousands of years had looked spindling and sallow,

And, though nursed by the fruitfulest powers of mud,
Had never vouchsafed e’en so much as a bud,
Till its owner remarked as a sailor, you know,
Often will in a calm, that it never would blow,
For he wished to exhibit the plant, and designed
That its blowing should help him in raising the wind ;
At last it was told him that if he should water

Its roots with the blood of his unmarried daughter,
(Who was born, as her mother, a Calvinist said,
With a Baxter's effectual call on her head,)
It would blow as the obstinate breeze did when by a
Like decree of her father died Iphigenia ;
At first he declared he himself would be blowed
Ere his conscience with such a foul crime he would load
But the thought, coming oft, grew less dark than before,

And he mused, as each creditor knocked at his door,
If this were but done they would dun me no more ;
I told Philothea his struggles and doubts,
And how he considered the ins and the outs
Of the visions he had, and the dreadful dyspepsy,
How he went to the seer that lives at Po'keepsie,
How the seer advised him to sleep on it first
And to read his big volume in case of the worst,
And further advised he should pay him five dollars
For writing Hum, Hum, on his wristbands and collars ;
Three years and ten days these dark words he had studied
When the daughter was missed, and the aloe had budded ;
I told how he watched it grow large and more large,
And wondered how much for the show he should charge,
She had listened with utter indifference to this, till
I told how it bloomed, and discharging its pistil
With an aim the Eumenides dictated, shot
The botanical filicide dead on the spot ;
It had blown, but he reaped not his horrible gains,
For it blew with such force as to blow out his brains,
And the crime was blown also, because on the wad.
Which was paper, was writ ' Visitation of God,'
As well as a thrilling account of the deed
Which the coroner kindly allowed me to read.

“ Well, my friend took this story up just, to be sure,
As one might a poor foundling that’s laid at one’s door
She combed it and washed it and clothed it and fed it,
And as if’t were her own child most tenderly bred it,
Laid the scene (of the legend, I mean,) far away a-mong the green vales underneath Himalaya.
And by artist-like touches, laid on here and there,
Made the whole thing so touching, I frankly declare
I have read it all thrice, and, perhaps I am weak,
But I found every time there were tears on my cheek.

“ The pole, science tells us, the magnet controls,
But she is a magnet to emigrant Poles,
And folks with a mission that nobody knows,
Throng thickly about her as bees round a rose ;
She can fill up the carets in such, make their scope
Converge to some focus of rational hope,
And, with sympathies fresh as the morning, their gall
Can transmute into honey,—but this is not all ;
Not only for those she has solace, oh, say,
Vice’s desperate nursling adrift in Broadway,
Who clingest, with all that is left of thee human,
To the last slender spar from the wreck of the woman,
Hast thou not found one shore where those tired drooping feet
Could reach firm mother-earth, one full heart on whose beat
The soothed head in silence reposing could hear
The chimes of far childhood throb thick on the ear ?
Ah, there’s many a beam from the fountain of day
That to reach us unclouded, must pass, on its way,
Through the soul of a woman, and hers is wide ope

To the influence of Heaven as the blue eyes of Hope ;
 Yes, a great soul is hers, one that dares to go in
 To the prison, the slave-hut, the alleys of sin,
 And to bring into each, or to find there, some line
 Of the never completely out-trampled divine ;
 If her heart at high floods swamps her brain now and then,

'T is but richer for that when the tide ebbs agen,
 As, after old Nile has subsided, his plain.
 Overflows with a second broad deluge of grain !
 What a wealth would it bring to the narrow and sour
 Could they be as a Child but for one little hour !

“What ! Irving ? thrice welcome, warm heart and fine brain,

You bring back the happiest spirit from Spain,
 And the gravest sweet humor, that ever were there
 Since Cervantes met death in his gentle despair ;
 Nay, don't be embarrassed, nor look so beseeching,—
 I sha'n't run directly against my own preaching,
 And, having just laughed at their Raphaels and Dantes,

Go to setting you up beside matchless Cervantes ;
 But allow me to speak what I honestly feel,—
 To a true poet-heart add the fun of Dick Steele,
 Throw in all of Addison, minus the chill,
 With the whole of that partnership's stock and good will,

Mix well, and while stirring, hum o'er, as a spell,
 The fine old English Gentleman, simmer it well,
 Sweeten just to your own private liking, then strain,
 That only the finest and clearest remain,
 Let it stand out of doors till a soul it receives

From the warm lazy sun loitering down through green
 leaves,
 And you 'll find a choice nature, not wholly deserving
 A name either English or Yankee,—just Irving.

“There goes,—but stet nominis umbra,—his name
 You 'll be glad enough, some day or other, to claim,
 And will all crowd about him and swear that you knew him

If some English hack-critic should chance to review
 him ;

The old porcos ante ne projiciatis

MARGARITAS, for him you have verified gratis ;
 What matters his name ? Why, it may be Sylvester,
 Judd, Junior, or Junius, Ulysses, or Nestor,
 For aught I know or care ; 't is enough that I look
 On the author of ‘ Margaret,’ the first Yankee book
 With the soul of Down East in 't, and things farther East,

As far as the threshold of morning, at least,
 Where awaits the fair dawn of the simple and true,
 Of the day that comes slowly to make all things new.
 'T has a smack of pine woods, of bare field and bleak hill

Such as only the breed of the Mayflower could till.
 The Puritan 's shown in it, tough to the core,
 Such as prayed, smiting Agag on red Marston moor ;
 With an unwilling humor, half-choked by the drouth
 In brown hollows about the inhospitable mouth ;
 With a soul full of poetry, though it has qualms
 About finding a happiness out of the Psalms ;
 Full of tenderness, too, though it shrinks in the dark,

Hamadryad-like, under the coarse, shaggy bark ;
 That sees visions, knows wrestlings of God with the
 Will,
 And has its own Sinais and thunderings still.”— Here,—“Forgive me, Apollo,” I cried, “while I pour

 My heart out to my birth-place : O, loved more and more
 Dear Baystate, from whose rocky bosom thy sons Should suck milk, strong-will-giving, brave such as runs
 In the veins of old Graylock,—who is it that dares
 Call thee pedler, a soul wrapt in bank-books and shares ?
 It is false ! She’s a Poet ! I see, as I write,
 Along the far railroad the steam-snake glide white,
 The cataract-throb of her mill-hearts I hear,
 The swift strokes of trip-hammers weary my ear,
 Sledges ring upon anvils, through logs the saw screams, Blocks swing up to their place, beetles drive home the beams :—
 It is songs such as these that she croons to the din
 Of her fast-flying shuttles, year out and year in,
 While from earth’s farthest corner there comes not a breeze
 But wafts her the buzz of her gold-gleaning bees :
 What though those horn hands have as yet found small time
 For painting and sculpture and music and rhyme ?
 These will come in due order, the need that pressed sorest
 Was to vanquish the seasons, the ocean, the forest,
 To bridle and harness the rivers, the steam,

Making that whirl her mill-wheels, this tug in her team,

To vassalize old tyrant Winter, and make
Him delve surlily for her on river and lake ;—
When this New World was parted, she strove not to shirk

Her lot in the heirdom, the tough, silent Work,
The hero-share ever, from Herakles down
To Odin, the Earth's iron sceptre and crown ;
Yes, thou dear, noble Mother ! if ever men's praise
Could be claimed for creating heroical lays,
Thou hast won it ; if ever the laurel divine
Crowned the Maker and Builder, that glory is thine !
Thy songs are right epic, they tell how this rude
Rock-rib of our earth here was tamed and subdued ;
Thou hast written them plain on the face of the planet

In brave, deathless letters of iron and granite ;
Thou hast printed them deep for all time ; they are set

From the same runic type-fount and alphabet
With thy stout Berkshire hills and the arms of thy Bay,—

They are staves from the burly old Mayflower lay.
If the drones of the Old World, in querulous ease,
Ask thy Art and thy Letters, point proudly to these,
Or, if they deny these are Letters and Art,
Toil on with the same old invincible heart ;
Thou art rearing the pedestal broad-based and grand Whereon the fair shapes of the Artist shall stand,
And creating, through labors undaunted and long,
The true theme for all Sculpture and Painting and Song !

“But my good mother Baystate wants no praise of mine,
She learned from her mother a precept divine
About something that butters no parsnips, her forte
In another direction lies, work is her sport, (Though she 'll curtsey and set her cap straight, that she will,
If you talk about Plymouth and one Bunker's hill.)
The dear, notable goodwife ! by this time of night,
Her hearth is swept clean, and her fire burning bright,
And she sits in a chair (of home plan and make) rock-
ing,
Musing much, all the while, as she darns on a stocking,
Whether turkeys will come pretty high next Thanksgiving,
Whether flour 'll be so dear, for as sure as she 's living,
She will use rye-and-injun then, whether the pig
By this time ain't got pretty tolerable big,
And whether to sell it outright will be best.
Or to smoke hams and shoulders and salt down the rest,—
At this minute, she'd swop all my verses, ah, cruel !
For the last patent stove that is saving of fuel ;
So I'll just let Apollo go on, for his phiz Shows I've kept him awaiting too long as it is.”

“If our friend, there, who seems a reporter, is through
With his burst of emotion, our theme we 'll pursue,”
Said Apollo : some smiled, and, indeed, I must own
There was something sarcastic, perhaps, in his tone ;—

“There ’s Holmes, who is matchless among you for wit ;

A Leyden-jar always full-charged, from which dit
The electrical tingles of hit after hit ;
In long poems ’t is painful sometimes and invites
A thought of the way the new Telegraph writes,
Which pricks down its little sharp sentences spitefully
As if you got more than you ’d title to rightfully,
And if it were hoping its wild father Lightning
Would flame in for a second and give you a fright’ning.
He has perfect sway of what I call a sham metre,
But many admire it, the English hexameter,
And Campbell, I think, wrote most commonly worse,
With less nerve, swing, and fire in the same kind of verse,
Nor e’er achieved aught in ’t so worthy of praise
As the tribute of Holmes to the grand Marseillaise.
You went crazy last year over Bulwer’s New Timon ;—
Why, if B., to the day of his dying, should rhyme on,
Heaping verses on verses and tomes upon tomes,
He could ne’er reach the best point and vigor of Holmes.

His are just the fine hands, too, to weave you a lyric
Full of fancy, fun, feeling, or spiced with satiric
In so kindly a measure, that nobody knows
What to do but e’en join in the laugh, friends and foes.

“There is Lowell, who ’s striving Parnassus to climb
With a whole bale of isms tied together with rhyme.
He might get on alone, spite of brambles and boulders,
But he can’t with that bundle he has on his shoulders,
The top of the hill he will ne’er come nigh reaching Till he learns the distinction ’twixt singing and preach
ing ;

His lyre has some chords that would ring pretty well,
But he 'd rather by half make a drum of the shell,
And rattle away till he 's old as Methusalem,
At the head of a march to the last new Jerusalem.

“ There goes Halleck whose Fanny 's a pseudo Don Juan,

With the wickedness out that gave salt to the true one,
He 's a wit, though, I hear, of the very first order,
And once made a pun on the words soft Recorder ;
More than this, he 's a very great poet, I 'm told,
And has had his works published in crimson and gold,
With something they call ‘ Illustrations,’ to wit,
Like those with which Chapman obscured Holy Writ,¹
Which are said to illustrate, because, as I view it,
Like lucus a non, they precisely don't do it ;
Let a man who can write what himself understands
Keep clear, if he can, of designing men's hands,
Who bury the sense, if there 's any worth having,
And then very honestly call it engraving.
But, to quit badinage, which there is n't much wit in,
No doubt Halleck 's better than all he has written ;
In his verse a clear glimpse you will frequently find,
If not of a great, of a fortunate mind,
Which contrives to be true to its natural loves
In a world of back-offices, ledgers and stoves.
When his heart breaks away from the brokers and banks,
And kneels in its own private shrine to give thanks,
There 's a genial manliness in him that earns
Our sincerest respect, (read, for instance, his “ Burns ”)
And we can't but regret (seek excuse where we may)
That so much of a man has been peddled away.

¹{Cuts rightly called wooden, as all must admit.)

“ But what ’s that ? a mass-meeting ? No, there come in lots

The American Disraelis, Bulwers, and Scotts,
And in short the American everything-elses,
Each charging the others with envies and jealousies ;—
By the way, ’t is a fact that displays what profusions
Of all kinds of greatness bless free institutions,
That while the Old World has produced barely eight
Of such poets as all men agree to call great,
And of other great characters hardly a score,
(One might safely say less than that rather than more,)
With you every year a whole crop is begotten,
They ’re as much of a staple as corn, or as cotton ;
Why, there ’s scarcely a huddle of log-huts and shanties
That has not brought forth its own Miltons and Dantes ;
I myself know ten Byrons, one Coleridge, three Shelleys,
Two Raphaels, six Titians, (I think) one Apelles,
Leonardos and Rubenses plenty as lichens,
One (but that one is plenty) American Dickens,
A whole flock of Lambs, any number of Tennysons,—
In short, if a man has the luck to have any sons,
He may feel pretty certain that one out of twain
Will be some very great person over again.
There is one inconvenience in all this which lies
In the fact that by contrast we estimate size,¹
And, when there are none except Titans, great stature
Is only a simple proceeding of nature.
What puff the strained sails of your praise shall you furl at, if

¹That is in most cases we do, but not all,
Past a doubt, there are men who are innately small,
Such as Blank, who, without being ’minished a tittle,
Might stand for a type of the Absolute Little.

The calmest degree that you know is superlative ?
At Rome, all whom Charon took into his wherry must,
As a matter of course, be well issimused and errimused,
A Greek, too, could feel, while in that famous boat he tost,
That his friends would take care he was ιστοsed and ωτατοsed,
And formerly we, as through grave-yards we past,
Thought the world went from bad to worse fearfully fast;
Let us glance for a moment, 't is well worth the pains,
And note what an average grave-yard contains ;
There lie levellers levelled, duns done up themselves,
There are booksellers finally laid on their shelves,
Horizontally there lie upright politicians,
Dose-a-dose with their patients sleep faultless physicians,
There are slave-drivers quietly whipt under-ground,
There book-binders, done up in boards, are fast bound,
There card-players wait till the last trump be played,
There all the choice spirits get finally laid,
There the babe that 's unborn is supplied with a berth,
There men without legs get their six feet of earth,
There lawyers repose, each wrapt up in his case,
There seekers of office are sure of a place,
There defendant and plaintiff get equally cast,
There shoemakers quietly stick to the last,
There brokers at length become silent as stocks,
There stage-drivers sleep without quitting their box,
And so forth and so forth and so forth and so on,

With this kind of stuff one might endlessly go on ;
 To come to the point, I may safely assert you
 Will find in each yard every cardinal virtue ;¹
 Each has six truest patriots : four discoverers of ether,

Who never had thought on 't nor mentioned it either :

Ten poets, the greatest who ever wrote rhyme :
 Two hundred and forty first men of their time :
 One person whose portrait just gave the least hint
 Its original had a most horrible squint :
 One critic, most (what do they call it ?) reflective,
 Who never had used the phrase ob- or subjective :
 Forty fathers of Freedom, of whom twenty bred
 Their sons for the rice-swamps, at so much a head,
 And their daughters for—faugh ! thirty mothers of Gracchi :

Non-resistants who gave many a spiritual black-eye :
 Eight true friends of their kind, one of whom was a jailor :

Four captains almost as astounding as Taylor :
 Two dozen of Italy's exiles who shoot us his Kaisership daily, stern pen-and-ink Brutuses,
 Who, in Yankee back-parlors, with crucified smile,²
 Mount serenely their country's funereal pile :
 Ninety-nine Irish heroes, ferocious rebellers
 'Gainst the Saxon in cis-marine garrets and cellars,
 Who shake their dread fists o'er the sea and all that,—

¹ (And at this just conclusion will surely arrive,
 That the goodness of earth is more dead than alive.)

² Not forgetting their tea and their toast, though, the while.

As long as a copper drops into the hat :
 Nine hundred Teutonic republicans stark
 From Vaterland's battles just won—in the Park,
 Who the happy profession of martyrdom take
 Whenever it gives them a chance at a steak :
 Sixty-two second Washingtons : two or three Jacksons :
 And so many everythings else that it racks one's Poor memory too much to continue the list,
 Especially now they no longer exist ;—
 I would merely observe that you 've taken to giving
 The puffs that belong to the dead to the living,
 And that somehow your trump-of-contemporary-doom's tones
 Is tuned after old dedications and tombstones."

Here the critic came in and a thistle presented ¹—
 From a frown to a smile the god's features relented,
 As he stared at his envoy, who, swelling with pride,
 To the god's asking look, nothing daunted, replied,
 "You 're surprised, I suppose, I was absent so long,
 But your godship respecting the lilies was wrong ;
 I hunted the garden from one end to t' other,
 And got no reward but vexation and bother,
 Till, tossed out with weeds in a corner to wither,
 This one lily I found and made haste to bring hither."

"Did he think I had given him a book to review ?
 I ought to have known what the fellow would do," Muttered Phœbus aside, "for a thistle will pass
 Beyond doubt for the queen of all flowers with an ass ;
 He has chosen in just the same way as he 'd choose

¹ Turn back now to page—goodness only knows what,
 And take a fresh hold on the thread of my plot.

His specimens out of the books he reviews ;
And now, as this offers an excellent text,
I 'll give 'em some brief hints on criticism next."
So, musing a moment, he turned to the crowd,
And, clearing his voice, spoke as follows aloud,—

“ My friends, in the happier days of the muse,
We were luckily free from such things as reviews ;
Then naught came between with its fog to make clearer
The heart of the poet to that of his hearer ;
Then the poet brought heaven to the people, and they Felt that they, too, were poets in hearing his lay ;
Then the poet was prophet, the past in his soul
Pre-created the future, both parts of one whole ;
Then for him there was nothing too great or too small,
For one natural deity sanctified all ;
Then the bard owned no clipper and meter of moods
Save the spirit of silence that hovers and broods
O'er the seas and the mountains, the rivers and woods ;
He asked not earth's verdict, forgetting the clods,
His soul soared and sang to an audience of gods ;
'T was for them that he measured the thought and the line,
And shaped for their vision the perfect design,
With as glorious a foresight, a balance as true,
As swung out the worlds in the infinite blue ;
Then a glory and greatness invested man's heart,
The universal, which now stands estranged and apart,
In the free individual moulded, was Art ;
Then the forms of the Artist seemed thrilled with desire
For something, as yet unattained, fuller, higher,
As once with her lips, lifted hands, and eyes listening,

And her whole upward soul in her countenance glisten-
 ing,
 Eurydice stood—like a beacon unfired,
 Which, once touched with flame, will leap heav'nward inspired—
 And waited with answering kindle to mark
 The first gleam of Orpheus that pained the red Dark;
 Then painting, song, sculpture, did more than relieve
 The need that men feel to create and believe,
 And as, in all beauty, who listens with love,
 Hears these words oft repeated—‘beyond and above,’
 So these seemed to be but the visible sign
 Of the grasp of the soul after things more divine;
 They were ladders the Artist erected to climb
 O'er the narrow horizon of space and of time,
 And we see there the footsteps by which men had gained
 To the one rapturous glimpse of the never-attained,
 As shepherds could erst sometimes trace in the sod
 The last spurning print of a sky-cleaving god.

“But now, on the poet's dis-privacied moods
 With do this and do that the pert critic intrudes;
 While he thinks he's been barely fulfilling his duty
 To interpret 'twixt men and their own sense of beauty,
 And has striven, while others sought honor or pelf,
 To make his kind happy as he was himself,
 He finds he's been guilty of horrid offences
 In all kinds of moods, numbers, genders, and tenses;
 He's been ob and subjective, what Kettle calls Pot.
 Precisely, at all events, what he ought not,
You have done this, says one judge; done that, says another;

You should have done this, grumbles one ; that, says
t' other ;

Never mind what he touches, one shrieks out Taboo!
And while he is wondering what he shall do,
Since each suggests opposite topics for song,
They all shout together you're right! or you're wrong!

“ Nature fits all her children with something to do,
He who would write and can't write, can surely review,
Can set up a small booth as critic and sell us his Petty conceit and his pettier jealousies ;
Thus a lawyer's apprentice, just out of his teens,
Will do for the Jeffrey of six magazines ;
Having read Johnson's lives of the poets half through,
There's nothing on earth he's not competent to ;
He reviews with as much nonchalance as he whistles,—
He goes through a book and just picks out the thistles,
It matters not whether he blame or commend,
If he's bad as a foe, he's far worse as a friend ;
Let an author but write what's above his poor scope,
And he'll go to work gravely and twist up a rope,
And, inviting the world to see punishment done,
Hang himself up to bleach in the wind and the sun ;
'T is delightful to see, when a man comes along
Who has any thing in him peculiar and strong,
Every cockboat that swims clear its fierce (pop-) gun-deck at him
And make as he passes its ludicrous Peck at him,”—

Here Miranda came up and began, “ As to that,”— Apollo at once seized his gloves, cane, and hat,
And seeing the place getting rapidly cleared,
I, too, snatched my notes and forthwith disappeared.

THE VISION OF SIR LAUNFAL.

PRELUDE TO PART FIRST.

OVER his keys the musing organist,
Beginning doubtfully and far away,
First lets his fingers wander as they list,
And builds a bridge from Dreamland for his lay.
Then, as the touch of his loved instrument
Gives hope and fervor, nearer draws his theme,
First guessed by faint auroral flushes sent
Along the wavering vista of his dream.

Not only around our infancy
Doth heaven with all its splendors lie ;
Daily, with souls that cringe and blot,
We Sinais climb and know it not ;

Over our manhood bend the skies ;
Against our fallen and traitor lives
The great winds utter prophecies ;
With our faint hearts the mountain strives ;
Its arms outstretched, the druid wood
Waits with its benedicite ;
And to our age's drowsy blood
Still shouts the inspiring sea.
Earth gets its price for what Earth gives us ;
The beggar is taxed for a corner to die in,

The priest hath his fee who comes and shrives us,

We bargain for the graves we lie in ;
At the Devil's booth are all things sold,
Each ounce of dross costs its ounce of gold ;

For a cap and bells our lives we pay,
Bubbles we earn with a whole soul's tasking ;

'T is heaven alone that is given away,
'T is only God may be had for the asking ;
There is no price set on the lavish summer ;
And June may be had by the poorest comer.

And what is so rare as a day in June ?

Then, if ever, come perfect days ;
Then Heaven tries the earth if it be in tune,

And over it softly her warm ear lays :
Whether we look, or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur, or see it glisten ;
Every clod feels a stir of might,

An instinct within it that reaches and towers,
And, grasping blindly above it for light,

Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers ;
The flush of life may well be seen

Thrilling back over hills and valleys ;
The cowslip startles in meadows green,

The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice,
And there's never a leaf or a blade too mean

To be some happy creature's palace ;
The little bird sits at his door in the sun,

Atilt like a blossom among the leaves,
And lets his illumined being o'errun

With the deluge of summer it receives ;
His mate feels the eggs beneath her wings,
And the heart in her dumb breast flutters and sings ;

He sings to the wide world, and she to her nest,—
In the nice ear of Nature which song is the best ?

Now is the high-tide of the year,

And whatever of life hath ebb'd away
Comes flooding back, with a ripply cheer,

Into every bare inlet and creek and bay ;
Now the heart is so full that a drop overfills it,
We are happy now because God so wills it ;
No matter how barren the past may have been,
'T is enough for us now that the leaves are green ;
We sit in the warm shade and feel right well
How the sap creeps up and the blossoms swell ;
We may shut our eyes, but we cannot help knowing
That skies are clear and grass is growing ;
The breeze comes whispering in our ear,
That dandelions are blossoming near,

That maize has sprouted, that streams are flowing,
That the river is bluer than the sky,
That the robin is plastering his house hard by ;
And if the breeze kept the good news back,
For other couriers we should not lack ;

We could guess it all by yon heifer's lowing,—
And hark ! how clear bold chanticleer,
Warmed with the new wine of the year,
Tells all in his lusty crowing !

Joy comes, grief goes, we know not how ;
Everything is happy now,

Everything is upward striving ;
'T is easy now for the heart to be true
As for grass to be green or skies to be blue,—
'T is the natural way of living :

Who knows whither the clouds have fled ?
In the unscarred heaven they leave no wake ;
And the eyes forget the tears they have shed,
The heart forgets its sorrow and ache ;
The soul partakes the season's youth,
And the sulphurous rifts of passion and woe
Lie deep 'neath a silence pure and smooth,
Like burnt-out craters healed with snow.
What wonder if Sir Launfal now
Remembered the keeping of his vow ?

PART FIRST.

I.

“ My golden spurs now bring to me,
And bring to me my richest mail,
For to-morrow I go over land and sea
In search of the Holy Grail ;
Shall never a bed for me be spread,
Nor shall a pillow be under my head,
Till I begin my vow to keep ;
Here on the rushes will I sleep,
And perchance there may come a vision true
Ere day create the world anew.”

Slowly Sir Launfal's eyes grew dim,
Slumber fell like a cloud on him,
And into his soul the vision flew.

II.

The crows flapped over by twos and threes,
In the pool drowsed the cattle up to their knees,
The little birds sang as if it were
The one day of summer in all the year,

And the very leaves seemed to sing on the trees :
The castle alone in the landscape lay
Like an outpost of winter, dull and gray ;
'T was the proudest hall in the North Countree,
And never its gates might opened be,
Save to lord or lady of high degree ;
Summer besieged it on every side,
But the churlish stone her assaults defied ;
She could not scale the chilly wall,
Though around it for leagues her pavilions tall
Stretched left and right,
Over the hills and out of sight ;
 Green and broad was every tent,
 And out of each a murmur went
Till the breeze fell off at night.

III.

The drawbridge dropped with a surly clang,
And through the dark arch a charger sprang,
Bearing Sir Launfal, the maiden knight,
In his gilded mail, that flamed so bright
It seemed the dark castle had gathered all
Those shafts the fierce sun had shot over its wall
 In his siege of three hundred summers long,
And, binding them all in one blazing sheaf,
 Had cast them forth : so, young and strong,
And lightsome as a locust-leaf,
Sir Launfal flashed forth in his unscarred mail,
To seek in all climes for the Holy Grail.

IV.

It was morning on hill and stream and tree,
 And morning in the young knight's heart ;

Only the castle moodily
Rebuffed the gifts of the sunshine free,
And gloomed by itself apart ;
The season brimmed all other things up
Full as the rain fills the pitcher-plant's cup.

V.

As Sir Launfal made morn through the darksome gate,
He was ware of a leper, crouched by the same,
Who begged with his hand and moaned as he sate ;
And a loathing over Sir Launfal came ;
The sunshine went out of his soul with a thrill,
The flesh 'neath his armor did shrink and crawl,
And midway its leap his heart stood still
Like a frozen waterfall ;
For this man, so foul and bent of stature,
Rasped harshly against his dainty nature,
And seemed the one blot on the summer morn,—
So he tossed him a piece of gold in scorn.

VI.

The leper raised not the gold from the dust :
“ Better to me the poor man's crust.
Better the blessing of the poor,
Though I turn me empty from his door ;
That is no true alms which the hand can hold ;
He gives nothing but worthless gold
Who gives from a sense of duty ;
But he who gives but a slender mite,
And gives to that which is out of sight,
That thread of the all-sustaining Beauty
Which runs through all and doth all unite,—

The hand cannot clasp the whole of his alms,
The heart outstretches its eager palms,
For a god goes with it and makes it store
To the soul that was starving in darkness before."

PRELUDE TO PART SECOND.

DOWN swept the chill wind from the mountain peak,
From the snow five thousand summers old ;
On open wold and hill-top bleak
It had gathered all the cold,
And whirled it like sleet on the wanderer's cheek
It carried a shiver everywhere
From the unleaved boughs and pastures bare ;
The little brook heard it and built a roof
'Neath which he could house him, winter-proof ;
All night by the white stars' frosty gleams
He groined his arches and matched his beams ;
Slender and clear were his crystal spars
As the lashes of light that trim the stars :
He sculptured every summer delight
In his halls and chambers out of sight ;
Sometimes his tinkling waters slipt
Down through a frost-leaved forest-crypt,
Long, sparkling aisles of steel-stemmed trees
Bending to counterfeit a breeze ;
Sometimes the roof no fretwork knew
But silvery mosses that downward grew ;
Sometimes it was carved in sharp relief
With quaint arabesques of ice-fern leaf ;
Sometimes it was simply smooth and clear
For the gladness of heaven to shine through, and here
He had caught the nodding bulrush-tops
And hung them thickly with diamond drops,

That crystallised the beams of moon and sun,
And made a star of every one :
No mortal builder's most rare device
Could match this winter-palace of ice ;
'T was as if every image that mirrored lay
In his depths serene through the summer day,
Each fleeting shadow of earth and sky,
 Lest the happy model should be lost,
Had been mimicked in fairy masonry
 By the elfin builders of the frost.

Within the hall are song and laughter,
 The cheeks of Christmas grow red and jolly,
And sprouting is every corbel and rafter
 With lightsome green of ivy and holly ;
Through the deep gulf of the chimney wide
Wallows the Yule-log's roaring tide ;
The broad flame-pennons droop and flap
 And belly and tug as a flag in the wind ;
Like a locust shrills the imprisoned sap,
 Hunted to death in its galleries blind ;
And swift little troops of silent sparks,
 Now pausing, now scattering away as in fear,
Go threading the soot-forest's tangled darks
 Like herds of startled deer.

But the wind without was eager and sharp,
Of Sir Launfal's gray hair it makes a harp,
 And rattles and wrings
 The icy strings,
Singing, in dreary monotone,
A Christmas carol of its own,
Whose burden still, as he might guess,

Was—" Shelterless, shelterless, shelterless !"
The voice of the seneschal flared like a torch
As he shouted the wanderer away from the porch,
And he sat in the gateway and saw all night
The great hall-fire, so cheery and bold,
Through the window-slits of the castle old,
Build out its piers of ruddy light
Against the drift of the cold.

PART SECOND.

I.

THERE was never a leaf on a bush or tree,
The bare boughs rattled shudderingly ;
The river was dumb and could not speak,
For the frost's swift shuttles its shroud had spun :
A single crow on the tree-top bleak
From his shining feathers shed off the cold sun ;
Again it was morning, but shrunk and cold,
As if her veins were sapless and old,
And she rose up decrepitly
For a last dim look at earth and sea.

II.

Sir Launfal turned from his own hard gate,
For another heir in his earldom sate ;
An old, bent man, worn out and frail,
He came back from seeking the Holy Grail ;
Little he recked of his earldom's loss,
No more on his surcoat was blazoned the cross,
But deep in his soul the sign he wore,
The badge of the suffering and the poor.

III.

Sir Launfal's raiment thin and spare
Was idle mail 'gainst the barbèd air,
For it was just at the Christmas time ;
So he mused, as he sat, of a sunnier clime,
And sought for a shelter from cold and snow
In the light and warmth of long ago ;
He sees the snake-like caravan crawl
O'er the edge of the desert, black and small,
Then nearer and nearer, till, one by one,
He can count the camels in the sun,
As over the red-hot sands they pass
To where, in its slender necklace of grass,
The little spring laughed and leapt in the shade,
And with its own self like an infant played,
And waved its signal of palms.

IV.

“ For Christ's sweet sake, I beg an alms ; ”—
The happy camels may reach the spring,
But Sir Launfal sees naught save the grewsome thing,
The leper, lank as the rain-blanchèd bone,
That cowers beside him, a thing as lone
And white as the ice-isles of Northern seas
In the desolate horror of his disease.

V.

And Sir Launfal said,—“ I behold in thee
An image of Him who died on the tree ;
Thou also hast had thy crown of thorns,—
Thou also hast had the world's buffets and scorns,—
And to thy life were not denied

The wounds in the hands and feet and side :
Mild Mary's Son, acknowledge me ;
Behold, through him, I give to thee !”

VI.

Then the soul of the leper stood up in his eyes
And looked at Sir Launfal, and straightway he Remembered in what a haughtier guise
He had flung an alms to leprosie,
When he caged his young life up in gilded mail
And set forth in search of the Holy Grail.
The heart within him was ashes and dust ;
He parted in twain his single crust,
He broke the ice on the streamlet's brink,
And gave the leper to eat and drink,
'T was a mouldy crust of coarse brown bread,
'T was water out of a wooden bowl,—
Yet with fine wheaten bread was the leper fed,
And 't was red wine he drank with his thirsty soul.

VII.

As Sir Launfal mused with a downcast face,
A light shone round about the place ;
The leper no longer crouched at his side,
But stood before him glorified,
Shining and tall and fair and straight
As the pillar that stood by the Beautiful Gate,— Himself the Gate whereby men can Enter the temple of God in Man.

VIII.

His words were shed softer than leaves from the pine,
And they fell on Sir Launfal as snows on the brine,

That mingle their softness and quiet in one
With the shaggy unrest they float down upon ;
And the voice that was calmer than silence said, “ Lo it is I, be not afraid !
In many climes, without avail,
Thou hast spent thy life for the Holy Grail ;
Behold, it is here,—this cup which thou
Didst fill at the streamlet for me but now ;
This crust is my body broken for thee,
This water His blood that died on the tree ;
The Holy Supper is kept, indeed,
In whatso we share with another’s need ;
Not what we give, but what we share,—
For the gift without the giver is bare ;
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,— Himself, his hungering neighbor, and me.”

IX.

Sir Launfal awoke as from a swoond :—
“ The Grail in my castle here is found !
Hang my idle armor up on the wall,
Let it be the spider’s banquet-hall ;
He must be fenced with stronger mail
Who would seek and find the Holy Grail.”

X.

The castle gate stands open now,
And the wanderer is welcome to the hall
As the hangbird is to the elm-tree bough ;
No longer scowl the turrets tall,
The Summer’s long siege at last is o’er ;
When the first poor outcast went in at the door,
She entered with him in disguise,

And mastered the fortress by surprise ;
There is no spot she loves so well on ground,
She lingers and smiles there the whole year round ;
The meanest serf on Sir Launfal's land
Has hall and bower at his command ;
And there 's no poor man in the North Countree
But is lord of the earldom as much as he.

NOTE.—According to the mythology of the Romancers, the San Greal, or Holy Grail, was the cup out of which Jesus partook of the last supper with his disciples. It was brought into England by Joseph of Arimathea, and remained there, an object of pilgrimage and adoration, for many years in the keeping of his lineal descendants. It was incumbent upon those who had charge of it to be chaste in thought, word and deed ; but one of the keepers having broken this condition, the Holy Grail disappeared. From that time it was a favorite enterprise of the knights of Arthur's court to go in search of it. Sir Galahad was at last successful in finding it, as may be read in the seventeenth book of the Romance of King Arthur. Tennyson has made Sir Galahad the subject of one of the most exquisite of his poems.

The plot (if I may give that name to anything so slight) of the foregoing poem is my own, and, to serve its purposes, I have enlarged the circle of competition in search of the miraculous cup in such a manner as to include, not only other persons than the heroes of the Round Table, but also a period of time subsequent to the date of King Arthur's reign.

APPLEDORE.

How looks Appledore in a storm ?

I have seen it when its crags seemed frantic,
Butting against the maddened Atlantic,
When surge after surge would heap enorme,
Cliffs of Emerald topped with snow,
That lifted and lifted and then let go
A great white avalanche of thunder,
A grinding, blinding, deafening ire
Monadnock might have trembled under ;
And the island, whose rock-roots pierce below
To where they are warmed with the central fire,
You could feel its granite fibres racked,
As it seemed to plunge with a shudder and thrill
Right at the breast of the swooping hill,
And to rise again, snorting a cataract
Of rage-froth from every cranny and ledge,
While the sea drew its breath in hoarse and deep,
And the next vast breaker curled its edge,
Gathering itself for a mighty leap.

North, east, and south there are reefs and breakers,
You would never dream of in smooth weather,
That toss and gore the sea for acres,
Bellowing and gnashing and snarling together ;
Look northward where Duck Island lies,
And over its crown you will see arise,
Against a background of slaty skies,

A row of pillars still and white
That glimmer and then are out of sight,
As if the moon should suddenly kiss,

While you crossed the dusty desert by night,
The long colonnades of Persepolis,
And then as sudden a darkness should follow
To gulp the whole scene at a single swallow,
The city's ghost, the drear brown waste,
And the string of camels, clumsy-paced :—
Look southward for White Island light,

The lantern stands ninety feet o'er the tide ;
There is first a half-mile of tumult and fight,
Of dash and roar and tumble and fright,

And surging bewilderment wild and wide,
Where the breakers struggle left and right,

Then a mile or more of rushing sea,
And then the light-house slim and lone ;
And whenever the whole weight of ocean is thrown
Full and fair on White Island head,

A great mist-jotun you will see
Lifting himself up silently
High and huge o'er the light-house top,
With hands of wavering spray outspread,
Groping after the little tower,
That seems to shrink, and shorten and cower,
Till the monster's arms of a sudden drop,
And silently and fruitlessly
He sinks again into the sea.

You, meanwhile, where drenched you stand,
Awaken once more to the rush and roar
And on the rock-point tighten your hand,
As you turn and see a valley deep,

That was not there a moment before,
Suck rattling down between you and a heap
Of toppling billow, whose instant fall
Must sink the whole island once for all—
Or watch the silenter, stealthier seas
Feeling their way to you more and more ;
If they once should clutch you high as the knees
They would whirl you down like a sprig of kelp,
Beyond all reach of hope or help ;—
And such in a storm is Appledore.

TO THE DANDELION.

DEAR common flower, that grow'st beside the way,
Fringing the dusty road with harmless gold,

First pledge of blithesome May,
Which children pluck, and, full of pride, uphold,
High-hearted buccaneers, o'erjoyed that they
An Eldorado in the grass have found,

Which not the rich earth's ample round
May match in wealth—thou art more dear to me
Than all the prouder Summer-blooms may be.

Gold such as thine ne'er drew the Spanish prow
Through the primeval hush of Indian seas,

Nor wrinkled the lean brow
Of age, to rob the lover's heart of ease ;
'Tis the Spring's largess, which she scatters now
To rich and poor alike, with lavish hand,

Though most hearts never understand
To take it at God's value, but pass by
The offered wealth with unrewarded eye.

Thou art my tropics and mine Italy ;
To look at thee unlocks a warmer clime ;
The eyes thou givest me
Are in the heart and heed not space or time :
Not in mid June the golden-cuirassed bee
Feels a more Summer-like, warm ravishment
In the white lily's breezy tent,
His fragrant Sybaris, than I, when first
From the dark green thy yellow circles burst.

Then think I of deep shadows in the grass,—
Of meadows where in sun the cattle graze,
Where, as the breezes pass,
The gleaming rushes lean a thousand ways,—
Of leaves that slumber in a cloudy mass,
Or whiten in the wind,—of waters blue
That from the distance sparkle through
Some woodland gap,—and of a sky above
Where one white cloud like a stray lamb doth move.

My childhood's earliest thoughts are linked with thee ;
The sight of thee calls back the robin's song,
Who from the dark old tree
Beside the door, sang clearly all day long,
And I, secure in childish piety,
Listened as if I heard an angel sing
With news from Heaven, which he could bring Fresh every day to my untainted ears,
When birds and flowers and I were happy peers.

Thou art the type of those meek charities
Which make up half the nobleness of life,
Those cheap delights the wise
Pluck from the dusty wayside of earth's strife ;

Words of frank cheer, glances of friendly eyes,
Love's smallest coin, which yet to some may give

The morsel that may keep alive
A starving heart, and teach it to behold
Some glimpse of God where all before was cold.

Thy wingèd seeds, whereof the winds take care,
Are like the words of poet and of sage

Which through the free heaven fare,
And, now unheeded, in another age
Take root, and to the gladdened future bear
That witness which the present would not heed,
Bringing forth many a thought and deed,
And, planted safely in the eternal sky,
Bloom into stars which earth is guided by.

Full of deep love thou art, yet not more full
Than all thy common brethren of the ground,

Wherein, were we not dull,
Some words of highest wisdom might be found ;
Yet earnest faith from day to day may cull
Some syllables, which, rightly joined, can make
A spell to soothe life's bitterest ache,
And ope Heaven's portals, which are near us still,
Yea, nearer ever than the gates of Ill.

How like a prodigal doth nature seem,
When thou, for all thy gold, so common art !

Thou teachest me to deem
More sacredly of every human heart,
Since each reflects in joy its scanty gleam
Of Heaven, and could some wondrous secret show,
Did we but pay the love we owe,

And with a child's undoubting wisdom look
On all these living pages of God's book.

But let me read thy lesson right or no,
Of one good gift from thee my heart is sure ;

Old I shall never grow

While thou each year dost come to keep me pure
With legends of my childhood ; ah, we owe
Well more than half life's holiness to these

Nature's first lowly influences,

At thought of which the heart's glad doors burst open,
In dreariest days, to welcome peace and hope.

DARA.

WHEN Persia's sceptre trembled in a hand
Wilted by harem-heats, and all the land

Was hovered over by those vulture ills
That snuff decaying empire from afar,
Then, with a nature balanced as a star,
Dara arose, a shepherd of the hills.

He, who had governed fleecy subjects well,
Made his own vintage, by the self-same spell,

Secure and peaceful as a guarded fold,
Till, gathering strength by slow and wise degrees,
Under his sway, to neighbor villages
Order returned, and faith and justice old.

Now, when it fortune'd that a king more wise
Endued the realm with brain and hands and eyes,

He sought on every side men brave and just,
And having heard the mountain-shepherd's praise,
How he rendered the mould of elder days,
To Dara gave a satrapy in trust.

So Dara shepherded a province wide,
Nor in his viceroy's sceptre took more pride
Than in his crook before ; but Envy finds
More soil in cities than on mountains bare,
And the frank sun of spirits clear and rare
Breeds poisonous fogs in low and marish minds.

Soon it was whispered at the royal ear
That, though wise Dara's province, year by year,
Like a great sponge, drew wealth and plenty up,
Yet, when he squeezed it at the king's behest,
Some golden drops, more rich than all the rest,
Went to the filling of his private cup.

For proof, they said that wheresoe'er he went
A chest, beneath whose weight the camel bent,
Went guarded, and no other eye had seen
What was therein, save only Dara's own,
Yet, when 't was opened all his tent was known
To glow and lighten with heapt jewels' sheen.

The king set forth for Dara's province straight,
Where, as was fit, outside his city's gate
The viceroy met him with a stately train ;
And there, with archers circled, close at hand,
A camel with the chest was seen to stand,
The king grew red, for thus the guilt was plain.

"Open me now," he cried, "yon treasure-chest !"
"T was done, and only a worn shepherd's vest

Was found within ; some blushed and hung the head,
Not Dara ; open as the sky's blue roof
He stood, and " O, my lord, behold the proof
That I was worthy of my trust ! " he said.

" For ruling men, lo ! all the charm I had ;
My soul, in those coarse vestments ever clad,
Still to the unstained past kept true and leal,
Still on these plains could breathe her mountain air,
And Fortune's heaviest gifts serenely bear,
Which bend men from the truth, and make them reel.

" To govern wisely I had shown small skill
Were I not lord of simple Dara still ;
That sceptre kept, I cannot lose my way ! "
Strange dew in royal eyes grew round and bright
And thrilled the trembling lids ; before 't was night
Two added provinces blessed Dara's sway.

TO J. F. H.

NINE years have slipped like hour-glass sand
From life's fast-emptying globe away,
Since last, dear friend, I clasped your hand,
And lingered on the impoverished land,
Watching the steamer down the bay.

I held the keepsake which you gave,
Until the dim smoke-pennon curled
O'er the vague rim 'tween sky and wave,
And closed the distance like a grave,
Leaving me to the outer world ;

The old worn world of hurry and heat,
The young, fresh world of thought and scope ;
While you, where silent surges fleet
Toward far sky beaches still and sweet,
Sunk wavering down the ocean-slope.

Come back our ancient walks to tread,
Old haunts of lost or scattered friends,
Amid the Muses' factories red,
Where song, and smoke, and laughter sped
The nights to proctor-hunted ends.

Our old familiars are not laid,
Though snapped our wands and sunk our books,
They beckon, not to be gainsaid,
Where, round broad meads which mowers wade,
Smooth Charles his steel-blue sickle crooks ;

Where, as the cloudbergs eastward blow,
From glow to gloom the hillside shifts
Its lakes of rye that surge and flow,
Its plumps of orchard-trees arow,
Its snowy white-weed's summer drifts.

Or let us to Nantasket, there
To wander idly as we list,
Whether, on rocky hillocks bare,
Sharp cedar-points, like breakers, tear
The trailing fringes of gray mist.

Or whether, under skies clear-blown,
The heightening surfs with foamy din,
Their breeze-caught forelocks backward blown
Against old Neptune's yellow zone,
Curl slow, and plunge forever in.

For years thrice three, wise Horace said,
A poem rare let silence bind ;
And love may ripen in the shade,
Like ours, for nine long seasons laid
In crypts and arches of the mind.

That right Falernian friendship old
Will we, to grace our feast, call up,
And freely pour the juice of gold,
That keeps life's pulses warm and bold,
Till Death shall break the empty cup.

PROMETHEUS.

ONE after one the stars have risen and set,
Sparkling upon the hoarfrost on my chain :
The Bear that prowled all night about the fold
Of the North-Star, hath shrunk into his den,
Scared by the blithesome footsteps of the Dawn,
Whose blushing smile floods all the Orient ;
And now bright Lucifer grows less and less,
Into the heaven's blue quiet deep withdrawn.
Sunless and starless all, the desert sky
Arches above me, empty as this heart
For ages hath been empty of all joy
Except to brood upon its silent hope,
As o'er its hope of day the sky doth now.
All night have I heard voices : deeper yet
The deep, low breathing of the silence grew,
While all about, muffled in awe, there stood
Shadows, or forms, or both, clear-felt at heart ;
But, when I turned to front them, far along
Only a shudder through the midnight ran,

And the dense stillness walled me closer round ;
But still I heard them wander up and down
That solitude, and flappings of dusk wings
Did mingle with them, whether of those hags
Let slip upon me once from Hades deep,
Or of yet direr torments, if such be,
I could but guess ; and then toward me came
A shape as of a woman : very pale
It was, and calm ; its cold eyes did not move,
And mine moved not, but only stared on them.
Their moveless awe went through my brain like ice ;
A skeleton hand seemed clutching at my heart,
And a sharp chill, as if a dank night fog
Suddenly closed me in, was all I felt :
And then, methought, I heard a freezing sigh,
A long, deep, shivering sigh, as from blue lips
Stiffening in death, close to mine ear. I thought
Some doom was close upon me, and I looked
And saw the red moon through the heavy mist,
Just setting, and it seemed as it were falling,
Or reeling to its fall, so dim and dead
And palsy-struck it looked. Then all sounds merged
Into the rising surges of the pines,
Which, leagues below me, clothing the gaunt loins
Of ancient Caucasus with hairy strength,
Sent up a murmur in the morning-wind,
Sad as the wail that from the populous earth
All day and night to high Olympus soars,
Fit incense to thy wicked throne, O Jove.

Thy hated name is tossed once more in scorn
From off my lips, for I will tell thy doom.
And are these tears ? Nay, do not triumph, Jove !

They are wrung from me but by the agonies
Of prophecy, like those sparse drops which fall
From clouds in travail of the lightning, when
The great wave of the storm, high-curved and black,
Rolls steadily onward to its thunderous break.
Why art thou made a god of, thou poor type
Of anger, and revenge, and cunning force ?
True Power was never born of brutish Strength,
Nor sweet Truth suckled at the shaggy dugs
Of that old she-wolf. Are thy thunderbolts,
That scare the darkness for a space, so strong
As the prevailing patience of meek Light,
Who, with the invincible tenderness of peace,
Wins it to be a portion of herself ?
Why art thou made a god of, thou, who hast
The never-sleeping terror at thy heart,
That birthright of all tyrants, worse to bear
Than this thy ravening bird on which I smile ?
Thou swear'st to free me, if I will unfold
What kind of doom it is whose omen flits
Across thy heart, as o'er a troop of doves
The fearful shadow of the kite. What need
To know that truth whose knowledge cannot save ?
Evil its errand hath, as well as Good ;
When thine is finished, thou art known no more :
There is a higher purity than thou,
And higher purity is greater strength ;
Thy nature is thy doom, at which thy heart
Trembles behind the thick wall of thy might.
Let man but hope, and thou art straightway chilled
With thought of that drear silence and deep night
Which, like a dream, shall swallow thee and thine :
Let man but will, and thou art god no more ;

More capable of ruin than the gold
And ivory that image thee on earth.
He who hurled down the monstrous Titan-brood
Blinded with lightnings, with rough thunders stunned,
Is weaker than a simple human thought.
My slender voice can shake thee, as the breeze,
That seems but apt to stir a maiden's hair,
Sways huge Oceanus from pole to pole :
For I am still Prometheus, and foreknow
In my wise heart the end and doom of all.

Yes, I am still Prometheus, wiser grown
By years of solitude—that holds apart
The past and future, giving the soul room
To search into itself—and long commune
With this eternal silence—more a god
In my long-suffering and strength to meet
With equal front the direst shafts of fate,
Than thou in thy faint-hearted despotism,
Girt with thy baby-toys of force and wrath.
Yes, I am that Prometheus who brought down
The light to man which thou in selfish fear
Had'st to thyself usurped—his by sole right,
For Man hath right to all save Tyranny—
And which shall free him yet from thy frail throne.
Tyrants are but the spawn of Ignorance,
Begotten by the slaves they trample on,
Who, could they win a glimmer of the light,
And see that Tyranny is always weakness,
Or Fear with its own bosom ill at ease,
Would laugh away in scorn the sand-wove chain
Which their own blindness feigned for adamant.
Wrong ever builds on quicksands, but the Right

To the firm centre lays its moveless base.
The tyrant trembles if the air but stirs
The innocent ringlets of a child's free hair,
And crouches, when the thought of some great spirit,
With world-wide murmur, like a rising gale,
Over men's hearts, as over standing corn,
Rushes, and bends them to its own strong will.
So shall some thought of mine yet circle earth
And puff away thy crumbling altars, Jove.
And, would'st thou know of my supreme revenge,
Poor tyrant, even now dethroned in heart,
Realmless in soul, as tyrants ever are,
Listen ! and tell me if this bitter peak,
This never-glutted vulture, and these chains
Shrink not before it, for it shall befit
A sorrow-taught, unconquered Titan-heart.
Men, when their death is on them, seem to stand
On a precipitous crag that overhangs
The abyss of doom, and in that depth to see,
As in a glass, the features dim and huge
Of things to come, the shadows, as it seems,
Of what have been. Death never fronts the wise,
Not fearfully, but with clear promises
Of larger life, on whose broad vans upborne,
Their outlook widens, and they see beyond
The horizon of the Present and the Past,
Even to the very source and end of things.
Such am I now : immortal woe hath made
My heart a seer, and my soul a judge
Between the substance and the shadow of Truth.
The sure supremeness of the Beautiful,
By all the martyrdoms made doubly sure
Of such as I am, this is my revenge,

Which of my wrongs builds a triumphal arch
Through which I see a sceptre and a throne.
The pipings of glad shepherds on the hills,
Tending the flocks no more to bleed for thee—
The songs of maidens pressing with white feet
The vintage on thine altars poured no more—
The murmurous bliss of lovers, underneath
Dim grape-vine bowers, whose rosy bunches press
Not half so closely their warm cheeks, unscared
By thoughts of thy brute lusts—the hive-like hum
Of peaceful commonwealths, where sunburnt Toil
Reaps for itself the rich earth made its own
By its own labor, lightened with glad hymns
To an omnipotence which thy mad bolts
Would cope with as a spark with the vast sea,
Even the spirit of free love and peace,
Duty's sure recompense through life and death—
These are such harvests as all master-spirits
Reap, haply not on earth, but reap no less
Because the sheaves are bound by hands not theirs ;
These are the bloodless daggers wherewithal
They stab fallen tyrants, this their high revenge :
For their best part of life on earth is when,
Long after death, prisoned and pent no more,
Their thoughts, their wild dreams even, have become Part of the necessary air men breathe ;
When, like the moon, herself behind a cloud,
They shed down light before us on life's sea,
That cheers us to steer onward still in hope.
Earth with her twining memories ivies o'er
Their holy sepulchres, the chainless sea
In tempest or wild calm repeats their thoughts,
The lightning and the thunder, all free things,

Have legends of them for the ears of men.
All other glories are as falling stars,
But universal Nature watches theirs ;
Such strength is won by love of human kind.

Not that I feel that hunger after fame,
Which souls of a half-greatness are beset with ;
But that the memory of noble deeds
Cries shame upon the idle and the vile,
And keeps the heart of Man forever up
To the heroic level of old time.
To be forgot at first is little pain
To a heart conscious of such high intent
As must be deathless on the lips of men ;
But, having been a name, to sink and be
A something which the world can do without,
Which, having been or not, would never change
The lightest pulse of fate—this is indeed
A cup of bitterness the worst to taste,
And this thy heart shall empty to the dregs.
Oblivion is lonelier than this peak—
Behold thy destiny ! Thou think'st it much
That I should brave thee, miserable god !
But I have braved a mightier than thou,
Even the temptings of this soaring heart
Which might have made me, scarcely less than thou,
A god among my brethren weak and blind,
Scarce less than thou, a pitiable thing,
To be down-trodden into darkness soon ;
But now I am above thee, for thou art
The bungling workmanship of fear, the block
That scares the swart Barbarian ; but I Am what myself have made, a nature wise

With finding in itself the types of all,—
With watching from the dim verge of the time
What things to be are visible in the gleams
Thrown forward on them from the luminous past—
Wise with the history of its own frail heart,
With reverence and sorrow, and with love
Broad as the world for freedom and for man.

Thou and all strength shall crumble, except Love,
By whom and for whose glory ye shall cease :
And, when thou art but a dim moaning heard
From out the pitiless glooms of Chaos, I Shall be a power and a memory,
A name to scare all tyrants with, a light
Unsetting as the pole-star, a great voice
Heard in the breathless pauses of the fight
By truth and freedom ever waged with wrong,
Clear as a silver trumpet, to awake
Huge echoes that from age to age live on
In kindred spirits, giving them a sense
Of boundless power from boundless suffering wrung.
And many a glazing eye shall smile to see
The memory of my triumph (for to meet
Wrong with endurance, and to overcome
The present with a heart that looks beyond, are triumph), like a prophet eagle, perch
Upon the sacred banner of the right.
Evil springs up, and flowers, and bears no seed,
And feeds the green earth with its swift decay,
Leaving it richer for the growth of truth ;
But Good, once put in action or in thought,
Like a strong oak, doth from its boughs shed down
The ripe germs of a forest. Thou, weak god,

Shalt fade and be forgotten ; but this soul,
Fresh-living still in the serene abyss,
In every heaving shall partake, that grows
From heart to heart among the sons of men—
As the ominous hum before the earthquake runs
Far through the Ægean from roused isle to isle—
Foreboding wreck to palaces and shrines,
And mighty rents in many a cavernous error
That darkens the free light to man :—This heart
Unscarred by thy grim vulture, as the truth
Grows but more lovely 'neath the beaks and claws
Of Harpies blind that fain would soil it, shall
In all the throbbing exultations share
That wait on freedom's triumphs, and in all
The glorious agonies of martyr-spirits—
Sharp lightning-throes to split the jagged clouds
That veil the future, showing them the end—
Pain's thorny crown for constancy and truth,
Girdling the temples like a wreath of stars.
This is a thought, that, like the fabled laurel,
Makes my faith thunder-proof, and thy dread bolts
Fall on me like the silent flakes of snow
On the hoar brows of aged Caucasus :
But, O thought far more blissful, they can rend
This cloud of flesh, and make my soul a star !

Unleash thy crouching thunders now, O Jove !
Free this high heart which, a poor captive long,
Doth knock to be let forth, this heart which still,
In its invincible manhood, overtops
Thy puny godship as this mountain doth
The pines that moss its roots. O even now,
While from my peak of suffering I look down,

Beholding with a far-spread gush of hope
The sunrise of that Beauty in whose face,
Shone all around with love, no man shall look
But straightway like a god he is uplift
Unto the throne long empty for his sake,
And clearly oft foreshadowed in wide dreams
By his free inward nature, which nor thou,
Nor any anarch after thee, can bind
From working its great doom—now, now set free
This essence, not to die, but to become Part of that awful Presence which doth haunt
The palaces of tyrants, to scare off,
With its grim eyes and fearful whisperings
And hideous sense of utter loneliness,
All hope of safety, all desire of peace,
All but the loathed forefeeling of blank death—
Part of that spirit which doth ever brood
In patient calm on the unpilfered nest
Of man's deep heart, till mighty thoughts grow fledged
To sail with darkening shadow o'er the world,
Until they swoop, and their pale quarry make
Of some o'erbloated wrong—that spirit which Scatters great hopes in the seed-field of man,
Like acorns among grain, to grow and be
A roof for freedom in all coming time.

But no, this cannot be ; for ages yet,
In solitude unbroken, shall I hear
The angry Caspian to the Euxine shout,
And Euxine answer with a muffled roar,
On either side storming the giant walls
Of Caucasus with leagues of climbing foam,

(Less, from my height, than flakes of downy snow)
That draw back baffled but to hurl again,
Snatched up in wrath and horrible turmoil,
Mountain on mountain, as the Titans erst,
My brethren, scaling the high seat of Jove,
Heaved Pelion upon Ossa's shoulders broad,
In vain emprise. The moon will come and go
With her monotonous vicissitude ;
Once beautiful, when I was free to walk
Among my fellows and to interchange
The influence benign of loving eyes,
But now by aged use grown wearisome ;—
False thought ! most false ! for how could I endure
These crawling centuries of lonely woe
Unshamed by weak complaining, but for thee,
Loneliest, save me, of all created things,
Mild-eyed Astartè, my best comforter,
With thy pale smile of sad benignity ?
Year after year will pass away and seem
To me, in mine eternal agony,
But as the shadows of dumb summer-clouds,
Which I have watched so often darkening o'er
The vast Sarmatian plain, league-wide at first,
But, with still swiftness, lessening on and on Till cloud and shadow meet and mingle where
The gray horizon fades into the sky,
Far, far to northward. Yes, for ages yet
Must I lie here upon my altar huge,
A sacrifice for man. Sorrow will be,
As it hath been, his portion ; endless doom,
While the immortal with the mortal linked
Dreams of its wings and pines for what it dreams
With upward yearn unceasing. Better so :

For wisdom is meek sorrow's patient child,
And empire over self, and all the deep
Strong charities that make men seem like gods;
And love, that makes them be gods, from her breasts
Sucks in the milk that makes mankind one blood.
Good never comes unmixed, or so it seems,
Having two faces, as some images
Are carved, of foolish gods; one face is ill,
But one heart lies beneath, and that is good,
As are all hearts, when we explore their depths.
Therefore, great heart, bear up! thou art but type
Of what all lofty spirits endure, that fain
Would win men back to strength and peace through love :
Each hath his lonely peak, and on each heart
Envy, or scorn, or hatred, tears lifelong
With vulture beak; yet the high soul is left,
And faith, which is but hope grown wise, and love,
And patience which at last shall overcome.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., June, 1843.

ROSALINE.

THOU look'd'st on me all yesternight,
Thine eyes were blue, thy hair was bright
As when we murmured our trothplight
Beneath the thick stars, Rosaline !
Thy hair was braided on thy head
As on the day we two were wed,
Mine eyes scarce knew if thou wert dead—
But my shrunk heart knew, Rosaline !

The deathwatch tickt behind the wall,
The blackness rustled like a pall,
The moaning wind did rise and fall
Among the bleak pines, Rosaline !
My heart beat thickly in mine ears :
The lids may shut out fleshly fears,
But still the spirit sees and hears,
Its eyes are lidless, Rosaline !

A wildness rushing suddenly,
A knowing some ill shape is nigh,
A wish for death, a fear to die—
Is not this vengeance, Rosaline !
A loneliness that is not lone,
A love quite withered up and gone,
A strong soul trampled from its throne—
What would'st thou further, Rosaline !

'T is lone such moonless nights as these,
Strange sounds are out upon the breeze,
And the leaves shiver in the trees,
And then thou comest, Rosaline !
I seem to hear the mourners go,
With long black garments trailing slow,
And plumes a-nodding to and fro,
As once I heard them, Rosaline !

Thy shroud it is of snowy white,
And, in the middle of the night,
Thou standest moveless and upright,
Gazing upon me, Rosaline !
There is no sorrow in thine eyes,
But evermore that meek surprise—

Oh, God ! her gentle spirit tries
To deem me guiltless, Rosaline !

Above thy grave the Robin sings,
And swarms of bright and happy things
Flit all about with sunlit wings—
But I am cheerless, Rosaline !
The violets on the hillock toss,
The gravestone is o'ergrown with moss,
For nature feels not any loss—
But I am cheerless, Rosaline !

Ah ! why wert thou so lowly bred ?
Why was my pride galled on to wed
Her who brought lands and gold instead
Of thy heart's treasure, Rosaline !
Why did I fear to let thee stay
To look on me and pass away
Forgivingly, as in its May,
A broken flower, Rosaline !

I thought not, when my dagger strook,
Of thy blue eyes ; I could not brook
The past all pleading in one look
Of utter sorrow, Rosaline !
I did not know when thou wert dead :
A blackbird whistling overhead
Thrilled through my brain ; I would have fled
But dared not leave thee, Rosaline !

A low, low moan, a light twig stirred
By the upspringing of a bird,
A drip of blood—were all I heard—
Then deathly stillness, Rosaline !

The sun rolled down, and very soon,
Like a great fire, the awful moon
Rose, stained with blood, and then a swoon
Crept chilly o'er me, Rosaline !

The stars came out ; and, one by one,
Each angel from his silver throne
Looked down and saw what I had done :
I dared not hide me, Rosaline !
I crouched : I feared thy corpse would cry
Against me to God's quiet sky,
I thought I saw the blue lips try
To utter something, Rosaline !

I waited with a maddened grin
To hear that voice all icy thin
Slide forth and tell my deadly sin
To hell and heaven, Rosaline !
But no voice came, and then it seemed
That if the very corpse had screamed
The sound like sunshine glad had streamed
Through that dark stillness, Rosaline !

Dreams of old quiet glimmered by,
And faces loved in infancy
Came and looked on me mournfully,
Till my heart melted, Rosaline !
I saw my mother's dying bed,
I heard her bless me, and I shed
Cool tears—but lo ! the ghastly dead
Stared me to madness, Rosaline !

And then amid the silent night
I screamed with horrible delight,

And in my brain an awful light
Did seem to crackle, Rosaline !
It is my curse ! sweet mem'ries fall
From me like snow—and only all
Of that one night, like cold worms crawl
My doomed heart over, Rosaline !

Thine eyes are shut : they nevermore
Will leap thy gentle words before
To tell the secret o'er and o'er
Thou could'st not smother, Rosaline !
Thine eyes are shut : they will not shine
With happy tears, or, through the vine
That hid thy casement, beam on mine
Sunfull with gladness, Rosaline !

Thy voice I nevermore shall hear,
Which in old times did seem so dear,
That, ere it trembled in mine ear,
My quick heart heard it, Rosaline !
Would I might die ! I were as well,
Ay, better, at my home in hell,
To set for aye a burning spell
'Twixt me and memory, Rosaline !

Why wilt thou haunt me with thine eyes,
Wherein such blessed memories,
Such pitying forgiveness lies,
Than hate more bitter, Rosaline !
Woe's me ! I know that love so high
As thine, true soul, could never die,
And with mean clay in churchyard lie—
Would God it were so, Rosaline !

SONNET.

IF some small savor creep into my rhyme
Of the old poets, if some words I use,
Neglected long, which have the lusty thews
Of that gold-haired and earnest-hearted time,
Whose loving joy and sorrow all sublime
Have given our tongue its starry eminence,—
It is not pride, God knows, but reverence
Which hath grown in me since my childhood's prime ;
Wherein I feel that my poor lyre is strung
With soul-strings like to theirs, and that I have No right to muse their holy graves among,
If I can be a custom-fettered slave,
And, in mine own true spirit, am not brave
To speak what rusheth upward to my tongue.

A GLANCE BEHIND THE CURTAIN.

WE see but half the causes of our deeds,
Seeking them wholly in the outer life,
And heedless of the encircling spirit-world
Which, though unseen, is felt, and sows in us
All germs of pure and world-wide purposes.
From one stage of our being to the next
We pass unconscious o'er a slender bridge,
The momentary work of unseen hands,
Which crumbles down behind us ; looking back,
We see the other shore, the gulf between,
And, marvelling how we won to where we stand,
Content ourselves to call the builder Chance.
We trace the wisdom to the apple's fall,
Not to the soul of Newton, ripe with all

The hoarded thoughtfulness of earnest years,
And waiting but one ray of sunlight more
To blossom fully.

But whence came that ray ?

We call our sorrows destiny, but ought
Rather to name our high successes so.
Only the instincts of great souls are Fate,
And have predestined sway : all other things,
Except by leave of us, could never be.
For Destiny is but the breath of God
Still moving in us, the last fragment left
Of our unfallen nature, waking oft
Within our thought to beckon us beyond
The narrow circle of the seen and known,
And always tending to a noble end,
As all things must that overrule the soul,
And for a space unseat the helmsman, Will.
The fate of England and of freedom once
Seemed wavering in the heart of one plain man ;
One step of his, and the great dial-hand
That marks the destined progress of the world
In the eternal round from wisdom on
To higher wisdom, had been made to pause
A hundred years. That step he did not take—
He knew not why, nor we, but only God—
And lived to make his simple oaken chair
More terrible and grandly beautiful,
More full of majesty, than any throne,
Before or after, of a British king.

Upon the pier stood two stern-visaged men,
Looking to where a little craft lay moored,

Swayed by the lazy current of the Thames,
Which weltered by in muddy listlessness.
Grave men they were, and battlings of fierce thought
Had scared away all softness from their brows,
And ploughed rough furrows there before their time.
Care, not of self, but of the common weal,
Had robbed their eyes of youth, and left instead
A look of patient power and iron will,
And something fiercer, too, that gave broad hint
Of the plain weapons girded at their sides.
The younger had an aspect of command—
Not such as trickles down, a slender stream,
In the shrunk channel of a great descent—
But such as lies entowered in heart and head,
And an arm prompt to do the 'hests of both.
His was a brow where gold were out of place,
And yet it seemed right worthy of a crown
(Though he despisèd such), were it only made
Of iron, or some serviceable stuff
That would have matched his sinewy brown face.
The elder, although such he hardly seemed (Care makes so little of some five short years),
Bore a clear, honest face, where scholarship
Had mildened somewhat of its rougher strength,
To sober courage, such as best befits
The unsullied temper of a well-taught mind,
Yet left it so as one could plainly guess
The pent volcano smouldering underneath.
He spoke: the other, hearing, kept his gaze
Still fixed, as on some problem in the sky.

“O CROMWELL, we are fallen on evil times!
There was a day when England had wide room

For honest men as well as foolish kings ;
But now the uneasy stomach of the time
Turns squeamish at them both. Therefore let us
Seek out that savage clime where men as yet
Are free : there sleeps the vessel on the tide,
Her languid sails but drooping for the wind :
All things are fitly cared for, and the Lord
Will watch as kindly o'er the Exodus
Of us his servants now, as in old time.
We have no cloud or fire, and haply we May not pass dryshod through the ocean-stream ;
But, saved or lost, all things are in His hand.”
So spake he, and meantime the other stood
With wide, gray eyes still reading the blank air,
As if upon the sky's blue wall he saw
Some mystic sentence written by a hand
Such as of old did scare the Assyrian king,
Girt with his satraps in the blazing feast.

“HAMPDEN, a moment since, my purpose was
To fly with thee—for I will call it flight,
Nor flatter it with any smother name—
But something in me bids me not to go ;
And I am one, thou knowest, who, unscared
By what the weak deem omens, yet give heed
And reverence due to whatsoe'er my soul
Whispers of warning to the inner ear.
Why should we fly ? Nay, why not rather stay
And rear again our Zion's crumbled walls,
Not as of old the walls of Thebes were built
By minstrel twanging, but, if need should be,
With the more potent music of our swords ?
Think'st thou that score of men beyond the sea

Claim more God's care than all of England here ?
No : when He moves His arm, it is to aid
Whole peoples, heedless if a few be crushed,
As some are ever when the destiny
Of man takes one stride onward nearer home.
Believe it, 't is the mass of men He loves.
And where there is most sorrow and most want,
Where the high heart of man is trodden down
The most, 't is not because He hides His face
From them in wrath, as purblind teachers prate.
Not so : there most is He, for there is He
Most needed. Men who seek for Fate abroad
Are not so near His heart as they who dare
Frankly to face her where she faces them,
On their own threshold, where their souls are strong
To grapple with and throw her, as I once,
Being yet a boy, did throw this puny king.
Who now has grown so dotard as to deem
That he can wrestle with an angry realm,
And throw the brawned Antæus of men's rights.
No, Hampden ; they have half-way conquered Fate
Who go half-way to meet her—as will I.
Freedom hath yet a work for me to do ;
So speaks that inward voice which never yet
Spake falsely, when it urged the spirit on
To noble deeds for country and mankind.

“ What should we do in that small colony
Of pinched fanatics, who would rather choose
Freedom to clip an inch more from their hair
Than the great chance of setting England free ?
Not there amid the stormy wilderness
Should we learn wisdom ; or, if learned, what room

To put it into act—else worse than naught ?
We learn our souls more, tossing for an hour
Upon this huge and ever vexèd sea
Of human thought, where kingdoms go to wreck
Like fragile bubbles yonder in the stream,
Than in a cycle of New England sloth,
Broke only by some petty Indian war,
Or quarrel for a letter, more or less,
In some hard word, which, spelt in either way,
Not their most learnèd clerks can understand.
New times demand new measures and new men ;
The world advances, and in time outgrows
The laws that in our father's day were best ;
And, doubtless, after us, some purer scheme
Will be shaped out by wiser men than we,
Made wiser by the steady growth of truth.
We cannot bring Utopia at once ;
But better almost be at work in sin
Than in a brute inaction browse and sleep.
No man is born into the world whose work
Is not born with him ; there is always work,
And tools to work withal, for those who will ;
And blessed are the horny hands of toil !
The busy world shoves angrily aside
The man who stands with arms a-kimbo set,
Until occasion tells him what to do ;
And he who waits to have his task marked out,
Shall die and leave his errand unfulfilled.
Our time is one that calls for earnest deeds.
Reason and Government, like two broad seas,
Yearn for each other with outstretched arms
Across this narrow isthmus of the throne,
And roll their white surf higher every day.

The field lies wide before us, where to reap
The easy harvest of a deathless name,
Though with no better sickles than our swords.
My soul is not a palace of the past,
Where outworn creeds, like Rome's gray senate quake,

Hearing afar the Vandal's trumpet hoarse,
That shakes old systems with a thunder-fit.
The time is ripe, and rotten-ripe, for change;
Then let it come: I have no dread of what
Is called for by the instinct of mankind.
Nor think I that God's world would fall apart
Because we tear a parchment more or less.
Truth is eternal, but her effluence,
With endless change, is fitted to the hour;
Her mirror is turned forward, to reflect
The promise of the future, not the past.
I do not fear to follow out the truth,
Albeit along the precipice's edge.
Let us speak plain: there is more force in names
Than most men dream of; and a lie may keep
Its throne a whole age longer, if it skulk
Behind the shield of some fair-seeming name.
Let us call tyrants tyrants, and maintain
That only freedom comes by grace of God,
And all that comes not by his grace must fall;
For men in earnest have no time to waste
In patching fig-leaves for the naked truth.

“ I will have one more grapple with the man
Charles Stuart: whom the boy o'ercame,
The man stands not in awe of. I perchance
Am one raised up by the Almighty arm

To witness some great truth to all the world.
Souls destined to o'erleap the vulgar lot,
And mould the world unto the scheme of God,
Have a foreconsciousness of their high doom.
As men are known to shiver at the heart,
When the cold shadow of some coming ill
Creeps slowly o'er their spirits unawares :
Hath Good less power of prophecy than Ill ?
How else could men whom God hath called to sway

Earth's rudder, and to steer the barque of Truth,
Beating against the wind toward her port,
Bear all the mean and buzzing grievances,
The petty martyrdoms wherewith Sin strives
To weary out the tethered hope of Faith,
The sneers, the unrecognizing look of friends,
Who worship the dead corpse of old king Custom,
Where it doth lie in state within the Church,
Striving to cover up the mighty ocean
With a man's palm, and making even the truth
Lie for them, holding up the glass reversed,
To make the hope of man seem further off ?
My God ! when I read o'er the bitter lives
Of men whose eager hearts were quite too great
To beat beneath the cramped mode of the day,
And see them mocked at by the world they love,
Haggling with prejudice for pennyworths
Of that reform which their hard toil will make
The common birthright of the age to come—
When I see this, spite of my faith in God,
I marvel how their hearts bear up so long ;
Nor could they, but for this same prophecy,
This inward feeling of the glorious end.

“Deem me not fond ; but in my warmer youth,
Ere my heart’s bloom was soiled and brushed away,
I had great dreams of mighty things to come ;
Of conquest ; whether by the sword or pen,
I knew not ; but some conquest I would have,
Or else swift death : now, wiser grown in years,
I find youth’s dreams are but the flutterings
Of those strong wings whereon the soul shall soar
In after time to win a starry throne ;
And therefore cherish them, for they were lots
Which I, a boy, cast in the helm of Fate.
Nor will I draw them, since a man’s right hand,
A right hand guided by an earnest soul,
With a true instinct, takes the golden prize
From out a thousand blanks. What men call luck,
Is the prerogative of valiant souls,
The fealty life pays its rightful kings.
The helm is shaking now, and I will stay
To pluck my lot forth ; it were sin to flee !”

So they two turned together ; one to die
Fighting for freedom on the bloody field ;
The other, far more happy, to become
A name earth wears forever next her heart ;
One of the few that have a right to rank
With the true Makers ; for his spirit wrought
Order from Chaos ; proved that right divine
Dwelt only in the excellence of Truth ;
And far within old Darkness’ hostile lines
Advanced and pitched the shining tents of Light.
Nor shall the grateful Muse forget to tell,
That—not the least among his many claims
To deathless honor—he was MILTON’S friend

A man not second among those who lived
To show us that the poet's lyre demands
An arm of tougher sinew than the sword.

A SONG.

VIOLET !—sweet violet !
Thine eyes are full of tears ;
Are they wet
Even yet
With the thought of other years,
Or with gladness are they full,
For the night so beautiful,
And longing for those far-off spheres ?

Loved one of my youth thou wast,
Of my merry youth,
And I see,
Tearfully,
All the fair and sunny past,
All its openness and truth,
Ever fresh and green in thee
As the moss is in the sea.

Thy little heart, that hath with love
Grown colored like the sky above,
On which thou lookest ever,—
Can it know
All the woe
Of hope for what returneth never,
All the sorrow and the longing
To these hearts of ours belonging !
Out on it ! no foolish pining

For the sky
Dims thine eye,
Or for the stars so calmly shining ,
Like thee let this soul of mine
Take hue from that wherefor I long,
Self-stayed and high, serene and strong,
Not satisfied with hoping—but divine.

Violet ! dear Violet !
Thy blue eyes are only wet
With joy and love of him who sent thee,
And, for the fulfilling sense
Of that glad obedience
Which made thee all which Nature meant thee!

THE MOON.

My soul was like the sea
Before the moon was made ;
Moaning in vague immensity,
Of its own strength afraid,
Unrestful and unstaid.

Through every rift it foamed in vain
About its earthly prison,
Seeking some unknown thing in pain,
And sinking restless back again,
For yet no moon had risen :
Its only voice a vast dumb moan
Of utterless anguish speaking,
It lay unhopelessly alone
And lived but in an aimless seeking.

So was my soul : but when 't was full
 Of unrest to o'erloading,
 A voice of something beautiful
 Whispered a dim foreboding,
 And yet so soft, so sweet, so low,
 It had not more of joy than woe :
 And, as the sea doth oft lie still,
 Making his waters meet,
 As if by an unconscious will,
 For the moon's silver feet,
 Like some serene, unwinking eye
 That waits a certain destiny,
 So lay my soul within mine eyes
 When thou its sovereign moon didst rise.

And now, howe'er its waves above
 May toss and seem uneasyful,
 One strong, eternal law of love
 With guidance sure and peaceful,
 As calm and natural as breath
 Moves its great deeps through Life and Death.

THE FATHERLAND.

WHERE is the true man's fatherland ?
 Is it where he by chance is born ?
 Doth not the free-winged spirit scorn
 In such pent borders to be spanned ?
 Oh yes ! his fatherland must be
 As the blue heavens wide and free !

Is it alone where freedom is,
 Where God is God and man is man ?

Doth he not claim a broader span
For the soul's love of home than this ?
Oh yes ! his fatherland must be
As the blue heavens wide and free !

Where'er a human heart doth wear
Joy's myrtle wreath, or sorrow's gyves,
Where'er a human spirit strives
After a life more pure and fair,
There is the true man's birthplace grand !
His is a world-wide fatherland !

Where'er a single slave doth pine,
Where'er one man may help another—
Thank God for such a birthright, brother !
That spot of earth is thine and mine ;
There is the true man's birthplace grand !
His is a world-wide fatherland !

A PARABLE.

WORN and footsore was the Prophet
When he reached the holy hill ;
“ God has left the earth,” he murmured,
“ Here his presence lingers still.

“ God of all the olden prophets,
Wilt thou talk with me no more ?
Have I not as truly loved thee
As thy chosen ones of yore ?

“ Hear me, guider of my fathers,
Lo, an humble heart is mine ;
By thy mercy I beseech thee,
Grant thy servant but a sign !”

Bowing then his head, he listened
For an answer to his prayer ;
No loud burst of thunder followed,
Not a murmur stirred the air :

But the tuft of moss before him
Opened while he waited yet,
And from out the rock's hard bosom
Sprang a tender violet.

"God ! I thank thee," said the Prophet,
"Hard of heart and blind was I,
Looking to the holy mountain
For the gift of prophecy.

"Still thou speakest with thy children
Freely as in Eld sublime,
Humbleness and love and patience
Give dominion over Time.

"Had I trusted in my nature,
And had faith in lowly things,
Thou thyself wouldst then have sought me,
And set free my spirit's wings.

"But I looked for signs and wonders
That o'er men should give me sway ;
Thirsting to be more than mortal,
I was even less than clay.

"Ere I entered on my journey,
As I girt my loins to start,
Ran to me my little daughter,
The belovèd of my heart ;

“In her hand she held a flower,
 Like to this as like may be,
 Which beside my very threshold
 She had plucked and brought to me.”

ON THE DEATH OF A FRIEND'S CHILD.

DEATH never came so nigh to me before,
 Nor showed me his mild face : Oft I had mused
 Of calm and peace and deep forgetfulness,
 Of folded hands, closed eyes, and heart at rest,
 And slumber sound beneath a flowery turf,
 Of faults forgotten, and an inner place
 Kept sacred for us in the heart of friends ;
 But these were idle fancies satisfied
 With the mere husk of this great Mystery,
 And dwelling in the outward shows of things.
 Heaven is not mounted to on wings of dreams,
 Nor doth the unthankful happiness of youth
 Aim thitherward, but floats from bloom to bloom,
 With earth's warm patch of sunshine well content :
 'T is sorrow builds the shining ladder up
 Whose golden rounds are our calamities,
 Whereon our firm feet planting, nearer God
 The spirit climbs, and hath its eyes unsealed.

True is it that Death's face seems stern and cold,
 When he is sent to summon those we love,
 But all God's angels come to us disguised ;
 Sorrow and sickness, poverty and death,
 One after other lift their frowning masks,
 And we behold the seraph's face beneath,
 All radiant with the glory and the calm

Of having looked upon the smile of God.
 With every anguish of our earthly past
 The spirit's sight grows clearer ; this was meant
 When Jesus touched the blind man's lids with clay.
 Life is the jailer, Death the angel sent
 To draw the unwilling bolts and set us free.
 He flings not ope the ivory gate of Rest—
 Only the fallen spirit knocks at that—
 But to benigner regions beckons us,
 To destinies of more rewarded toil.

In the hushed chamber, sitting by the dead,
 It grates on us to hear the flood of life
 Whirl rustling onward, senseless of our loss.
 The bee hums on ; around the blossomed vine
 Whirs the light humming-bird ; the cricket chirps ;
 The locust's shrill alarum stings the ear ;
 Hard by, the cock shouts lustily ; from farm to farm,
 His cheery brothers, telling of the sun,
 Answer, till far away the joyance dies ;
 We never knew before how God had filled
 The summer air with happy living sounds ;
 All round us seems an overplus of life,
 And yet the one dear heart lies cold and still.
 It is most strange, when the great Miracle
 Hath for our sakes been done ; when we have had
 Our inwardest experience of God,
 When with his presence still the room expands,
 And is awed after him, that naught is changed,
 That Nature's face looks unacknowledging,
 And the mad world still dances heedless on After its butterflies, and gives no sigh.
 'T is hard at first to see it all aright ;

In vain Faith blows her trump to summon back
 Her scattered troop ; yet, through the clouded glass
 Of our own bitter tears, we learn to look
 Undazzled on the kindness of God's face ;
 Earth is too dark, and Heaven alone shines through.

How changed, dear friend, are thy part and thy child's !

He bends above thy cradle now, or holds
 His warning finger out to be thy guide ;
 Thou art the nursling now ; he watches thee
 Slow learning, one by one, the secret things
 Which are to him used sights of every day ;
 He smiles to see thy wondering glances con
 The grass and pebbles of the spirit world,
 To thee miraculous ; and he will teach
 Thy knees their due observances of prayer.

Children are God's apostles, day by day,
 Sent forth to preach of love, and hope, and peace ;
 Nor hath thy babe his mission left undone.
 To me, at least, his going hence hath given
 Serener thoughts and nearer to the skies,
 And opened a new fountain in my heart
 For thee, my friend, and all : and oh, if Death
 More near approaches, meditates, and clasps
 Even now some dearer, more reluctant hand,
 God, strengthen thou my faith, that I may see
 That 't is thine angel who, with loving haste,
 Unto the service of the inner shrine
 Doth waken thy belovèd with a kiss !

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Sept. 3, 1844.

AN INCIDENT IN A RAILROAD CAR.

HE spoke of Burns : men rude and rough
Pressed round to hear the praise of one
Whose breast was made of manly, simple stuff,
As homespun as their own.

And, when he read, they forward leaned
And heard, with eager hearts and ears,
His birdlike songs whom glory never weaned
From humble smiles and tears.

Slowly there grew a tender awe,
Sunlike o'er faces brown and hard,
As if in him who read they felt and saw
Some presence of the bard.

It was a sight for sin and wrong,
And slavish tyranny to see,
A sight to make our faith more pure and strong
In high Humanity.

I thought, these men will carry hence,
Promptings their former life above,
And something of a finer reverence
For beauty, truth, and love.

God scatters love on every side,
Freely among his children all,
And always hearts are lying open wide
Wherein some grains may fall.

There is no wind but sows some seeds
Of a more true and open life,
Which burst unlooked for into high-souled deeds
With wayside beauty rife.

We find within these souls of ours
Some wild germs of a higher birth,
Which in the poet's tropic heart bears flowers
Whose fragrance fills the earth.

Within the hearts of all men lie
These promises of wider bliss,
Which blossom into hopes that cannot die,
In sunny hours like this.

All that hath been majestic
In life or death since time began,
Is native in the simple heart of all,
The angel heart of man.

And thus among the untaught poor
Great deeds and feelings find a home
Which casts in shadow all the golden lore
Of classic Greece or Rome.

Oh ! mighty brother-soul of man,
Where'er thou art, in low or high,
Thy skyey arches with exulting span
O'er-roof infinity.

All thoughts that mould the age begin
Deep down within the primitive soul,
And, from the many, slowly upward wing
To One who grasps the whole,

In his broad breast, the feeling deep
Which struggled on the many's tongue,
Swells to a tide of Thought whose surges leap
O'er the weak throne of wrong.

Never did poesy appear
 So full of Heav'n to me as when I saw how it would pierce through pride and fear,
 To lives of coarsest men.

It may be glorious to write
 Thoughts that shall glad the two or three High souls like those far stars that come in sight
 Once in a century.

But better far it is to speak
 One simple word which now and then Shall waken their free nature in the weak
 And friendless sons of men ;

To write some earnest verse or line,
 Which, seeking not the praise of Art,
 Shall make a clearer faith and manhood shine
 In the unlearned heart.

BOSTON, April, 1842.

AN INCIDENT OF THE FIRE AT HAMBURGH.

THE tower of old Saint Nicholas soared upward to the skies,
 Like some huge piece of nature's make, the growth of centuries ;
 You could not deem its crowding spires a work of human art, ,
 They seemed to struggle lightward so from a sturdy living heart.

Not Nature's self more freely speaks in crystal or in oak
Than, through the pious builder's hand, in that gray pile she spoke ;
And as from acorn springs the oak, so, freely and alone,
Sprang from his heart this hymn to God, sung in obedient stone.

It seemed a wondrous freak of chance, so perfect, yet so rough,
A whim of Nature crystallized slowly in granite tough ;
The thick spires yearned toward the sky in quaint harmonious lines,
And in broad sunlight basked and slept, like a grove of blasted pines.

Never did rock or stream or tree lay claim with better
right
To all the adorning sympathies of shadow and of light ;
And, in that forest petrified, as forester there dwells Stout Herman, the old sacristan, sole lord of all its bells.

Surge leaping after surge, the fire roared onward, red as blood,
Till half of Hamburg lay engulfed beneath the eddying flood,
For miles away, the fiery spray poured down its deadly rain,
And back and forth the billows drew, and paused, and broke again.

From square to square, with tiger leaps, still on and on it came ;

The air to leeward trembled with the pantings of the flame,

And church and palace, which even now stood whelmed
but to the knee,

Lift their black roofs like breakers lone amid the rushing sea.

Up in his tower old Herman sat and watched with quiet look ;

His soul had trusted God too long to be at last forsook :
He could not fear, for surely God a pathway would unfold

Through this red sea, for faithful hearts, as once he did of old.

But scarcely can he cross himself, or on his good saint call,

Before the sacrilegious flood o'erleaped the churchyard wall,

And, ere a pater half was said, 'mid smoke and crackling glare,

His island tower scarce just its head above the wide despair.

Upon the peril's desperate peak his heart stood up sublime ;

His first thought was for God above, his next was for his chime ;

“Sing now, and make your voices heard in hymns of praise,” cried he,

“As did the Israelites of old, safe-walking through the sea !

“Through this red sea our God hath made our pathway safe to shore ;
Our promised land stands full in sight ; shout now as ne’er before.”
And, as the tower came crashing down, the bells, in clear accord,
Pealed forth the grand old German hymn—“ All good souls praise the Lord !”

SONNETS.

I.

As the broad ocean endlessly upheaveth,
With the majestic beating of his heart,
The mighty tides, whereof its rightful part
Each sea-wide gulf and little weed receiveth—
So, through his soul who earnestly believeth,
Life from the universal Heart doth flow,
Whereby some conquest of the eternal woe
By instinct of God’s nature he achieveth :
A fuller pulse of this all-powerful Beauty
Into the poet’s gulf-like heart doth tide,
And he more keenly feels the glorious duty
Of serving Truth despised and crucified—
Happy, unknowing sect or creed, to rest
And feel God flow forever through his breast.

II.

Once hardly in a cycle blossometh
A flower-like soul ripe with the seeds of song
A spirit foreordained to cope with wrong,

Whose divine thoughts are natural as breath,
 Who the old Darkness thickly scattereth
 With starry words which shoot prevailing light
 Into the deeps, and wither with the blight
 Of serene Truth the coward heart of Death :
 Woe if such spirit sell his birthright high,
 And mock with lies the longing soul of man !
 Yet one age longer must true Culture lie,
 Soothing her bitter fetters as she can,
 Until new messages of love outstart
 At the next beating of the infinite Heart.

III.

The love of all things springs from love of one ;
 Wider the soul's horizon hourly grows,
 And over it with fuller glory flows
 The sky-like spirit of God ; a hope begun
 In doubt and darkness, 'neath a fairer sun
 Cometh to fruitage, if it be of Truth ;
 And to the law of meekness, faith, and ruth,
 By inward sympathy shall all be won :
 This thou shouldst know, who from the painted feature
 Of shifting Fashion, couldst thy brethren turn
 Unto the love of ever youthful nature,
 And of a beauty fadeless and eterne ;
 And always 't is the saddest sight to see
 An old man faithless in Humanity.

IV.

A poet cannot strive for despotism ;
 His harp falls shattered ; for it still must be
 The instinct of great spirits to be free,

And the sworn foes of cunning barbarism.
 He who has deepest searched the wide abysm
 Of that life-giving Soul which men call fate,
 Knows that to put more faith in lies and hate
 Than truth and love, is the worst atheism :
 Upward the soul forever turns her eyes ;
 The next hour always shames the hour before ;
 One beauty at its highest prophesies
 That by whose side it shall seem mean and poor ;
 No Godlike thing knows aught of less and less,
 But widens to the boundless Perfectness.

V.

'Therefore think not the Past is wise alone,
 For Yesterday knows nothing of the Best,
 And thou shalt love it only as the nest
 Whence glory-winged things to Heaven have flown.
 To the great Soul alone are all things known,
 Present and future are to her as past,
 While she in glorious madness doth forecast
 That perfect bud which seems a flower full-blown
 To each new Prophet, and yet always opes
 Fuller and fuller with each day and hour,
 Heartening the soul with odor of fresh hopes,
 And longings high and gushings of wide power
 Yet never is or shall be fully blown
 Save in the forethought of the Eternal One.

VI.

Far 'yond this narrow parapet of Time,
 With eyes uplift, the poet's soul should look Into the Endless Promise, nor should brook

One prying doubt to shake his faith sublime ;
 To him the earth is ever in her prime
 And dewiness of morning ; he can see
 Good lying hid, from all eternity,
 Within the teeming womb of sin and crime ;
 His soul shall not be cramped by any bar—
 His nobleness should be so Godlike high
 That his least deed is perfect as a star,
 His common look majestic as the sky,
 And all o'erflooded with a light from far,
 Undimmed by clouds of weak mortality.

BOSTON, April 2, 1842.

THE UNHAPPY LOT OF MR. KNOTT.

PART I.

Showing how he built his house and his wife moved into it.

MY worthy friend, A. Gordon Knott,
 From business snug withdrawn,
 Was much contented with a lot
 Which would contain a Tudor cot
 Twixt twelve feet square of garden-plot,
 And twelve feet more of lawn.
 He had laid business on the shelf
 To give his taste expansion,
 And, since no man, retired with pelf,
 The building mania can shun,
 Knott, being middle-aged himself,
 Resolved to build (unhappy elf !)
 A mediæval mansion.

He called an architect in counsel ;
 “I want,” said he, “a—you know what,
 You are a builder, I am Knott,)
 A thing complete from chimney-pot
Down to the very groundsel ;
 Here’s a half-acre of good land ;
 Just have it nicely mapped and planned
And make your workmen drive on ;
 Meadow there is, and upland too,
 And I should like a water-view,
D’ you think you could contrive one ?
 (Perhaps the pump and trough would do,
 If painted a judicious blue ?)
 The woodland I’ve attended to ;”
 (He meant three pines stuck up askew,
Two dead ones and a live one.)
 “ A pocket-full of rocks ’t would take
To build a house of free-stone,
 But then it is not hard to make
What nowadays is the stone ;
 The cunning painter in a trice
Your house’s outside petrifies,
 And people think it very gneiss
Without inquiring deeper ;
 My money never shall be thrown Away on such a deal of stone,
When stone of deal is cheaper.”

And so the greenest of antiques
 Was reared for Knott to dwell in ;
The architect worked hard for weeks
In venting all his private peaks
Upon the roof, whose crop of leaks

Had satisfied Fluellen.
Whatever anybody had
Out of the common, good or bad,
Knott had it all worked well in,
A donjon-keep, where clothes might dry,
A porter's lodge that was a sty,
A campanile slim and high,
Too small to hang a bell in ;
All up and down and here and there,
With Lord-knows-whats of round and square
Stuck on at random everywhere,
It was a house to make one stare,
All corners and all gables ;
Like dogs let loose upon a bear,
Ten emulous styles, staboyed with care,
The whole among them seemed to tear,
And all the oddities to spare
Were set upon the stables.

Knott was delighted with a pile
Approved by fashion's leaders ;
(Only he made the builder smile
By asking every little while,
Why that was called the Twodoor style
Which certainly had three doors?)
Yet better for this luckless man
If he had put a downright ban
Upon the thing in limine ;
For, though to quit affairs his plan,
Ere many days, poor Knott began
Perforce accepting draughts, that ran
All ways—except up chimney ;
The house, though painted stone to mock,

With nice white lines round every block,
Some trepidation stood in,
When tempests (with petrific shock,
So to speak) made it really rock,
Though not a whit less wooden ;
And painted stone, howe'er well done,
Will not take in the prodigal sun
Whose beams are never quite at one
With our terrestrial lumber ;
So the wood shrank around the knots,
And gaped in disconcerting spots,
And there were lots of dots and rots
And crannies without number,
Wherethrough, as you may well presume,
The wind, like water through a flume,
Came rushing in ecstatic,
Leaving, in all three floors, no room
That was not a rheumatic ;
And, what with points and squares and rounds
Grown shaky on their poises,
The house at night was full of pounds,
Thumps, bumps, creaks, scratchings, raps—till—“ Zounds ! ”
Cried Knott, “ this goes beyond all bounds,
I do not deal in tongues and sounds,
Nor have I let my house and grounds
To a family of Noyeses ! ”

But though Knott's house was full of airs,
He had but one—a daughter ;
And, as he owned much stocks and shares,
Many who wished to render theirs
Such vain, unsatisfying cares,

And needed wives to sew their tears,
In matrimony sought her ;
They vowed her gold they wanted not,
Their faith would never falter,
They longed to tie this single Knott
In the Hymeneal halter ;
So daily at the door they rang,
Cards for the belle delivering,
Or in the choir at her they sang,
Achieving such a rapturous twang
As set her nerves a-shivering.

Now Knott had quite made up his mind
That Colonel Jones should have her ;
No beauty he, but oft we find
Sweet kernels 'neath a roughish rind,
So hoped his Jenny 'd be resigned
And make no more palaver ;
Glanced at the fact that love was blind,
That girls were ratherish inclined
To pet their little crosses,
Then nosologically defined
The rate at which the system pined
In those unfortunates who dined
Upon that metaphoric kind
Of dish—their own proboscis.

But she, with many tears and moans,
Besought him not to mock her,
Said 't was too much for flesh and bones,
To marry mortgages and loans,
That fathers' hearts were stocks and stones,
And that she'd go, when Mrs. Jones,
To Davy Jones's locker ;

Then gave her head a little toss
That said as plain as ever was,
If men are always at a loss
 Mere womankind to bridle—
To try the thing on woman cross,
 Were fifty times as idle ;
For she a strict resolve had made
 And registered in private,
That either she would die a maid,
Or else be Mrs. Dr. Slade,
 If woman could contrive it ;
And, though the wedding-day was set,
 Jenny was more so, rather,
Declaring, in a pretty pet,
That, howsoe'e they spread their net,
She would outJennyrall them yet,
 The colonel and her father.
Just at this time the Public's eyes
 Were keenly on the watch, a stir
Beginning slowly to arise
About those questions and replies,
Those raps that unwrapped mysteries
 So rapidly at Rochester.
And Knott, already nervous grown
By lying much awake alone,
And listening, sometimes to a moan,
 And sometimes to a clatter,
Whene'er the wind at night would rouse
The ginger-bread-work on his house,
Or when some hasty-tempered mouse,
Behind the plastering made a towse
 About a family matter,
Began to wonder if his wife,

A paralytic half her life,
Which made it more surprising,
Might not, to rule him from her urn,
Have taken a peripatetic turn
For want of exorcising.

This thought, once nestled in his head,
Ere long contagious grew, and spread
Infecting all his mind with dread,
Until at last he lay in bed
And heard his wife, with well-known tread,
Entering the kitchen through the shed,
(Or was 't his fancy mocking ?)
Opening the pantry, cutting bread,
And then (she 'd been some ten years dead)
Closets and drawers unlocking ;
Or, in his room, (his breath grew thick)
He heard the long familiar click
Of slender needles flying quick,
As if she knit a stocking ;—
For whom ?—he prayed that years might flit
With pains rheumatic shooting,
Before those ghostly things she knit
Upon his unfleshed sole might fit,
He did not fancy it a bit,
To stand upon that footing ;
At other times, his frightened hairs
Above the bed-clothes trusting,
He heard her, full of household cares,
(No dream entrapped in supper's snares,
The foal of horrible nightmares,
But broad awake, as he declares,)
Go bustling up and down the stairs,

Or setting back last evening's chairs,
Or with the poker thrusting
The raked-up sea-coal's hardened crust—
And—what ! impossible ! it must !
He knew she had returned to dust,
And yet could scarce his senses trust,
Hearing her as she poked and fussed
About the parlor, dusting !

Night after night he strove to sleep
And take his ease in spite of it ;
But still his flesh would chill and creep,
And, though two night-lamps he might keep,
He could not so make light of it.
At last, quite desperate, he goes
And tells his neighbors all his woes,
Which did but their amount enhance ;
They made such mockery of his fears,
That soon his days were of all jeers,
His nights of the rueful countenance ;
“ I thought most folks,” one neighbor said,
“ Gave up the ghost when they were dead,”
Another gravely shook his head,
Adding, “ from all we hear, it's Quite plain poor Knott is going mad—
For how can he at once be sad
And think he's full of spirits ? ”
A third declared he knew a knife
Would cut this Knott much quicker,
“ The surest way to end all strife,
And lay the spirit of a wife,
Is just to take and lick her ! ”
A temperance man caught up the word,

“ Ah, yes,” he groaned, “ I ’ve always heard

Our poor friend always slanted
Tow’rd taking liquor overmuch ;
I fear these spirits may be Dutch,
(A sort of gins, or something such,)

With which his house is haunted ;
I see the thing as clear as light—
If Knott would give up getting tight,
Naught farther would be wanted : ”

So all his neighbors stood aloof
And, that the spirits ’neath his roof
Were not entirely up to proof,

Unanimously granted.

Knott knew that cocks and sprites were foes,
And so bought up, Heaven only knows
How many, though he wanted crows
To give ghosts cause, as I suppose,

To think that day was breaking ;
Moreover, what he called his park,
He turned into a kind of ark,
For dogs, because a little bark
Is a good tonic in the dark,

If one is given to waking ;
But things went on from bad to worse,
His curs were nothing but a curse,

And, what was still more shocking,
Foul ghosts of living fowl made scoff
And would not think of going off

In spite of all his cocking.

Shanghais, Bucks-counties, Dominiques,
Malays (that did n’t lay for weeks,)

Polanders, Bantams, Dorkings,

Waiving the cost, no trifling ill,
(Since each brought in his little bill)
By day or night were never still,
But every thought of rest would kill

With cacklings and with quorkings :
Henry the Eighth of wives got free

By a way he had of axing ;
But poor Knott's Tudor henery
Was not so fortunate, and he Still found his trouble waxing ;

As for the dogs, the rows they made,
And how they howled, snarled, barked, and bayed,

Beyond all human knowledge is ;
All night, as wide awake as gnats,
The terriers rumpused after rats,
Or, just for practice, taught their brats
To worry cast-off shoes and hats,
The bull-dogs settled private spats,
All chased imaginary cats,
Or raved behind the fence's slats
At real ones, or, from their mats,
With friends miles off, held pleasant chats,
Or, like some folks in white cravats,
Contemptuous of sharps and flats,

Sat up and sang dogsologies.

PART II.

Showing what is meant by a flow of Spirits.

At first the ghosts were somewhat shy,
Coming when none but Knott was nigh,
And people said 't was all their eye,
(Or rather his) a flam, the sly

Digestion's machination ;
Some recommended a wet sheet,
Some a nice broth of pounded peat,
Some a cold flat-iron to the feet,
Some a decoction of lamb's-bleat ;
Some a southwesterly grain of wheat ;
Meat was by some pronounced unmeet,
Others thought fish most indiscreet,
And that 't was worse than all to eat
Of vegetables, sour or sweet,
(Except, perhaps, the skin of beet,)

In such a concatenation :
One quack his button gently plucks
And murmurs " biliary ducks ! "

Says Knott, " I never ate one ; "
But all, though brimming full of wrath,
Homeo, Allo, Hydropath,
Concurred in this—that t'other's path
To death's door was the straight one.

But, spite of medical advice,
The ghosts came thicker, and a spice

Of mischief grew apparent ;
Nor did they only come at night,
But seemed to fancy broad daylight,
'Till Knott, in horror and affright,

His unoffending hair rent ;
Whene'er, with handkerchief on lap,
He made his elbow-chair a trap
To catch an after-dinner nap,
The spirits, always on the tap,
Would make a sudden rap, rap, rap,
The half-spun cord of life to snap,
(And what is life without its nap

But threadbareness and mere mishap ?)
As 't were with a percussion cap
The trouble's climax capping ;
It seemed a party dried and grim
Of mummies had come to visit him,
Each getting off from every limb
Its multitudinous wrapping ;
Scratchings sometimes the walls ran round,
The merest penny-weights of sound ;
Sometimes 't was only by the pound
They carried on their dealing,
A thumping 'neath the parlor floor,
Thump—bump—thump—bumping o'er and o'er,
As if the vegetables in store,
(Quiet and orderly before,)
Were all together pealing ;
You would have thought the thing was done
By the Spirit of some son of a gun,
And that a forty-two pounder,
Or that the ghost which made such sounds
Could be none other than John Pounds,
Of Ragged Schools the founder.

Through three gradations of affright,
The awful noises reached their height ;
At first they knocked nocturnally,
Then, for some reason, changing quite,
(As mourners, after six months' flight,
Turn suddenly from dark to light,)
Began to knock diurnally,
And last, combining all their stocks,
(Scotland was ne'er so full of Knox,)
Into one Chaos, (father of Nox),

Nocte pluit—they showered knocks,
And knocked, knocked, knocked eternally ;
Ever upon the go, like buoys,
(Wooden sea-urchins), all Knott's joys,
They turned to trouble and a noise
That preyed on him internally.

Soon they grew wider in their scope ;
Whenever Knott a door would ope,
It would ope not, or else elope
And fly back (curbless as a trope
Once started down a stanza's slope
By a bard that gave it too much rope—)
Like a clap of thunder slamming ;
And, when kind Jenny brought his hat,
(She always, when he walked, did that,)
Just as upon his head it sat,
Submitting to his settling pat—
Some unseen hand would jam it flat,
Or give it such a furious bat
That eyes and nose went cramming
Up out of sight, and consequently,
As when in life it paddled free,

His beaver caused much damning ;
If these things seem o'erstrained to be,
Read the account of Doctor Dee,
'T is in our college library ;
Read Wesley's circumstantial plea,
And Mrs. Crow, more like a bee,
Sucking the nightshade's honied fee,
And Stilling's Pneumatology ;
Consult Scot, Glanvil, grave Wierus, and both Mathers ; further, see

Webster, Casaubon, James First's treatise, a right royal Q. E. D.
 Writ with the moon in perigee,
 Bodin de Demonomanie——
 (Accent that last line gingerly)
 All full of learning as the sea
 Of fishes, and all disagree,
 Save in Sathanas apage!
 Or, what will surely put a flea
 In unbelieving ears—with glee,
 Out of a paper (sent to me
 By some friend who forgot to P . . .
 A . . . Y . . . —I use cryptography
 Lest I his vengeful pen should dree—
 His P . . . O . . . S . . . T . . . A . . . G . . . E)
 Things t the same effect I cut,
 About the tantrums of a ghost,
 Not more than three weeks since, at most,
 Near Stratford, in Connecticut.
 [Heavens! what a sentence that is!
 I throw i. in, though, gratis,
 And, taking breath, anew
 Catch up my legend's clew.]
 Knott's Upas daily spread its roots,
 Sent up on all sides livelier shoots,
 And bore more pestilential fruits;
 The ghosts behaved like downright brutes,
 They snipped holes in his Sunday suits,
 Practised all night on octave flutes,
 Put peas (not peace) into his boots,
 Whereof grew corns in season,
 They scotched his sheets, and, what was worse,
 Stuck his silk night-cap full of burs,

Till he, in language plain and terse,
(But much unlike a Bible verse),
Swore he should lose his reason.

Of course such doings, far and wide,
With rumors filled the country-side,
And (as it is our nation's pride
To think a Truth's not verified
Till with majorities allied,)
Parties sprung up, affirmed, denied,
And candidates with questions plied,
Who like the circus-riders, tried
At once both hobbies to bestride,
And each with his opponent vied
In being inexplicit.

Earnest inquirers multiplied ;
Folks, whose tenth cousins lately died,
Wrote letters long, and Knott replied ;
All who could either walk or ride,
Gathered to wonder or deride,
And paid the house a visit ;
Horses were at his pine-trees tied,
Mourners in every corner sighed,
Widows brought children there that cried,
Swarms of lean Seekers, eager-eyed,
(People Knott never could abide,)
Into each hole and cranny pried
With strings of questions cut and dried
From the Devout Inquirer's Guide,
For the wise spirits to decide—

As, for example, is it
True that the damned are fried or boiled ?
Was the Earth's axis greased or oiled ?

Who cleaned the moon when it was soiled ?

How heal diseased potatoes ?

Did spirits have the sense of smell ?

Where would departed spinsters dwell ?

If the late Zenas Smith were well ?

If Earth were solid or a shell ?

Were spirits fond of Doctor Fell ?

Did the bull toll Cock-Robin's knell ?

What remedy would bugs expel ?

If Paine's invention were sell ?

Did spirits by Webster's system spell ?

Was it a sin to be a belle ?

Did dancing sentence folks to hell ?

If so, then where most torture fell—

On little toes or great toes ?

If life's true seat were in the brain ?

Did Ensign mean to marry Jane ?

By whom, in fact, was Morgan slain ?

Could matter ever suffer pain ?

What would take out a cherry-stain ?

Who picked the pocket of Seth Crane,

Of Waldo precinct, State of Maine ?

Was Sir John Franklin sought in vain ?

Did primitive Christians ever train ?

What was the family-name of Cain ?

Them spoons, were they by Betty ta'en ?

Would earth-worm poultice cure a sprain ?

Was Socrates so dreadful plain ?

What teamster guided Charles's wain ?

Was Uncle Ethan mad or sane ?

And could his will in force remain ?

If not, what counsel to retain ?

Did Le Sage steal Gil Blas from Spain ?

Was Junius writ by Thomas Paine ?
 Were ducks discomfited by rain ?
How did Britannia rule the main ?
 Was Jonas coming back again ?
 Was vital truth upon the wane ?
 Did ghosts, to scare folks, drag a chain ?
 Who was our Huldah's chosen swain ?
 Did none have teeth pulled without payin',
 Ere ether was invented ?
 Whether mankind would not agree,
 If the universe were tuned in C ?
 What was it ailed Lucindy's knee ?
 Whether folks eat folks in Feejee ?
 Whether his name would end with T ?
 If Saturn's rings were two or three ?
 And what bump in Phrenology
 They truly represented ?
 These problems dark, wherein they groped,
 Wherewith man's reason vainly coped,
 Now that the spirit world was oped,
 In all humility they hoped
 Would be resolved instanter ;
 Each of the miscellaneous rout
 Brought his, or her, own little doubt,
 And wished to pump the spirits out,
 Through his, or her, own private spout,
 Into his, or her, decanter.

PART III.

Wherein it is shown that the most ardent Spirits are more ornamental than useful.

Many a speculating wight
 Came by express-trains, day and night,

To see if Knott would "sell his right,"
Meaning to make the ghosts a sight—
What they called a "meenaygerie ;"
One threatened, if he would not "trade,"
His run of custom to invade,
(He could not these sharp folks persuade
That he was not, in some way, paid,)

And stamp him as a plagiarist,
By coming down, at one fell swoop,
With THE ORIGINAL KNOCKING TROUPE

Come recently from Hades,
Who (for a quarter-dollar heard)
Would ne'er rap out a hasty word
Whence any blame might be incurred
From the most fastidious ladies ;
The late lamented Jesse Soule
To stir the ghosts up with a pole
And be director of the whole,

Who was engaged the rather
For the rare merits he'd combine,
Having been in the spirit line,
Which trade he only did resign
With general applause, to shine,
Awful in mail of cotton fine,

As ghost of Hamlet's father !
Another a fair plan reveals
Never yet hit on, which, he feels,
To Knott's religious sense appeals—

"We'll have your house set up on wheels,
A speculation pious ;
For music we can shortly find
A barrel-organ that will grind
Psalm-tunes (an instrument designed

For the New England tour) refined
 From secular drosses, and inclined
 To an unworldly turn (combined
 With no sectarian bias ;)
 Then, travelling by stages slow,
 Under the style of Knott & Co.,
 I would accompany the show
 As moral lecturer, the foe
 Of Rationalism ; you could throw
 The rappings in, and make them go
 Strict Puritan principles, you know,
 (How do you make 'em ? with your toe ?)
 And the receipts which thence might flow,

 We could divide between us ;
 Still more attractions to combine,
 Beside these services of mine,
 I will throw in a very fine
 (It would do nicely for a sign)
 Original Titian's Venus."
 Another offered handsome fees
 If Knott would get Demosthenes.
 (Nay, his mere knuckles, for more ease,)
 To rap a few short sentences ;
 Or if, for want of proper keys,
 His Greek might make confusion,
 Then, just to get a rap from Burke,
 To recommend a little work

 On Public Elocution.

 (Nonnulla hic desunt

Meliora quae sunt.

Meanwhile the spirits made replies
 To all the reverent whats and whys,

Resolving doubts of every size,
And giving seekers grave and wise,
Who came to know their destinies,
 A rap-turous reception ;
When unbelievers void of grace
Came to investigate the place,
(Creatures of Sadducistic race,
With grovelling intellects and base)
They could not find the slightest trace
 To indicate deception ;
Indeed, it is declared by some
That spirits (of this sort) are glum,
Almost, or wholly, deaf and dumb,
And (out of self-respect) quite mum
To sceptic natures cold and numb,
Who of this kind of Kingdom Come,
 Have not a just conception ;
True, there were people who demurred
That, though the raps no doubt were heard
 Both under them and o'er them,
Yet, somehow, when a search they made,
They found Miss Jenny sore afraid,
Or Jenny's lover, Doctor Slade,
Equally awe-struck and dismayed,
Or Deborah, the chamber-maid,
Whose terrors, not to be gainsaid,
In laughs hysteric were displayed,
 Was always there before them ;
This had its due effect with some
Who straight departed, muttering, Hum !
Transparent hoax ! and Gammon !
But these were few ; believing souls
Came, day by day, in larger shoals,

As the ancients to the windy holes
'Neath Delphi's tripod brought their doles,
Or to the shrine of Ammon.

The spirits seemed exceeding tame,
Call whom you fancied and he came ;
The shades august of eldest fame

You summoned with an awful ease ;
As grosser spirits gurgled out
From chair and table with a spout,
In Auerbach's cellar once, to flout
The senses of the rabble rout,
Where'er the gimlet twirled about

Of cunning Mephistopheles—
So did these spirits seem in store,
Behind the wainscot or the door,
Ready to thrill the being's core
Of every enterprising bore

With their astounding glamour ;
Whatever ghost one wished to hear,
By strange coincidence, was near
To make the past or future clear,

(Sometimes in shocking grammar,)
By raps and taps, now there, now here—
It seemed as if the spirit queer
Of some departed auctioneer
Were doomed to practise by the year

With the spirit of his hammer ;
Whate'er you asked was answered, yet
One could not very deeply get Into the obliging spirits' debt,
Because they used the alphabet

In all communications,
And new revealings (though sublime)

Rapped out, one letter at a time,
 With boggles, hesitations,
 Stoppings, beginnings o'er again,
 And getting matters into train,
 Could hardly overload the brain
 With too excessive rations,
 Since just to ask if two and two
Really make four? or, How d' ye do?
 And get the fit replies thereto
 In the tramundane rat-tat-too,
 Might ask a whole day's patience.

'T was strange ('mongst other things) to find
 In what odd sets the ghosts combined,

Happy forthwith to thump any Piece of intelligence inspired,
 The truth whereof had been inquired

By some one of the company ;
 For instance, Fielding, Mirabeau,
 Orator Henley, Cicero,
 Paley, John Zisca, Marivaux,
 Melanchthon, Robertson, Junot,
 Scaliger, Chesterfield, Rousseau,
 Hakluyt, Boccaccio, South, De Foe,
 Diaz, Josephus, Richard Roe,
 Odin, Arminius, Charles le gros.
 Tiresias, the late James Crow,
 Casabianca, Grose, Prideaux,
 Old Grimes, young Norval, Swift, Brissot,
 Maimonides, the Chevalier D 'O,
 Socrates, Fénelon, Job, Stow,
 The inventor of Elixir pro,
 Euripides, Spinoza, Poe,

Confucius, Hiram Smith, and Fo,
Came (as it seemed, somewhat de trop)
With a disembodied Esquimaux,
To say that it was so and so,

 With Franklin's Expedition ;
One testified to ice and snow,
One that the mercury was low,
One that his progress was quite slow,
One that he much desired to go,
One that the cook had frozen his toe, (Dissented from by Dandolo,
Wordsworth, Cynaegirus, Boileau,
La Hontan and Sir Thomas Roe,)
One saw twelve white bears in a row,
One saw eleven and a crow,
With other things we could not know
(Of great statistic value, though)

 By our mere mortal vision,
Sometimes the spirits made mistakes,
And seemed to play at ducks and drakes,
With bold inquiry's heaviest stakes

 In science or in mystery ;
They knew so little (and that wrong)
Yet rapped it out so bold and strong,
One would have said the entire throng

 Had been Professors of History ;
What made it odder was, that those
Who, you would naturally suppose,
Could solve a question, if they chose,
As easily as count their toes

 Were just the ones that blundered ;
One day, Ulysses happening down,
A reader of Sir Thomas Browne

And who (with him) had wondered
What song it was the Sirens sang,
Asked the shrewd Ithacan—bang! bang!
With this response the chamber rang,
“I guess it was Old Hundred.”
And Franklin, being asked to name
The reason why the lightning came,
Replied, “Because it thundered.”

On one sole point the ghosts agreed,
One fearful point, than which, indeed,
Nothing could seem absurder ;
Poor Colonel Jones they all abused,
And finally downright accused
The poor old man of murder ;
’T was thus ; by dreadful raps was shown
Some spirit’s longing to make known
A bloody fact, which he alone
Was privy to, (such ghosts more prone
In Earth’s affairs to meddle are ;)
Who are you? with awe-stricken looks,
All ask : his airy knuckles he crooks,
And raps, “I was Eliab Snooks,
That used to be a pedler ;
Some on ye still are on my books !”
Whereat, to inconspicuous nooks,
(More fearing this than common spooks,)
Shrank each indebted meddler ;
Further the vengeful ghost declared
That while his earthly life was spared,
About the country he had fared,
A duly licensed follower
Of that much-wandering trade that wins

Slow profit from the sale of tins,
And various kinds of hollow-ware ;
That Colonel Jones enticed him in Pretending that he wanted tin,
There slew him with a rolling-pin,
Hid him in a potato-bin,

And (the same night) him ferried
Across Great Pond to t' other shore,
And there on land of Widow Moore,
Just where you turn to Larkin's store,

Under a rock him buried ;
Some friends (who happened to be by)
He called upon to testify
That what he said was not a lie,

And that he did not stir this
Foul matter out of any spite
But from a simple love of right ;—

Which statement the Nine Worthies,
Rabbi Akiba, Charlemagne,
Seth, Colley Cibber, General Wayne,
Cambyses, Tasso, Tubal-Cain,
The owner of a castle in Spain,
Jehangire and the Widow of Nain,
(The friends aforesaid) made more plain

And by loud raps attested ;
To the same purport testified
Plato, John Wilkes and Colonel Pride
Who knew said Snooks before he died,
Had in his wares invested,
Thought him entitled to belief
And freely could concur, in brief
In everything the rest did.

Eliab this occasion seized,
(Distinctly here the Spirit sneezed)
To say that he should ne'er be eased
Till Jenny married whom she pleased,
Free from all checks and urgin's
(This spirit dropped his final g's)
And that, unless Knott quickly sees
This done, the spirits to appease,
They would come back his life to tease
As thick as mites in ancient cheese,
And let his house on an endless lease
To the ghosts (terrific rappers these And veritable Eumenides,)
Of the Eleven Thousand Virgins !

Knott was perplexed and shook his head,
He did not wish his child to wed
With a suspected murderer,
(For, true or false, the rumor spread,)
But as for this riled life he led,
"It would not answer," so he said,
"To have it go no furdere."

At last, scarce knowing what it meant,
Reluctantly he gave consent
That Jenny, since 't was evident
That she would follow her own bent,
Should make her own election ;
For that appeared the only way
These frightful noises to allay
Which had already turned him gray
And plunged him in dejection.

Accordingly, this artless maid
Her father's ordinance obeyed,
And, all in whitest crape arrayed,
(Miss Pulsifer the dresses made
And wishes here the fact displayed
That she still carries on the trade,
The third door south from Bagg's Arcade,)
A very faint "I do" essayed
And gave her hand to Hiram Slade,
From which time forth, the ghosts were laid ;
 And ne'er gave trouble after ;
But the Selectmen, be it known,
Dug underneath the aforesaid stone,
Where the poor pedler's corpse was thrown,
And found thereunder a jaw-bone,
Though, when the crowner sat thereon,
He nothing hatched, except alone
 Successive broods of laughter ;
It was a frail and dingy thing,
In which a grinder or two did cling,
 In color like molasses,
Which surgeons, called from far and wide,
Upon the horror to decide,
 Having put on their glasses,
Reported thus—"To judge by looks,
These bones, by some queer hooks or crooks,
May have belonged to Mr. Snooks,
But, as men deepest read in books
 Are perfectly aware, bones,
If buried, fifty years or so,
Lose their identity and grow
 From human bones to bare bones."

Still, if to Jaalam you go down,
You 'll find two parties in the town.
One headed by Benaiah Brown,
And one by Perez Tinkham ;
The first believe the ghosts all through,
And vow that they shall never rue
The happy chance by which they knew
That people in Jupiter are blue,
And very fond of Irish stew,
Two curious facts which Prince Lee Boo
Rapped clearly to a chosen few—

Whereas the others think 'em
A trick got up by Doctor Slade
With Deborah the chamber-maid

And that sly cretur Jenny,
That all the revelations wise,
At which the Brownites made big eyes,
Might have been given by Jared Keyes,
A natural fool and ninny.

And, last week, did n't Eliab Snooks,
Come back with never better looks,
As sharp as new bought mackerel hooks,

And bright as a new pin, eh ?
Good Parson Wilbur, too, avers
(Though to be mixed in parish stirs
Is worse than handling chestnut-burs)
That no case to his mind occurs
Where spirits ever did converse
Save in a kind of guttural Erse,

(So say the best authorities ;))
And that a charge by raps conveyed,
Should be most scrupulously weighed
And searched into before it is Made public, since it may give pain

That cannot soon be cured again,
And one word may infix a stain
Which ten cannot gloss over,
Though speaking for his private part,
He is rejoiced with all his heart
Miss Knott missed not her lover.

DECEMBER, 1850.

HAKON'S LAY.

THEN Thorstein looked at Hakon, where he sate,
Mute as a cloud amid the stormy hall,
And said : " O, Skald, sing now an olden song,
Such as our fathers heard who led great lives ;
And, as the bravest on a shield is borne
Along the waving host that shouts him king,
So rode their thrones upon the thronging seas ! "

Then the old man arose, white-haired he stood,
White-bearded, and with eyes that looked afar
From their still region of perpetual snow,
Over the little smokes and stirs of men :
His head was bowed with gathered flakes of years,
As winter bends the sea-foreboding pine,
But something triumphed in his brow and eye,
Which whoso saw it, could not see and crouch :
Loud rang the emptied beakers as he mused,
Brooding his eyried thoughts ; then, as an eagle
Circles smooth-winged above the wind-vexed woods.
So wheeled his soul into the air of song
High o'er the stormy hall ; and thus he sang :

“The fletcher for his arrow-shaft picks out
Wood closest-grained, long-seasoned, straight as light ;
And, from a quiver full of such as these,
The wary bow-man, matched against his peers,
Long doubting, singles yet once more the best.
Who is it that can make such shafts as Fate ?
What archer of his arrows is so choice,
Or hits the white so surely ? They are men,
The chosen of her quiver ; nor for her
Will every reed suffice, or cross-grained stick
At random from life's vulgar fagot plucked :
Such answer household ends ; but she will have Souls straight and clear, of toughest fibre, sound
Down to the heart of heart ; from these she strips
All needless stuff, all sapwood, hardens them,
From circumstance untoward feathers plucks
Crumpled and cheap, and barbs with iron will :
The hour that passes is her quiver-boy ;
When she draws bow, 't is not across the wind,
Nor 'gainst the sun, her haste-snatched arrow sings,
For sun and wind have plighted faith to her :
Ere men have heard the sinew twang, behold,
In the butt's heart her trembling messenger !

“The song is old and simple that I sing :
Good were the days of yore, when men were tried
By ring of shields, as now by ring of gold ;
But, while the gods are left, and hearts of men,
And the free ocean, still the days are good ;
Through the broad Earth roams Opportunity
And knocks at every door of hut or hall,
Until she finds the brave soul that she wants.”

He ceased, and instantly the frothy tide
Of interrupted wassail roared along ;
But Leif, the son of Eric, sate apart
Musing, and, with his eyes upon the fire,
Saw shapes of arrows, lost as soon as seen ;
But then with that resolve his heart was bent,
Which, like a humming shaft, through many a strife
Of day and night across the unventured seas,
Shot the brave prow to cut on Vinland sands
The first rune in the Saga of the West.

TO THE FUTURE.

O, LAND of Promise ! from what Pisgah's height
Can I behold thy stretch of peaceful bowers ?
Thy golden harvests flowing out of sight,
Thy nestled homes and sun-illuminated towers ?
Gazing upon the sunset's high-heaped gold,
Its crags of opal and of chrysolite,
Its deeps on deeps of glory that unfold
Still brightening abysses,
And blazing precipices,
Whence but a scanty leap it seems to heaven,
Sometimes a glimpse is given,
Of thy more gorgeous realm, thy more unstinted blisses.

O, Land of Quiet ! to thy shore the surf
Of the perturbed Present rolls and sleeps ;
Our storms breathe soft as June upon thy turf
And lure out blossoms ; to thy bosom leaps,
As to a mother's, the o'er wearied heart,

Hearing far off and dim the toiling mart,
The hurrying feet, the curses without number,
And, circled with the glow Elysian,
Of thine exulting vision,
Out of its very cares woos charms for peace and slumber.

To thee the Earth lifts up her fettered hands
And cries for vengeance ; with a pitying smile
Thou blessest her, and she forgets her bands,
And her old woe-worn face a little while
Grows young and noble ; unto thee the Oppressor
Looks, and is dumb with awe ;
The eternal law
Which makes the crime its own blindfold redresser,
Shadows his heart with perilous foreboding,
And he can see the grim-eyed Doom
From out the trembling gloom
Its silent-footed steeds toward his palace goading.

What promises hast thou for Poet's eyes,
Aweary of the turmoil and the wrong !
To all their hopes what over-joyed replies !
What undreamed ecstasies for blissful song !
Thy happy plains no war-trump's brawling clangor
Disturbs, and fools the poor to hate the poor ;
The humble glares not on the high with anger ;
Love leaves no grudge at less, no greed for more ;
In vain strives Self the godlike sense to smother ;
From the soul's deeps
It throbs and leaps ;
The noble 'neath foul rags beholds his long-lost brother.

To thee the Martyr looketh, and his fires
Unlock their fangs and leave his spirit free ;
To thee the Poet 'mid his toil aspires,
And grief and hunger climb about his knee
Welcome as children ; thou upholdest
The lone Inventor by his demon haunted ;
The Prophet cries to thee when hearts are coldest,
And, gazing o'er the midnight's bleak abyss,
Sees the drowsed soul awaken at thy kiss,
And stretch its happy arms and leap up disenchanted.

Thou bringest vengeance, but so loving kindly
The guilty thinks it pity ; taught by thee
Fierce tyrants drop the scourges wherewith blindly
Their own souls they were scarring ; conquerors see
With horror in their hands the accursed spear
That tore the meek One's side on Calvary,
And from their trophies shrink with ghastly fear ;
Thou, too, art the Forgiver,
The beauty of man's soul to man revealing ;
The arrows from thy quiver
Pierce error's guilty heart, but only pierce for healing.

O, whither, whither, glory-wingèd dreams,
From out Life's sweat and turmoil would ye bear
me ?
Shut, gates of Fancy, on your golden gleams,
This agony of hopeless contrast spare me !
Fade, cheating glow, and leave me to my night !
He is a coward who would borrow
A charm against the present sorrow
From the vague Future's promise of delight :
As life's alarums nearer roll,

The ancestral buckler calls,
Self-clanging, from the walls
In the high temple of the soul ;
Where are most sorrows, there the poet's sphere is,
To feed the soul with patience,
To heal its desolations
With words of unshorn truth, with love that never wearies.

OUT OF DOORS.

'T is good to be abroad in the sun,
His gifts abide when day is done ;
Each thing in nature from his cup
Gathers a several virtue up ;
The grace within its being's reach
Becomes the nutriment of each,
And the same life imbibed by all
Makes each most individual :
Here the twig-bending peaches seek
The glow that mantles in their cheek—
Hence comes the Indian-summer bloom
That hazes round the basking plum,
And, from the same impartial light,
The grass sucks green, the lily white.

Like these the soul, for sunshine made,
Grows wan and gracile in the shade,
Her faculties, which God decreed
Various as Summer's dædal breed,
With one sad color are imbued,
Shut from the sun that tints their blood ;

The shadow of the poet's roof
Deadens the dyes of warp and woof ;
Whate'er of ancient song remains
Has fresh air flowing in its veins,
For Greece and eldest Ind knew well
That out of doors, with world-wide swell
Arches the student's lawful cell.

Away, unfruitful lore of books,
For whose vain idiom we reject
The spirit's mother-dialect,
Aliens among the birds and brooks,
Dull to interpret or believe
What gospels lost the woods retrieve,
Or what the eaves-dropping violet
Reports from God, who walketh yet
His garden in the hush of eve !
Away, ye pedants city-bred,
Unwise of heart, too wise of head,
Who handcuff Art with thus and so,
And in each other's footprints tread,
Like those who walk through drifted snow ;

Who, from deep study of brick walls
Conjecture of the water-falls,
By six square feet of smoke-stained sky
Compute those deeps that overlie
The still tarn's heaven-anointed eye,
And, in your earthen crucible,
With chemic tests essay to spell
How nature works in field and dell !
Seek we where Shakspeare buried gold ?
Such hands no charmed witch-hazel hold ;
To beach and rock repeats the sea

The mystic Open Sesame ;
Old Greylock's voices not in vain
Comment on Milton's mountain strain,
And cunningly the various wind
Spenser's locked music can unbind.

A REVERIE.

IN the twilight deep and silent
Comes thy spirit unto mine,
When the moonlight and the starlight
Over cliff and woodland shine,
And the quiver of the river
Seems a thrill of joy benign.

Then I rise and wander slowly
To the headland by the sea,
When the evening star throbs setting
Through the cloudy cedar tree,
And from under, mellow thunder
Of the surf comes fitfully.

Then within my soul I feel thee
Like a gleam of other years,
Visions of my childhood murmur
Their old madness in my ears,
Till the pleasance of thy presence
Cools my heart with blissful tears.

All the wondrous dreams of boyhood—
All youth's fiery thirst of praise—
All the surer hopes of manhood
Blossoming in sadder days—
Joys that bound me, griefs that crowned me

With a better wreath than bays—
All the longings after freedom—
The vague love of human kind,
Wandering far and near at random
Like a winged seed in the wind—
The dim yearnings and fierce burnings
Of an undirected mind—

All of these, oh best belovèd,
Happiest present dreams and past,
In thy love find safe fulfilment,
Ripened into truths at last ;
Faith and beauty, hope and duty
To one centre gather fast.

How my nature, like an ocean,
At the breath of thine awakes,
Leaps its shores in mad exulting
And in foamy thunder breaks,
Then downsinking, lieth shrinking
At the tumult that it makes !

Blazing Hesperus hath sunken
Low within the pale-blue west,
And with golden splendor crowneth
The horizon's piny crest ;
Thoughtful quiet stills the riot
Of wild longing in my breast.
Home I loiter through the moonlight,
Underneath the quivering trees,
Which, as if a spirit stirred them,
Sway and bend, till by degrees
The far surge's murmur merges
In the rustle of the breeze.

IN SADNESS.

THERE is not in this life of ours
One bliss unmixed with fears,
The hope that wakes our deepest powers
A face of sadness wears,
And the dew that showers our dearest flowers
Is the bitter dew of tears.

Fame waiteth long, and lingereth
Through weary nights and morns—
And evermore the shadow Death
With mocking finger scorns
That underneath the laurel wreath
Should be a wreath of thorns.

The laurel leaves are cool and green,
But the thorns are hot and sharp,
Lean Hunger grins and stares between
The poet and his harp;
Though of Love's sunny sheen his woof have been,
Grim want thrusts in the warp.

And if beyond this darksome clime
Some fair star Hope may see,
That keeps unjarred the blissful chime
Of its golden infancy—
Where the harvest-time of faith sublime
Not always is to be—

Yet would the true soul rather choose
Its home where sorrow is,
Than in a sated peace to lose
Its life's supremest bliss—

The rainbow hues that bend profuse
O'er cloudy spheres like this—

The want, the sorrow and the pain,
That are Love's right to cure—
The sunshine bursting after rain—
The gladness insecure
That makes us fain strong hearts to gain
To do and to endure.

High natures must be thunder-scarred
With many a searing wrong ;
From mother Sorrow's breasts the bard
Sucks gifts of deepest song,
Nor all unmarred with struggles hard
Wax the Soul's sinews strong.

Dear Patience, too, is born of woe,
Patience that opes the gate
Wherethrough the soul of man must go
Up to each noble state,
Whose voice's flow so meek and low
Smooths the bent brows of Fate.

Though Fame be slow, yet Death is swift.
And, o'er the spirit's eyes,
Life after life doth change and shift
With larger destinies :
As on we drift, some wider rift
Shows us serener skies.

And though naught falleth to us here
But gains the world counts loss,
Though all we hope of wisdom clear

When climbed to seems but dross,
Yet all, though ne'er Christ's faith they wear,
At least may share his cross.

FAREWELL.

FAREWELL ! as the bee round the blossom
Doth murmur drowsily,
So murmureth round my bosom
The memory of thee ,
Lingering, it seems to go,
When the wind more full doth flow
Waving the flower to and fro,
But still it turneth, Marian !
My hope no longer burneth,
Which did so fiercely burn,
My joy to sorrow turneth,
Although loath, loath to turn—
I would forget—
And yet—and yet
My heart to thee still yearneth, Marian !

Fair as a single star thou shinest,
And white as lilies are
The slender hands wherewith thou twinest
Thy heavy auburn hair ;
Thou art to me
A memory
Of all that is divinest :
Thou art so fair and tall,
Thy looks so queenly are,
Thy very shadow on the wall,

Thy step upon the stair,
The thought that thou art nigh,
The chance look of thine eye
Are more to me than all, Marian,
And will be till I die !

As the last quiver of a bell
Doth fade into the air,
With a subsiding swell
That dies we know not where,
So my hope melted and was gone :
I raised mine eyes to bless the star
That shared its light with me so far
Below its silver throne,
And gloom and chilling vacancy
Were all was left to me,
In the dark, bleak night I was alone !
Alone in the blessed Earth, Marian,
For what were all to me—
Its love, and light, and mirth, Marian,
If I were not with thee ?

My heart will not forget thee
More than the moaning brine
Forgets the moon when she is set ;
The gush when first I met thee
That thrilled my brain like wine,
Doth thrill as madly yet ;
My heart cannot forget thee,
Though it may droop and pine,
Too deeply it had set thee
In every love of mine ;
No new moon ever cometh,

No flower ever bloometh,
No twilight ever gloometh,
But I'm more only thine.
Oh look not on me, Marian,
Thine eyes are wild and deep,
And they have won me, Marian,
From peacefulness and sleep ;
The sunlight doth not sun me,
The meek moonshine doth shun me.
All sweetest voices stun me—
There is no rest
Within my breast
And I can only weep, Marian !

As a landbird far at sea
Doth wander through the sleet
And drooping downward wearily
Finds no rest for her feet,
So wandereth my memory
O'er the years when we did meet :
I used to say that everything
Partook a share of thee,
That not a little bird could sing,
Or green leaf flutter on a tree,
That nothing could be beautiful
Save part of thee were there,
That from thy soul so clear and full
All bright and blessed things did cull
The charm to make them fair ;
And now I know
That it was so,
Thy spirit through the earth doth flow
And face me whereso'er I go—

What right hath perfectness to give Such weary weight of woe
Unto the soul which cannot live
On anything more low ?
Oh leave me, leave me, Marian,
There 's no fair thing I see
But doth deceive me, Marian,
Into sad dreams of thee !

A cold snake gnaws my heart
And crushes round my brain,
And I should glory but to part
So bitterly again,
Feeling the slow tears start
And fall in fiery rain :
There's a wide ring round the moon,
The ghost-like clouds glide by,
And I hear the sad winds croon
A dirge to the lowering sky ;
There 's nothing soft or mild
In the pale moon's sickly light,
But all looks strange and wild
Through the dim, foreboding night :
I think thou must be dead
In some dark and lonely place,
With candles at thy head,
And a pall above thee spread
To hide thy dead, cold face ;
But I can see thee underneath
So pale, and still, and fair,
Thine eyes closed smoothly and a wreath
Of flowers in thy hair ;
I never saw thy face so clear

When thou wast with the living,
As now beneath the pall, so drear,
And stiff, and unforgiving ;
I cannot flee thee, Marian,
I cannot turn away,
Mine eyes must see thee, Marian,
Through salt tears night and day.

A DIRGE.

Poet ! lonely is thy bed,
And the turf is overhead—
Cold earth is thy cover ;
But thy heart hath found release,
And it slumbers full of peace
'Neath the rustle of green trees
And the warm hum of the bees,
'Mid the drowsy clover ;
Through thy chamber, still as death,
A smooth gurgle wandereth,
As the blue stream murmureth
To the blue sky over.

Three paces from the silver strand,
Gently in the fine, white sand,
With a lily in thy hand,
Pale as snow, they laid thee ;
In no coarse earth wast thou hid,
And no gloomy coffin-lid
Darkly overweighed thee.
Silently as snow-flakes drift,
The smooth sand did sift and sift

O'er the bed they made thee ;
All sweet birds did come and sing
At thy sunny burying—
Choristers unbidden,
And, beloved of sun and dew,
Meek forget-me-nots upgrew
Where thine eyes so large and blue
'Neath the turf were hidden.

Where thy stainless clay doth lie,
Blue and open is the sky ;
And the white clouds wander by,
Dreams of summer silently
Darkening the river ;
Thou hearest the clear water run ;
And the ripples every one,
Scattering the golden sun,
Through thy silence quiver ;
Vines trail down upon the stream,
Into its smooth and glassy dream
A green stillness spreading,
And the shiner, perch, and bream
Through the shadowed waters gleam
'Gainst the current heading.

White as snow, thy winding sheet
Shelters thee from head to feet,
Save thy pale face only ;
Thy face is turned toward the skies,
The lids lie meekly o'er thine eyes,
And the low-voiced pine-tree sighs
O'er thy bed so lonely.
All thy life thou lov'dst its shade :

Underneath it thou art laid,
In an endless shelter ;
Thou hearest it forever sigh
As the wind's vague longings die
In its branches dim and high—
Thou hear'st the waters gliding by Slumberously welter.

Thou wast full of love and truth,
Of forgiveness and ruth—
Thy great heart with hope and youth
Tided to o'erflowing.
Thou didst dwell in mysteries,
And there lingered on thine eyes
Shadows of serener skies,
Awfully wild memories,
That wer like foreknowing ;
Through the earth thou would'st have gone,
Lighted from within alone,
Seeds from flowers i Heaven grown
With a free hand sowing.

Thou didst r memb r well and long
Some fragments of thine angel-song,
And strive, through want of woe and wrong,
To win the world unto it ;
Thy sin it was to see and hear
Beyond To-day's dim hemisphere—
Beyond all mists of hope and fear,
Into a life more true and clear,
And dearly thou didst rue it ;
Light of the new world thou hadst won,
O'erflooded by a purer sun—

Slowly Fate's ship came drifting on,
And through the dark, save thou, not one
Caught of the land a token.
Thou stood'st upon the farthest prow,
Something within thy soul said "Now!"
And leaping forth with eager brow,
Thou fell'st on shore heart-broken.

Long time thy brethren stood in fear;
Only the breakers far and near,
White with their anger, they could hear;
The sounds of land, which thy quick ear
Caught long ago, they heard not.
And, when at last they reached the strand,
They found thee lying on the sand
With some wild flowers in thy hand,
But thy cold bosom stirred not;
They listened, but they heard no sound
Save from the glad life all around
A low, contented murmur.
The long grass bowed adown the hill,
A hum rose from a hidden rill,
But thy glad heart, that knew no ill
But too much love, lay dead and still—
The only thing that sent a chill
Into the heart of summer.
Thou didst not seek the poet's wreath
But too soon didst win it;
Without 't was green, but underneath
Were scorn and loneliness and death,
Gnawing the brain with burning teeth,
And making mock within it.
Thou, who wast full of nobleness,

Whose very life-blood 't was to bless,
Whose soul's one law was giving,
Must bandy words with wickedness,
Haggle with hunger and distress,
To win that death which worldliness
Calls bitterly a living.

“Thou sow'st no gold, and shalt not reap!”
Muttered earth, turning in her sleep;
“Come home to the Eternal Deep!”
Murmured a voice, and a wide sweep
Of wings through thy soul's hush did creep,
As of thy doom o'erflying;
It seem'd that thy strong heart would leap
Out of thy breast, and thou didst weep,
But not with fear of dying;
Men could not fathom thy deep fears,
They could not understand thy tears,
The hoarded agony of years
Of bitter self-denying.
So once, when high above the spheres
Thy spirit sought its starry peers,
It came not back to face the jeers
Of brothers who denied it;
Star-crowned, thou dost possess the deeps
Of God, and thy white body sleeps
Where the lone pine forever keeps
Patient watch beside it.

Poet! underneath the turf,
Soft thou sleepest, free from morrow,
Thou hast struggled through the surf
Of wild thoughts and want and sorrow.

Now, beneath the moaning pine,
Full of rest, thy body lieth,
While far up is clear sunshine,
Underneath a sky divine,
Her loosed wings thy spirit trieth ;
Oft she strove to spread them here,
But they were too white and clear
For our dingy atmosphere.

Thy body findeth ample room
In its still and grassy tomb
By the silent river ;
But thy spirit found the earth
Narrow for the mighty birth
Which it dreamed of ever ;
Thou wast guilty of a rhyme
Learned in a benigner clime,
And of that more grievous crime,
An ideal too sublime
For the low-hung sky of Time.

The calm spot where thy body lies
Gladdens thy soul in Paradise,
It is so still and holy ;
Thy body sleeps serenely there,
And well for it thy soul may care,
It was so beautiful and fair,
Lily white so wholly.

From so pure and sweet a frame
Thy spirit parted as it came,
Gentle as a maiden ;
Now it lieth full of rest—

Sods are lighter on its breast
Than the great, prophetic guest
Wherewith it was laden.

FANCIES ABOUT A ROSEBUD,

PRESSED IN AN OLD COPY OF SPENSER.

Who prest you here? The Past can tell,
When summer skies were bright above,
And some full heart did leap and swell
Beneath the white new moon of love.

Some Poet, haply, when the world
Showed like a calm sea, grand and blue,
Ere its cold, inky waves had curled
O'er the numb heart once warm and true;

When, with his soul brimful of morn,
He looked beyond the vale of Time,
Nor saw therein the dullard scorn
That made his heavenliness a crime;

When, musing o'er the Poets olden,
His soul did like a sun upstart
To shoot its arrows, clear and golden,
Through slavery's cold and darksome heart.

Alas! too soon the veil is lifted
That hangs between the soul and pain,
Too soon the morning-red hath drifted
Into dull cloud, or fallen in rain!

Or were you prest by one who nurst
Bleak memories of love gone by,
Whose heart, like a star fallen, burst
In dark and erring vacancy ?

To him you still were fresh and green
As when you grew upon the stalk,
And many a breezy summer scene
Came back—and many a moonlit walk ;

And there would be a hum of bees,
A smell of childhood in the air,
And old, fresh feelings cooled the breeze
That, like loved fingers, stirred his hair !

Then would you suddenly be blasted
By the keen wind of one dark thought,
One nameless woe, that had outlasted
The sudden blow whereby 't was brought.

Or were you prest here by two lovers
Who seemed to read these verses rare,
But found between the antique covers
What Spenser could not prison there :

Songs which his glorious soul had heard,
But his dull pen could never write,
Which flew, like some gold-wingèd bird,
Through the blue heaven out of sight ?

My heart is with them as they sit,
I see the rosebud in her breast,
I see her small hand taking it
From out its odorous, snowy nest ;

I hear him swear that he will keep it,
In memory of that blessed day,
To smile on it or over-weep it
When she and spring are far away.

Ah me ! I needs must droop my head,
And brush away a happy tear,
For they are gone, and, dry and dead,
The rosebud lies before me here.

Yet is it in no stranger's hand,
For I will guard it tenderly,
And it shall be a magic wand
To bring mine own true love to me.

My heart runs o'er with sweet surmises,
The while my fancy weaves her rhyme,
Kind hopes and musical surprises
Throng round me from the olden time.

I do not care to know who prest you :
Enough for me to feel and know
That some heart's love and longing blest you,
Knitting to-day with long-ago.

NEW YEAR'S EVE, 1844.

A FRAGMENT.

THE night is calm and beautiful ; the snow
Sparkles beneath the clear and frosty moon
And the cold stars, as if it took delight
In its own silent whiteness ; the hushed earth
Sleeps in the soft arms of the embracing blue,

Secure as if angelic squadrons yet
Encamped about her, and each watching star
Gained double brightness from the flashing arms
Of wingèd and unsleeping sentinels.
Upward the calm of infinite silence deepens,
The sea that flows between high heaven and earth,
Musing by whose smooth brink we sometimes find
A stray leaf floated from those happier shores,
And hope, perchance not vainly, that some flower,
Which we had watered with our holiest tears,
Pale blooms, and yet our scanty garden's best,
O'er the same ocean piloted by love,
May find a haven at the feet of God,
And be not wholly worthless in his sight.
O, high dependence on a higher Power,
Sole stay for all these restless faculties
That wander, Ishmael-like, the desert bare
Wherein our human knowledge hath its home,
Shifting their light-framed tents from day to day,
With each new-found oasis, wearied soon,
And only certain of uncertainty !
O, mighty humbleness that feels with awe,
Yet with a vast exulting feels, no less,
That this huge Minister of the Universe,
Whose smallest oratories are glorious worlds,
With painted oriels of dawn and sunset ;
Whose carvèd ornaments are systems grand,
Orion kneeling in his starry niche,
The Lyre whose strings give music audible
To holy ears, and countless splendors more,
Crowned by the blazing Cross high-hung o'er all ;
Whose organ music is the solemn stops
Of endless Change breathed through by endless Good ;

Whose choristers are all the morning stars ;
Whose altar is the sacred human heart
Whereon Love's candles burn unquenchably,
Trimmed day and night by gentle-handed Peace ;
With all its arches and its pinnacles
That stretch forever and forever up,
Is founded on the silent heart of God,
Silent, yet pulsing forth exhaustless life
Through the least veins of all created things.
Fit musings these for the departing year ;
And God be thanked for such a crystal night
As fills the spirit with good store of thoughts,
That, like a cheering fire of walnut, crackle
Upon the hearthstone of the heart, and cast
A mild-home glow o'er all Humanity !
Yes, though the poisoned shafts of the evil doubts
Assail the skyey panoply of Faith,
Though the great hopes which we have had for man,
Foes in disguise, because they based belief
On man's endeavor, not on God's decree—
Though these proud-visaged hopes, once turned to fly,
Hurl backward many a deadly Parthian dart
That rankles in the soul and makes it sick
With vain regret, nigh verging on despair—
Yet, in such calm and earnest hours as this,
We well can feel how every living heart
That sleeps to-night in palace or in cot,
Or unroofed hovel, or which need hath known
Of other homestead than the arching sky,
Is circled watchfully with seraph fires ;
How our own erring will it is that hangs
The flaming sword o'er Eden's unclosed gate,
Which gives free entrance to the pure in heart,

And with its guarding walls doth fence the meek.
Sleep then, O Earth, in thy blue-vaulted cradle,
Bent over always by thy mother Heaven !
We all are tall enough to reach God's hand,
And angels are no taller : looking back
Upon the smooth wake of a year o'erpast,
We see the black clouds furling, one by one,
From the advancing majesty of Truth,
And something won for Freedom, whose least gain
Is as a firm and rock-built citadel
Wherefrom to launch fresh battle on her foes ;
Or, leaning from the time's extremest prow,
If we gaze forward through the blinding spray,
And dimly see how much of ill remains,
How many fetters to be sawn asunder
By the slow toil of individual zeal,
Or haply rusted by salt tears in twain,
We feel, with something of a sadder heart,
Yet bracing up our bruised mail the while,
And fronting the old foe with fresher spirit,
How great it is to breathe with human breath,
To be but poor foot-soldiers in the ranks
Of our old exiled king, Humanity ;
Encamping after every hard-won field
Nearer and nearer Heaven's happy plains.

Many great souls have gone to rest, and sleep
Under this armor, free and full of peace :
If these have left the earth, yet Truth remains,
Endurance, too, the crowning faculty
Of noble minds, and Love, invincible
By any weapons ; and these hem us round
With silence such that all the groaning clank

Of this mad engine men have made of earth
Dulls not some ears for catching purer tones,
That wander from the dim surrounding vast,
Or far more clear melodious prophecies,
The natural music of the heart of man,
Which by kind Sorrow's ministry hath learned
That the true sceptre of all power is love
And humbleness the palace-gate of truth.
What man with soul so blind as sees not here
The first faint tremble of Hope's morning-star,
Foretelling how the God-forged shafts of dawn,
Fitted already on their golden string,
Shall soon leap earthward with exulting flight
To thrud the dark heart of that evil faith
Whose trust is in the clumsy arms of Force,
The ozier hauberk of a ruder age ?
Freedom ! thou other name for happy Truth,
Thou warrior-maid, whose steel-clad feet were never
Out of the stirrup, nor thy lance uncouched,
Nor thy fierce eye enticèd from its watch,
Thou hast learned now, by hero-blood in vain
Poured to enrich the soil which tyrants reap ;
By wasted lives of prophets, and of those
Who, by the promise in their souls upheld,
Into the red arms of a fiery death
Went blithely as the golden-girdled bee
Sinks in the sleepy poppy's cup of flame
By the long woes of nations set at war,
That so the swollen torrent of their wrath
May find a vent, else sweeping off like straws
The thousand cobweb threads, grown cable-huge
By time's long gathered dust, but cobwebs still,
Which bind the Many that the Few may gain

Leisure to wither by the drought of ease
What heavenly germs in their own souls were sown ;—
By all these searching lessons thou hast learned
To throw aside thy blood-stained helm and spear
And with thy bare brow daunt the enemy's front,
Knowing that God will make the lily stalk,
In the soft grasp of naked Gentleness,
Stronger than iron spear to shatter through
The sevenfold toughness of Wrong's idle shield.

A MYSTICAL BALLAD.

I.

THE sunset scarce had dimmed away
Into the twilight's doubtful gray ;
One long cloud o'er the horizon lay,
Neath which, a streak of bluish white,
Wavered between the day and night ;
Over the pine trees on the hill
The trembly evening-star did thrill,
And the new moon, with slender rim,
Through the elm arches gleaming dim,
Filled memory's chalice to the brim.

II.

On such an eve the heart doth grow
Full of surmise, and scarce can know
If it be now or long ago,
Or if indeed it doth exist ;—
A wonderful enchanted mist
From the new moon doth wander out,
Wrapping all things in mystic doubt,

So that this world doth seem untrue,
And all our fancies to take hue
From some life ages since gone through.

III.

The maiden sat and heard the flow
Of the west wind so soft and low
The leaves scarce quivered to and fro ;
Unbound, her heavy golden hair
Rippled across her bosom bare,
Which gleamed with thrilling snowy white
Far through the magical moonlight :
The breeze rose with a rustling swell,
And from afar there came the smell
Of a long-forgotten lily-bell.

IV.

The dim moon rested on the hill,
But silent, without thought or will,
Where sat the dreamy maiden still ;
And now the moon's tip, like a star,
Drew down below the horizon's bar ;
To her black noon the night hath grown,
Yet still the maiden sits alone,
Pale as a corpse beneath a stream
And her white bosom still doth gleam
Through the deep midnight like a dream.

V.

Cloudless the morning came and fair,
And lavishly the sun doth share
His gold among her golden hair,
Kindling it all, till slowly so

A glory round her head doth glow ;
A withered flower is in her hand,
That grew in some far distant land,
And, silently transfigurèd,
With wide calm eyes, and undrooped head,
They found the stranger-maiden dead.

VI.

A youth, that morn, 'neath other skies,
Felt sudden tears burn in his eyes,
And his heart throng with memories ;
All things without him seemed to win
Strange brotherhood with things within,
And he forever felt that he Walked in the midst of mystery,
And thenceforth, why, he could not tell,
His heart would curdle at the smell
Of his once-cherished lily-bell.

VII.

Something from him had passed away ;
Some shifting trembles of clear day,
Through starry crannies in his clay,
Grew bright and steadfast, more and more,
Where all had been dull earth before ;
And, through these chinks, like him of old,
His spirit converse high did hold
With clearer loves and wider powers,
That brought him dewy fruits and flowers
From far Elysian groves and bowers.

VIII.

Just on the farther bound of sense,
Unproved by outward evidence,

But known by a deep influence
Which through our grosser clay doth shine
With light unwaning and divine,
Beyond where highest thought can fly
Stretcheth the world of Mystery—
And they not greatly overween
Who deem that nothing true hath been Save the unspeakable Unseen.

IX.

One step beyond life's work-day things,
One more beat of the soul's broad wings
One deeper sorrow sometimes brings
The spirit into that great Vast
Where neither future is nor past ;
None knoweth how he entered there,
But, waking, finds his spirit where
He thought an angel could not soar,
And, what he called false dreams before,
The very air about his door.

X.

These outward seemings are but shows
Whereby the body sees and knows ;
Far down beneath, forever flows
A stream of subtlest sympathies
That make our spirits strangely wise
In awe, and fearful bodings dim
Which, from the sense's outer rim,
Stretch forth beyond our thought and sight,
Fine arteries of circling light,
Pulsed outward from the Infinite.

OPENING POEM TO

A YEAR'S LIFE.

HOPE first the youthful Poet leads,
And he is glad to follow her ;
Kind is she, and to all his needs
With a free hand doth minister.

But, when sweet Hope at last hath fled,
Cometh her sister, Memory ;
She wreathes Hope's garlands round her head,
And strives to seem as fair as she.

Then Hope comes back, and by the hand
She leads a child most fair to see,
Who with a joyous face doth stand
Uniting Hope and Memory.

So brighter grew the Earth around,
And bluer grew the sky above ;
The Poet now his guide hath found,
And follows in the steps of Love.

DEDICATION

TO VOLUME OF POEMS ENTITLED

A YEAR'S LIFE.

THE gentle Una I have loved,
The snowy maiden, pure and mild,
Since ever by her side I roved,
Through ventures strange, a wondering child,
In fantasy a Red Cross Knight,
Burning for her dear sake to fight.

If there be one who can, like her,
Make sunshine in life's shady places,
One in whose holy bosom stir
As many gentle household graces—
And such I think there needs must be—
Will she accept this book from me ?

THRENODIA.

GONE, gone from us ! and shall we see
Those sybil-leaves of destiny,
Those calm eyes, nevermore ?
Those deep, dark eyes so warm and bright,
Wherein the fortunes of the man
Lay slumbering in prophetic light,
In characters a child might scan ?
So bright, and gone forth utterly ?
O stern word—Nevermore !

The stars of those two gentle eyes
Will shine no more on earth ;
Quenched are the hopes that had their birth,
As we watched them slowly rise,
Stars of a mother's fate ;
And she would read them o'er and o'er,
Pondering, as she sate,
Over their dear astrology,
Which she had conned and conned before,
Deeming she needs must read aright
What was writ so passing bright.
And yet, alas ! she knew not why,
Her voice would falter in its song,

And tears would slide from out her eye,
Silent, as they were doing wrong.
Her heart was like a wind-flower, bent
Even to breaking with the balmy dew,
Turning its heavenly nourishment
(That filled with tears its eyes of blue,
Like a sweet suppliant that weeps in prayer,
Making her innocency show more fair,
Albeit unwitting of the ornament,)
Into a load too great for it to bear :
O stern word—Nevermore !

The tongue, that scarce had learned to claim
An entrance to a mother's heart
By that dear talisman, a mother's name,
Sleeps all forgetful of its art !
I loved to see the infant soul
(How mighty in the weakness
Of its untutored meekness !)
Peep timidly from out its nest,
His lips, the while,
Fluttering with half-fledged words,
Or hushing to a smile
That more than words expressed,
When his glad mother on him stole
And snatched him to her breast !
O, thoughts were brooding in those eyes,
That would have soared like strong-winged birds
Far, far into the skies,
Gladdening the earth with song
And gushing harmonies,
Had he but tarried with us long !
O stern word—Nevermore !

How peacefully they rest,
Crossfolded there
Upon his little breast,
Those small, white hands that ne'er were still before,
But ever sported with his mother's hair,
Or the plain cross that on her breast she wore !
Her heart no more will beat
To feel the touch of that soft palm,
That ever seemed a new surprise
Sending glad thoughts up to her eyes
To bless him with their holy calm—
Sweet thoughts ! they made her eyes as sweet.
How quiet are the hands
That wove those pleasant bands !
But that they do not rise and sink
With his calm breathing, I should think
That he were dropped asleep ;
Alas ! too deep, too deep
In this his slumber !
Time scarce can number
The years ere he will wake again—
O, may we see his eyelids open then !
O stern word—Nevermore !

As the airy gossamere,
Floating in the sunlight clear,
Where'er it toucheth clinging tightly
Round glossy leaf or stump unsightly,
So from his spirit wandered out
Tendrils spreading all about,
Knitting all things to its thrall
With a perfect love of all :
O stern word—Nevermore !

He did but float a little way
Adown the stream of time,
With dreamy eyes watching the ripples play,
Or listening to their fairy chime ;
His slender sail
Ne'er felt the gale ;
He did but float a little way,
And, putting to the shore
While yet 't was early day,
Went calmly on his way,
To dwell with us no more !
No jarring did he feel,
No grating on his vessel's keel ;
A strip of silver sand
Mingled the waters with the land
Where he was seen no more :
O stern word—Nevermore !

Full short his journey was ; no dust
Of earth into his sandals clave ;
The weary weight that old men must,
He bore not to the grave.
He seemed a cherub who had lost his way
And wandered hither, so his stay
With us was short, and 't was most meet
That he should be no delver in Earth's clod,
Nor need to pause and cleanse his feet
To stand before his God ;
O blest word—Evermore !

THE SERENADE.

GENTLE, Lady, be thy sleeping,
Peaceful may thy dreamings be,
While around thy soul is sweeping,
Dreamy-winged, our melody ;
Chant we, Brothers, sad and slow,
Let our song be soft and low,
As the voice of other years,
Let our hearts within us melt,
To gentleness, as if we felt
The dropping of our mother's tears.

Lady ! now our song is bringing Back again thy childhood's hours—
Hearest thou the humbee singing
Drowsily among the flowers ?
Sleepily, sleepily
In the noontide swayeth he,
Half-rested on the slender stalks
That edge those well-known garden walks ;
Hearest thou the fitful whirring
Of the humbird's viewless wings—
Feel'st not round thy heart the stirring
Of childhood's half-forgotten things ?

Seest thou the dear old dwelling
With the woodbine round the door ?
Brothers, soft ! her breast is swelling
With the busy thoughts of yore ;
Lowly sing ye, sing ye mildly,
Rouse her spirit not so wildly,
Lest she sleep not any more.
'T is the pleasant summertide,

Open stands the window wide—
Whose voices, Lady, art thou drinking ?
Who sings that best belovèd tune
In a clear note, rising, sinking,
Like a thrush's song in June ?
Whose laugh is that which rings so clear
And joyous in thine eager ear ?

Lower, Brothers, yet more low
Weave the song in mazy twines ;
She heareth now the west wind blow
At evening through the clump of pines ;
O ! mournful is their tune,
As of a crazèd thing
Who, to herself alone,
Is ever murmuring,
Through the night and through the day,
For something that hath passed away.
Often, Lady, hast thou listened,
Often have thy blue eyes glistened,
Where the summer evening breeze
Moaned sadly through those lonely trees,
Or with the fierce wind from the north
Wrung their mournful music forth.
Ever the river floweth
In an unbroken stream,
Ever the west wind bloweth,
Murmuring as he goeth,
And mingling with her dream ;
Onward still the river sweepeth
With a sound of long-agone ;
Lowly, Brothers, lo ! she weepeth,
She is now no more alone ;

Long-loved forms and long-loved faces
Round about her pillow throng,
Through her memory's desert places
Flow the waters of our song.
Lady ! if thy life be holy
As when thou wert yet a child,
Though our song be melancholy,
It will stir no anguish wild ;
For the soul that hath lived well,
For the soul that child-like is,
There is quiet in the spell
That brings back early memories.

SONG.

I.

LIFT up the curtains of thine eyes
And let their light outshine !
Let me adore the mysteries
Of those mild orbs of thine,
Which ever queenly calm do roll,
Attuned to an ordered soul !

II.

Open thy lips yet once again
And, while my soul doth hush
With awe, pour forth that holy strain
Which seemeth me to gush,
A fount of music, running o'er
From thy deep spirit's inmost core !

III.

The melody that dwells in thee
Begets in me as well
A spiritual harmony,
A mild and blessèd spell ;
Far, far above earth's atmosphere
I rise, whene'er thy voice I hear.

THE DEPARTED.

Not they alone are the departed,
Who have laid them down to sleep
In the grave narrow and lonely,
Not for them only do I vigils keep,
Not for them only am I heavy-hearted,
Not for them only !

Many, many, there are many
Who no more are with me here,
As cherished, as beloved as any
Whom I have seen upon the bier.
I weep to think of those old faces,
To see them in their grief or mirth ;
I weep—for there are empty places
Around my heart's once crowded hearth ;
The cold ground doth not cover them,
The grass hath not grown over them,
Yet are they gone from me on earth ;—
O ! how more bitter is this weeping,
Than for those lost ones who are sleeping
Where sun will shine and flowers blow,

Where gentle winds will whisper low,
And the stars have them in their keeping !
Wherefore from me who loved you so,
O ! wherefore did ye go ?

I have shed full many a tear,
I have wrestled oft in prayer—
But ye do not come again ;
How could anything so dear,
How could anything so fair,
Vanish like the summer rain ?
No, no, it cannot be,
But ye are still with me !

And yet, O ! where art thou,
Childhood, with sunny brow
And floating hair ?
Where art thou hiding now ?
I have sought thee everywhere,
All among the shrubs and flowers
Of those garden-walks of ours—
Thou art not there !
When the shadow of Night's wings
Hath darkened all the Earth,
I listen for thy gambolings
Beside the cheerful hearth—
Thou art not there !
I listen to the far-off bell,
I murmur o'er the little songs
Which thou didst love so well,
Pleasant memories come in throngs
And mine eyes are blurred with tears,
But no glimpse of thee appears :

Lonely am I in the Winter, lonely in the Spring;
Summer and harvest bring no trace of thee—
Oh ! whither, whither art thou wandering,
Thou who didst once so cleave to me ?

And love is gone ;—
I have seen him come,
I have seen him, too, depart,
Leaving desolate his home,
His bright home in my heart.
I am alone !
Cold, cold is his hearth-stone,
Wide open stands the door ;
The frolic and the gentle one
Shall I see no more, no more ?
At the fount the bowl is broken,
I shall drink it not again,
All my longing prayers are spoken,
And felt, ah, woe is me, in vain !
Oh, childish hopes and childish fancies,
Whither have ye fled away ?
I long for you in mournful trances,
I long for you by night and day ;
Beautiful thoughts that once were mine,
Might I but win you back once more,
Might ye about my being twine
And cluster as ye did of yore !
O ! do not let me pray in vain—

How good and happy I should be,
How free from every shade of pain,
If ye would come again to me !
O, come again ! come, come again !

Hath the sun forgot its brightness,
Have the stars forgot to shine,
That they bring not their wonted lightness
To this weary heart of mine ?
'T is not the sun that shone on thee,
Happy childhood, long ago—
Not the same stars silently
Looking on the same bright snow—
Not the same that Love and I
Together watched in days gone by !
No, not the same, alas for me !

Would God that those who early went
To the house dark and low,
For whom our mourning heads were bent,
For whom our steps were slow ;
O, would that these alone had left us,
That Fate of these alone had reft us,
Would God indeed that it were so !
Many leaves too soon must wither,
Many flowers too soon must die,
Many bright ones wandering hither,
We know not whence, we know not why,
Like the leaves and like the flowers,
Vanish, ere the summer hours,
That brought them to us, have gone by.

O for the hopes and for the feelings,
Childhood, that I shared with thee—
The high resolves, the bright revealings
Of the soul's might, which thou gav'st me,
Gentle Love, woe worth the day,
Woe worth the hour when thou wert born,

Woe worth the day thou fled'st away—
A shade across the wind-waved corn—
A dewdrop falling from the leaves
Chance-shaken in a summer's morn !
Woe, woe is me ! my sick heart grieves,
Companionless and anguish-worn !
I know it well, our manly years
Must be baptized in bitter tears ;
Full many fountains must run dry
That youth has dreamed for long hours by,
Choked by convention's siroc blast
Or drifting sands of many cares ;
Slowly they leave us all at last,
And cease their flowing unawares.

THE BOBOLINK.

ANACREON of the meadow,
Drunk with the joy of spring !
Beneath the tall pine's voiceful shadow
I lie and drink thy jargoning ;
My soul is full with melodies,
One drop would overflow it,
And send the tears into mine eyes—
But what car'st thou to know it ?
Thy heart is free as mountain air,
And of thy lays thou hast no care,
Scattering them gayly everywhere,
Happy, unconscious poet !

Upon a tuft of meadow grass,
While thy loved-one tends the nest,

Thou swayest as the breezes pass,
Unburthening thine o'erfull breast
Of the crowded songs that fill it,
Just as joy may choose to will it.
Lord of thy love and liberty,
The blithest bird of merry May,
Thou turnest thy bright eyes on me,
That say as plain as eye can say—
“Here sit we, here in the summer weather,
I and my modest mate together ;
Whatever your wise thoughts may be,
Under that gloomy old pine tree,
We do not value them a feather.”

Now, leaving earth and me behind,
Thou beatest up against the wind,
Or, floating slowly down before it,
Above thy grass-hid nest thou flutterest
And thy bridal love-song utterest,
Raining showers of music o'er it,
Weary never, still thou thrillest,
Spring-glad some lays,
As of moss-rimmed water-brooks
Murmuring through pebbly nooks
In quiet summer days.
My heart with happiness thou fillest,
I seem again to be a boy
Watching thee, gay, blithesome lover,
O'er the bending grass-tops hover,
Quivering thy wings for joy.
There's something in the apple-blossom,
The greening grass and bobolink's song,
That wakes again within my bosom

Feelings which have slumbered long.
As long, long years ago I wandered,
I seem to wander even yet,
The hours the idle school-boy squandered,
The man would die ere he'd forget.
O hours that frosty eld deemed wasted,
Nodding his gray head toward my books,
I dearer prize the lore I tasted
With you, among the trees and brooks,
Than all that I have gained since then
From learnèd books or study-withered men !
Nature, thy soul was one with mine,
And, as a sister by a younger brother
Is loved, each flowing to the other,
Such love for me was thine.
Or wert thou not more like a loving mother
With sympathy and loving power to heal,
Against whose heart my throbbing heart I 'd lay
And moan my childish sorrows all away,
Till calm and holiness would o'er me steal ?
Was not the golden sunset a dear friend ?
Found I no kindness in the silent moon,
And the green trees, whose tops did sway and bend,
Low singing evermore their pleasant tune ?
Felt I no heart in dim and solemn woods—
No loved-one's voice in lonely solitudes ;
Yes, yes ! unhoodwinked then my spirit's eyes,
Blind leaders had not taught me to be wise.

Dear hours ! which now again I over-live,
Hearing and seeing with the ears and eyes
Of childhood, ye were bees, that to the hive
Of my young heart came laden with rich prize,

Gathered in fields and woods and sunny deils, to be
My spirit's food in days more wintery.
Yea, yet again ye come ! ye come !
And, like a child once more at home
After long sojourning in alien climes,
I lie upon my mother's breast,
Feeling the blessedness of rest,
And dwelling in the light of other times.

O ye whose living is not Life,
Whose dying is but death,
Song, empty toil and petty strife,
Rounded with loss of breath !
Go, look on Nature's countenance,
Drink in the blessing of her glance ;
Look on the sunset, hear the wind,
The cataract, the awful thunder ;
Go, worship by the sea ;
Then, and then only, shall ye find,
With ever-growing wonder,
Man is not all in all to ye ;
Go with a meek and humble soul,
Then shall the scales of self unroll
From off your eyes—the weary packs
Drop from your heavy-laden backs ;
And ye shall see,
With reverent and hopeful eyes,
Glowing with new-born energies,
How great a thing it is to BE !

FORGETFULNESS.

THERE 's a haven of sure rest
 From the loud world's bewildering stress :
 As a bird dreaming on her nest,
 As dew hid in a rose's breast,
 As Hesper in the glowing West ;
 So the heart sleeps
 In thy calm deeps,
 Serene Forgetfulness !

No sorrow in that place may be,
 The noise of life grows less and less :
 As moss far down within the sea,
 As, in white lily caves, a bee,
 As life in a hazy reverie ;
 So the heart's wave
 In thy dim cave,
 Hushes, Forgetfulness !

Duty and care fade far away
 What toil may be we cannot guess :
 As a ship anchored in the bay,
 As a cloud at summer-noon astray,
 As water-blooms in a breezeless day ;
 So, 'neath thine eyes,
 The full heart lies,
 And dreams, Forgetfulness !

SONG.

I.

WHAT reck I of the stars, when I
 May gaze into thine eyes,
 O'er which the brown hair flowingly
 Is parted maidenwise

From thy pale forehead, calm and bright,
Over thy cheeks so rosy white ?

II.

What care I for the red moon-rise ?
Far liefer would I sit
And watch the joy within thine eyes
Gush up at sight of it ;
Thyself my queenly moon shall be,
Ruling my heart's deep tides for me !

III.

What heed I if the sky be blue ?
So are thy holy eyes,
And bright with shadows ever new
Of changeful sympathies,
Which in thy soul's unruffled deep
Rest evermore, but never sleep.

THE POET.

HE who hath felt Life's mystery
Press on him like thick night,
Whose soul hath known no history
But struggling after light ;—
He who hath seen dim shapes arise
In the soundless depths of soul,
Which gaze on him with meaning eyes
Full of the mighty whole,
Yet will no word of healing speak,
Although he pray night-long,
“ O, help me, save me ! I am weak,
And ye are wondrous strong ! ”—

Who, in the midnight dark and deep,
Hath felt a voice of might Come echoing through the halls of sleep
From the lone heart of Night,
And, starting from his restless bed,
Hath watched and wept to know
What meant that oracle of dread
That stirred his being so ;
He who hath felt how strong and great
This Godlike soul of man,
And looked full in the eyes of Fate,
Since Life and Thought began ;
The armor of whose moveless trust
Knoweth no spot of weakness,
Who hath trod fear into the dust
Beneath the feet of meekness ;—
He who hath calmly borne his cross,
Knowing himself the king
Of time, nor counted it a loss
To learn by suffering ;—
And who hath worshipped woman still
With a pure soul and lowly,
Nor ever hath in deed or will Profaned her temple holy—
He is the Poet, him unto
The gift of song is given,
Whose life is lofty, strong, and true,
Who never fell from Heaven ;
He is the Poet, from his lips
To live forevermore,
Majestical as full-sailed ships,
The words of Wisdom pour.

FLOWERS.

“HAIL be thou, holie hearbe,
Growing on the ground,
All in the mount Calvary
First wert thou found ;
Thou art good for manie a sore,
Thou healest manie a wound,
In the name of sweete Jesus
I take thee from the ground.”

— Ancient Charm-verse.

I.

When, from a pleasant ramble, home
Fresh-stored with quiet thoughts, I come,
I pluck some wayside flower
And press it in the choicest nook
Of a much-loved and oft-read book ;
And, when upon its leaves I look
In a less happy hour,
Dear memory bears me far away
Unto her fairy bower,
And on her breast my head I lay,
While, in a motherly, sweet strain,
She sings me gently back again
To by-gone feelings, until they Seem children born of yesterday.

II.

Yes, many a story of past hours
I read in these dear withered flowers,
And once again I seem to be Lying beneath the old oak tree.

And looking up into the sky,
Through thick leaves rifted fitfully,
Lulled by the rustling of the vine,
Or the faint low of far-off kine ;
And once again I seem
To watch the whirling bubbles flee,
Through shade and gleam alternately,
Down the vine-bowered stream ;
Or 'neath the odorous linden trees,
When summer twilight lingers long,
To hear the flowing of the breeze
And unseen insects' slumberous song,
That mingle into one and seem
Like dim murmurs of a dream ;
Fair faces, too, I seem to see,
Smiling from pleasant eyes at me,
And voices sweet I hear,
That, like remembered melody,
Flow through my spirit's ear.

III.

A poem every flower is,
And every leaf a line,
And with delicious memories
They fill this heart of mine :
No living blossoms are so clear
As these dead relics treasured here ;
One tells of love, of friendship one,
Love's quiet after-sunset time,
When the all-dazzling light is gone,
And, with the soul's low vesper-chime,
O'er half its heaven doth out-flow

A holy calm and steady glow.
Some are gay feast-song, some are dirges,
In some a joy with sorrow merges ;
One sings the shadowed woods, and one the roar
Of ocean's everlasting surges,
Tumbling upon the beach's hard-beat floor,
Or sliding backward from the shore
To meet the landward waves and slowly plunge once more.
O flowers of grace, I bless ye all
By the dear faces ye recall !

IV.

Upon the banks of Life's deep streams
Full many a flower grows
Which with a wondrous fragrance teems,
And in the silent water gleams,
And trembles as the water floweth,
Many a one the wave upteareth,
Washing ever the roots away,
And far upon its bosom beareth,
To bloom no more in Youth's glad May ;
As farther on the river runs,
Flowing more deep and strong,
Only a few pale, scattered ones
Are seen the dreary banks along ;
And where those flowers do not grow,
The river floweth dark and chill,
Its voice is sad, and with its flow
Mingles ever a sense of ill ;
Then, Poet, thou who gather dost
Of Life's best flowers the brightest,

O, take good heed they be not lost
While with the angry flood thou fightest !

V.

In the cool grottos of the soul,
Whence flows thought's crystal river,
Whence songs of joy forever roll
To Him who is the Giver—
There store thou them, where fresh and green
Their leaves and blossoms may be seen,
A spring of joy that faileth never ;
There store thou them, and they shall be
A blessing and a peace to thee,
And in their youth and purity
Thou shalt be young forever !
Then, with their fragrance rich and rare,
Thy living shall be rife,
Strength shall be thine thy cross to bear,
And they shall be a chaplet fair,
Breathing a pure and holy air,
To crown thy holy life.

VI.

O Poet ! above all men blest,
Take heed that thus thou store them ;
Love, Hope, and Faith shall ever rest,
Sweet birds (upon how sweet a nest !)
Watchfully brooding o'er them.
And from those flowers of Paradise
Scatter thou many a blessèd seed,
Wherefrom an offspring may arise

To cheer the hearts and light the eyes
Of after-voyagers in their need.
They shall not fall on stony ground,
But, yielding all their hundred-fold,
Shall shed a peacefulness around,
Whose strengthening joy may not be told,
So shall thy name be blest of all,
And thy remembrance never die ;
For of that seed shall surely fall
In the fair garden of Eternity.
Exult then in the nobleness
Of this thy work so holy,
Yet be not thou one jot the less
Humble and meek and lowly,
But let thine exultation be
The reverence of a bended knee ;
And by thy life a poem write,
Built strongly day by day—
And on the rock of Truth and Right
Its deep foundations lay.

VII.

It is thy DUTY ! Guard it well !
For unto thee hath much been given,
And thou canst make this life a Hell,
Or Jacob's-ladder up to Heaven.
Let not thy baptism in Life's wave
Make thee like him whom Homer sings—
A sleeper in a living grave,
Callous and hard to outward things ;
But open all thy soul and sense
To every blessed influence
That from the heart of Nature springs :

Then shall thy Life-flowers be to thee,
When thy best years are told,
As much as these have been to me—
Yea, more, a thousand-fold !

THE LOVER.

I.

Go from the world from East to West,
Search every land beneath the sky,
You cannot find a man so blest,
A king so powerful as I,
Though you should seek eternally.

II.

For I a gentle lover be,
Sitting at my loved-one's side ;
She giveth her whole soul to me
Without a wish or thought of pride,
And she shall be my cherished bride.

III.

No show of gaudiness hath she,
She doth not flash with jewels rare ;
In beautiful simplicity.
She weareth leafy garlands fair,
Or modest flowers in her hair.

IV.

Sometimes she dons a robe of green,
Sometimes a robe of snowy white,

But, in whatever garb she 's seen,
It seems most beautiful and right,
And is the loveliest to my sight.

V.

Not I her lover am alone,
Yet unto all she doth suffice,
None jealous is, and every one
Reads love and truth within her eyes,
And deemeth her his own dear prize.

VI.

And so thou art, Eternal Nature !
Yes, bride of Heaven, so thou art ;
Thou wholly lovest every creature,
Giving to each no stinted part,
But filling every peaceful heart.

TO E. W. G.

“DEAR Child ! dear happy Girl ! if thou appear Heedless—untouched with awe or serious thought,
Thy nature is not therefore less divine :
Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year ;
And worship'st at the Temple's inner shrine,
God being with thee when we know it not.”

—Wordsworth.

As through a strip of sunny light
A white dove flashes swiftly on,
So suddenly before my sight
Thou gleamed'st a moment and wert gone ;
And yet I long shall bear in mind
The pleasant thoughts thou left'st behind.

Thou mad'st me happy with thine eyes,
And happy with thine open smile,
And, as I write, sweet memories
Come thronging round me all the while ;
Thou mad'st me happy with thine eyes—
And gentle feelings long forgot
Looked up and oped their eyes,
Like violets when they see a spot
Of summer in the skies.

Around thy playful lips did glitter
Heat-lightnings of a girlish scorn ;
Harmless they were, for nothing bitter
In thy dear heart was ever born—
That merry heart that could not lie
Within its warm nest quietly,
But ever from each full, dark eye
Was looking kindly night and morn.

There was an archness in thine eyes,
Born of the gentlest mockeries,
And thy light laughter rang as clear
As water-drops I loved to hear
In days of boyhood, as they fell
Tinkling far down the dim, still well ;
And with its sound come back once more
The feelings of my early years,
And half aloud I murmured o'er—
“ Sure I have heard that sound before,
It is so pleasant in mine ears.”

Whenever thou didst look on me
I thought of merry birds,
And something of spring's melody

Came to me in thy words ;
Thy thoughts did dance and bound along
Like happy children in their play,
Whose hearts run over into song
For gladness of the summer's day ;
And mine grew dizzy with the sight,
Still feeling lighter and more light,
Till, joining hands, they whirled away,
As blithe and merrily as they.

I bound a larch-twigg round with flowers,
Which thou didst twine among thy hair,
And gladsome were the few, short hours
When I was with thee there ;
So now that thou art far away,
Safe-nestled in thy warmer clime,
In memory of a happier day
I twine this simple wreath of rhyme.

Dost mind how she, whom thou dost love
More than in light words may be said.
A coronal of amaranth wove
About thy duly-sobered head,
Which kept itself a moment still
That she might have her gentle will ?
Thy childlike grace and purity
O keep forevermore,
And as thou art, still strive to be,
That on the farther shore
Of time's dark waters ye may meet,
And she may twine around thy brow
A wreath of those bright flowers that grow
Where blessèd angels set their feet !

ISABEL.

As THE leaf upon the tree,
Fluttering, gleaming constantly,
Such a lightsome thing was she,
My gray and gentle Isabel !
Her heart was fed with love-springs sweet,
And in her face you 'd see it beat
To hear the sound of welcome feet—
And were not mine so, Isabel !

She knew it not, but she was fair,
And like a moonbeam was her hair,
That falls where flowing ripples are
In summer evenings, Isabel !
Her heart and tongue were scarce apart,
Unwittingly her lips would part,
And love came gushing from her heart,
The woman's heart of Isabel.

So pure her flesh-garb, and like dew,
That in her features glimmered through
Each working of her spirit true,
In wondrous beauty, Isabel !
A sunbeam struggling through thick leaves,
A reaper's song 'mid yellow sheaves,
Less gladsome were ;—my spirit grieves
To think of thee, mild Isabel !

I know not when I loved thee first ;
Not loving, I had been accurst,
Yet, having loved, my heart will burst,
Longing for thee, dear Isabel !

With silent tears my cheeks are wet,
I would be calm, I would forget,
But thy blue eyes gaze on me yet,
When stars have risen, Isabel.

The winds mourn for thee, Isabel,
The flowers expect thee in the dell,
Thy gentle spirit loved them well,
And I for thy sake, Isabel !
The sunsets seem less lovely now
Than when, leaf checkered, on thy brow
They fell as lovingly as thou
Lingered'st till moon-rise, Isabel !

At dead of night I seem to see
Thy fair, pale features constantly
Upturned in silent prayer for me,
O'er moveless clasped hands, Isabel !
I call thee, thou dost not reply ;
The stars gleam coldly on thine eye,
As like a dream thou flittest by,
And leav'st me weeping, Isabel !

MUSIC.

I.

I SEEM to lie with drooping eyes,
Dreaming sweet dreams,
Half longings and half memories,
In woods where streams
With trembling shades and whirling gleams,
Many and bright,
In song and light,

Are ever, ever flowing ;
While the wind, if we list to the rustling grass,
Which numbers his footsteps as they pass,
Seems scarcely to be blowing ;
And the far-heard voice of Spring,
From sunny slopes comes wandering,
Calling the violets from the sleep,
That bound them under the snow-drifts deep,
To open their childlike, asking eyes
On the new summer's paradise,
And mingled with the gurgling waters—
As the dreamy witchery
Of Acheloüs' silver-voiced daughters
Rose and fell with the heaving sea,
Whose great heart swelled with ecstasy—
The song of many a floating bird,
Winding through the rifted trees,
Is dreamily half-heard—
A sister stream of melodies
Rippled by the flutterings
Of rapture-quivered wings.

II.

And now beside a cataract
I lie, and through my soul,
From over me and under,
The never-ceasing thunder
Arousingly doth roll ;
Through the darkness all compact,
Through the trackless sea of gloom,
Sad and deep I hear it boom ;
At intervals the cloud is cracked

And a livid flash doth hiss
Downward from its floating home,
Lighting up the precipice
And the never-resting foam
With a dim and ghastly glare,
Which, for a heart-beat, in the air,
Shows the sweeping shrouds
Of the midnight clouds
And their wildly-scattered hair.

III.

Now listening to a woman's tone,
In a wood I sit alone—
Alone because our souls are one ;—
All around my heart it flows,
Lulling me in deep repose ;
I fear to speak, I fear to move,
Lest I should break the spell I love—
Low and gentle, calm and clear,
Into my inmost soul it goes,
As if my brother dear,
Who is no longer here,
Had bended from the sky
And murmured in my ear
A strain of that high harmony,
Which they may sing alone
Who worship round the throne.

IV.

Now in a fairy boat,
On the bright waves of song,
Full merrily I float,
Merrily float along ;

My helm is veered, I care not how,
 My white sail bellies over me,
 And bright as gold the ripples be
 That plash beneath the bow ;
 Before, behind,
 They feel the wind,
 And they are dancing joyously—
 While, faintly heard, along the far-off shore
 The surf goes plunging with a lingering roar ;
 Or anchored in a shadowy cove-
 Entranced with harmonies,
 Slowly I sink and rise
 As the slow waves of music move

V.

Now softly dashing,
 Bubbling, plashing,
 Mazy, dreamy,
 Faint and streamy,
 Ripples into ripples melt,
 Not so strongly heard as felt ;
 Now rapid and quick,
 While the heart beats thick,
 The music's silver wavelets crowd,
 Distinct and clear, but never loud ;
 And now all solemnly and slow,
 In mild, deep tones they warble low,
 Like the glad song of angels, when
 They sang good will and peace to men
 Now faintly heard and far,
 As if the spirit's ears
 Had caught the anthem of a star

Chanting with his brother-spheres
In the midnight dark and deep,
When the body is asleep
And wondrous shadows pour in streams
From the twofold gate of dreams ;
Now onward roll the billows, swelling
With a tempest-sound of might,
As of voices doom foretelling
 To the silent ear of Night ;
And now a mingled ecstasy
 Of all sweet sounds it is ;—
 O ! who may tell the agony
 Of rapture such as this ?

VI.

I have drunk of the drink of immortals,
 I have drunk of the life-giving wine,
And now I may pass the bright portals
 That open into a realm divine !
I have drunk it through mine ears
 In the ecstasy of song,
When mine eyes would fill with tears
 That its life were not more long ;
I have drunk it through mine eyes
 In beauty's every shape,
And now around my soul it lies,
 No juice of earthly grape !
Wings ! wings are given to me,
 I can flutter, I can rise,
Like a new life gushing through me
 Sweep the heavenly harmonies !

SONG.

O ! I MUST look on that sweet face once more before I die ;
God grant that it may lighten up with joy when I draw nigh ;
God grant that she may look on me as kindly as she seems
In the long night, the restless night, i' the sunny land of dreams !

I hoped, I thought, she loved me once, and yet, I know not why,
There is a coldness in her speech, and a coldness in her eye.
Something that in another's look would not seem cold to me,
And yet like ice I feel it chill the heart of memory.

She does not come to greet me so frankly as she did,
And in her utmost openness I feel there's something hid ;
She almost seems to shun me, as if she thought that I Might win her gentle heart again to feelings long gone by.

I sought the first spring-buds for her, the fairest and the best,
And she wore them for their loveliness upon her spotless breast,
The blood-root and the violet, the frail anemone.
She wore them, and alas ! I deemed it was for love of me !

As flowers in a darksome place stretch forward to the light,
So to the memory of her I turn by day and night ;
As flowers in a darksome place grow thin and pale and wan,
So is it with my darkened heart, now that her light is gone.

The thousand little things that love doth treasure up for aye,
And brood upon with moistened eyes when she that 's loved 's away,
The word, the look, the smile, the blush, the ribbon that she wore,
Each day they grow more dear to me, and pain me more and more.

My face I cover with my hands, and bitterly I weep,
That the quick-gathering sands of life should choke a love so deep,
And that the stream, so pure and bright, must turn it from its track,
Or to the heart-springs, whence it rose, roll its full waters back !

As calm as doth the lily float close by the lakelet's brim,
So calm and spotless, down time's stream, her peaceful days did swim,
And I had longed, and dreamed, and prayed, that closely by her side,
Down to a haven still and sure, my happy life might glide.

But now, alas ! those golden days of youth and hope are o'er,
And I must dream those dreams of joy, those guiltless dreams no more ;
Yet there is something in my heart that whispers ceaselessly,
“ Would God that I might see that face once more before I die ! ”

IANTHE.

I.

THERE is a light within her eyes,
Like gleams of wandering fire-flies ;
From light to shade it leaps and moves
Whenever in her soul arise
The holy shapes of things she loves ;
Fitful it shines and changes ever,
Like star-lit ripples on a river,
Or summer sunshine on the eaves
Of silver-trembling poplar leaves,
Where the lingering dew-drops quiver.
I may not tell the blessedness
Her mild eyes send to mine,
The sunset-tinted haziness
Of their mysterious shine,
The dim and holy mournfulness
Of their mellow light divine ;
The shadow of the lashes lie
Over them so lovingly,
That they seem to melt away
In a doubtful twilight-gray,

While I watch the stars arise
 In the evening of her eyes.
 I love it, yet I almost dread
 To think what it foreshadoweth ;
 And, when I muse how I have read
 That such strange light betokened death—
 Instead of fire-fly gleams, I see
 Wild corpse-lights gliding waveringly.

II.

With wayward thoughts her eyes are bright,
 Like shiftings of the northern-light,
 Hither, thither, swiftly glance they,
 In a mazy twining dance they,
 Like ripply lights the sunshine weaves,
 Thrown backward from a shaken nook,
 Below some tumbling water-brook,
 On the o'erarching platan-leaves,
 All through her glowing face they flit,
 And rest in their deep dwelling-place,
 Those fathomless blue eyes of hers,
 Till, from her burning soul re-lit,
 While her upheaving bosom stirs,
 They stream again across her face
 And with such hope and glory fill it,
 Death could not have the heart to chill it.
 Yet when their wild light fades again,
 I feel a sudden sense of pain,
 As if, while yet her eyes were gleaming,
 And like a shower of sun-lit rain
 Bright fancies from her face were streaming,
 Her trembling soul might flit away
 As swift and suddenly as they.

III.

A wild, inspirèd earnestness
Her inmost being fills,
And eager self-forgetfulness,
That speaks not what it wills,
But what unto her soul is given,
A living oracle from Heaven,
Which scarcely in her breast is born
When on her trembling lips it thrills,
And, like a burst of golden skies
Through storm-clouds on a sudden torn,
Like a glory of the morn,
Beams marvellously from her eyes.
And then, like a Spring-swollen river,
Roll the deep waves of her full-hearted thought
Crested with sun-lit spray,
Her wild lips curve and quiver,
And my rapt soul, on the strong tide upcaught,
Unwittingly is borne away,
Lulled by a dreamful music ever,
Far—through the solemn twilight-gray
Of hoary woods—through valleys green
Which the trailing vine embowers,
And where the purple-clustered grapes are seen
Deep-glowing through rich clumps of waving flowers—
Now over foaming rapids swept
And with maddening rapture shook—
Now gliding where the water-plants have slept
For ages in a moss-rimmed nook—
Enwoven by a wild-eyed band
Of earth-forgetting dreams,
I float to a delicious land

By a sunset heaven spanned,
 And musical with streams ;—
 Around, the calm, majestic forms
 And god-like eyes of early Greece I see,
 Or listen, till my spirit warms,
 To songs of courtly chivalry,
 Or weep, unmindful if my tears be seen,
 For the meek, suffering love of poor Undine.

IV.

Her thoughts are never memories,
 But ever changeful, ever new,
 Fresh and beautiful as dew
 That in a dell at noontide lies,
 Or, at the close of summer day,
 The pleasant breath of new-mown hay :
 Swiftly they come and pass
 As golden birds across the sun,
 As light-gleams on tall meadow-grass
 Which the wind just breathes upon.
 And when she speaks, her eyes I see
 Down-gushing through their silken lattices,
 Like stars that quiver tremblingly
 Through leafy branches of the trees,
 And her pale cheeks do flush and glow
 With speaking flashes bright and rare
 As crimson North-lights on new-fallen snow,
 From out the veiling of her hair—
 Her careless hair that scatters down
 On either side her eyes,
 A waterfall leaf-tinged with brown
 And lit with the sunrise.

V.

When first I saw her, not of earth,
But heavenly both in grief and mirth,
I thought her ; she did seem
As fair and full of mystery,
As bodiless, as forms we see
In the rememberings of a dream ;
A moon-lit mist, a strange, dim light,
Circled her spirit from my sight ;—
Each day more beautiful she grew,
More earthly every day,
Yet that mysterious, moony hue
Faded not all away ;
She has a sister's sympathy
With all the wanderers of the sky,
But most I 've seen her bosom stir
When moonlight round her fell,
For the mild moon it loveth her,
She loveth it as well,
And of their love perchance this grace
Was born into her wondrous face.
I cannot tell how it may be,
For both, methinks, can scarce be true,
Still, as she earthly grew to me,
She grew more heavenly too ;
She seems one born in Heaven
With earthly feelings,
For, while unto her soul are given
More pure revealings
Of holiest love and truth,
Yet is the mildness of her eyes
Made up of quickest sympathies,
Of kindliness and ruth ;

So, though some shade of awe doth stir
 Our souls for one so far above us,
 We feel secure that she will love us,
 And cannot keep from loving her.
 She is a poem, which to me
 In speech and look is written bright,
 And to her life's rich harmony
 Doth ever sing itself aright ;
 Dear, glorious creature !
 With eyes so dewy bright,
 And tenderest feeling
 Itself revealing
 In every look and feature,
 Welcome as a homestead light
 To one long-wandering in a clouded night ;
 O, lovelier for her woman's weakness,
 Which yet is strongly mailed
 In armor of courageous meekness
 And faith that never failed !

VI.

Early and late, at her soul's gate,
 Sits Chastity in warderwise,
 No thoughts unchallenged, small or great,
 Go thence into her eyes ;
 Nor may a low, unworthy thought
 Beyond that virgin warder win,
 Nor one, whose password is not "ought,"
 May go without or enter in.
 I call her, seeing those pure eyes,
 The Eve of a new Paradise,
 Which she by gentle word and deed,
 And look no less, doth still create

About her, for her great thoughts breed
A calm that lifts us from our fallen state,
And makes us while with her both good and great—
Nor is their memory wanting in our need :
With stronger loving, every hour,
Turneth my heart to this frail flower,
Which, thoughtless of the world, hath grown
To beauty and meek gentleness,
Here in a fair world of its own—
By woman's instinct trained alone—
A lily fair which God did bless,
And which from Nature's heart did draw
Love, wisdom, peace, and Heaven's perfect law.

LOVE'S ALTAR.

I.

I BUILT an altar in my soul,
I builded it to one alone ;
And ever silently I stole,
In happy days of long-agone,
To make rich offerings to that ONE.

II.

'T was garlanded with purest thought,
And crowned with fancy's flowers bright,
With choicest gems 't was all inwrought
Of truth and feeling ; in my sight
It seemed a spot of cloudless light.

III.

Yet when I made my offering there,
Like Cain's, the incense would not rise ;

Back on my heart down-sank the prayer,
And altar-stone and sacrifice
Grew hateful in my tear-dimmed eyes.

IV.

O'er-grown with age's mosses green,
The little altar firmly stands ;
It is not, as it once hath been,
A selfish shrine ;—these time-taught hands
Bring incense now from many lands.

V.

Knowledge doth only widen love ;
The stream, that lone and narrow rose,
Doth, deepening ever, onward move,
And with an even current flows
Calmer and calmer to the close.

VI.

The love, that in those early days
Girt round my spirit like a wall,
Hath faded like a morning haze,
And flames, unpent by self's mean thrall,
Rise clearly to the perfect ALL.

MY LOVE.

I.

Not as all other women are
Is she that to my soul is dear ;
Her glorious fancies come from far
Beneath the silver evening-star,
And yet her heart is ever near.

II.

Great feelings hath she of her own
Which lesser souls may never know ;
God giveth them to her alone,
And sweet they are as any tone
Wherewith the wind may choose to blow.

III.

Yet in herself she dwelleth not,
Although no home were half so fair,
No simplest duty is forgot,
Life hath no dim and lowly spot
That doth not in her sunshine share.

IV.

She doeth little kindnesses,
Which most leave undone, or despise,
For naught that sets one heart at ease,
And giveth happiness or peace,
Is low-esteemèd in her eyes.

V.

She hath no scorn of common things,
And, though she seem of other birth,
Round us her heart entwines and clings,
And patiently she folds her wings
To tread the humble paths of earth.

VI.

Blessing she is : God made her so,
And deeds of week-day holiness
Fall from her noiseless as the snow,
Nor hath she ever chanced to know
That aught were easier than to bless.

VII.

She is most fair, and thereunto
Her life doth rightly harmonize ;
Feeling or thought that was not true
Ne'er made less beautiful the blue
Unclouded heaven-of her eyes.

VIII.

On Nature she doth muse and brood
With such a still and love-clear eye—
She is so gentle and so good—
The very flowers in the wood
Do bless her with their sympathy.

IX.

She is a woman : one in whom
The spring-time of her childish years
Hath never lost its fresh perfume,
Though knowing well that life hath room
For many blights and many tears.

X.

And youth in her a home will find,
Where he may dwell eternally ;
Her soul is not of that weak kind
Which better love the life behind
Than that which is, or is to be.

XI.

I love her with a love as still
As a broad river's peaceful might,
Which, by high tower and lowly mill,
Goes wandering at its own will,
And yet doth ever flow aright.

XII.

And, on its full, deep breast serene,
Like quiet isles my duties lie ;
It flows around them and between,
And makes them fresh and fair and green,
Sweet homes wherein to live and die.

WITH A PRESSED FLOWER.

THIS little flower from afar
Hath come from other lands to thine ;
For, once, its white and drooping star
Could see its shadow in the Rhine.

Perchance some fair-haired German maid
Hath plucked one from the self-same stalk,
And numbered over, half afraid,
Its petals in her evening walk.

“ He loves me, loves me not,” she cries ;
“ He loves me more than earth or Heaven,”
And then glad tears have filled her eyes
To find the number was uneven.

So, Love, my heart doth wander forth
To farthest lands beyond the sea,
And search the fairest spots of earth
To find sweet flowers of thought for thee.

A type this tiny blossom is
Of what my heart doth every day,
Seeking for pleasant fantasies
To brood upon when thou 'rt away.

And thou must count its petals well,
Because it is a gift from me ;
And the last one of all shall tell
Something I' ve often told to thee.

But here at home, where we were born,
Thou wilt find flowers just as true,
Down bending every summer morn
With freshness of New England dew.

For Nature, ever right in love,
Hath given them the same sweet tongue,
Whether with German skies above,
Or here our granite rocks among.

IMPARTIALITY.

I.

I CANNOT say a scene is fair
Because it is beloved of thee,
But I shall love to linger there,
For sake of thy dear memory ;
I would not be so coldly just
As to love only what I must.

II.

I cannot say a thought is good
Because thou foundest joy in it ;
Each soul must choose its proper food
Which Nature hath decreed most fit ;
But I shall ever deem it so
Because it made thy heart o'erflow.

III.

I love thee for that thou art fair ;
And that thy spirit joys in aught
Createth a new beauty there,
With thine own dearest image fraught ;
And love, for others' sake that springs,
Gives half their charm to lovely things.

BELLEROPHON.

DEDICATED TO MY FRIEND, JOHN F. HEATH.

I.

I FEEL the bandages unroll
That bound my inward seeing ;
Freed are the bright wings of my soul,
Types of my god-like being ;
High thoughts are swelling in my heart
And rushing through my brain ;
May I never more lose part
In my soul's realm again !
All things fair, where'er they be,
In earth or air, in sky or sea,
I have loved them all, and taken
All within my throbbing breast ;
No more my spirit can be shaken
From its calm and kingly rest !
Love hath shed its light around me,
Love hath pierced the shades that bound me ;
Mine eyes are opened, I can see
The universe's mystery,
The mighty heart and core
Of After and Before
I see, and I am weak no more !

II.

Upward ! upward evermore,
To Heaven's open gate I soar !
Little thoughts are far behind me,
Which, when custom weaves together,
All the nobler man can tether—
Cobwebs now no more can bind me !
Now fold thy wings a little while,
My trancèd soul, and lie
At rest on this Calypso-isle
That floats in mellow sky,
A thousand isles with gentle motion
Rock upon the sunset ocean ;
A thousand isles of thousand hues,
How bright ! how beautiful ! how rare !
Into my spirit they infuse
A purer, a diviner air ;
The earth is growing dimmer,
And now the last faint glimmer
Hath faded from the hill ;
But in my higher atmosphere
The sun-light streameth red and clear,
Fringing the islets still ;—
Love lifts us to the sun-light,
Though the whole world would be dark ;
Love, wide Love, is the one light,
All else is but a fading spark ;
Love is the nectar which doth fill
Our soul's cup even to overflowing,
And, warming heart, and thought, and will,
Doth lie within us mildly glowing,
From its own centre raying out
Beauty and Truth on all without.

III.

Each on his golden throne,
Full royally, alone,
I see the stars above me,
With sceptre and with diadem ;
Mildly they look down and love me,
For I have ever yet loved them ;
I see their ever-sleepless eyes
Watching the growth of destinies ;
Calm, sedate,
The eyes of Fate,
They wink not, nor do roll,
But search the depths of soul—
And in those mighty depths they see
The germs of all Futurity,
Waiting but the fitting time
To burst and ripen into prime,
As in the womb of mother Earth
The seeds of plants and forests lie
Age upon age and never die—
So in the souls of all men wait,
Undyingly the seeds of Fate ;
Chance breaks the clod and forth they spring,
Filling blind men with wondering.
Eternal stars ! with holy awe,
As if a present God I saw,
I look into those mighty eyes
And see great destinies arise,
As in those of mortal men
Feelings glow and fade again !
All things below, all things above,
Are open to the eyes of Love.

IV.

Of Knowledge Love is master-key,
Knowledge of Beauty ; passing dear
Is each to each, and mutually
Each one doth make the other clear ;
Beauty is Love, and what we love
Straightway is beautiful,
So is the circle round and full,
And so dear Love doth live and move
And have his being,
Finding his proper food
By sure inseeing,
In all things pure and good,
Which he at will doth cull,
Like a joyous butterfly
Hiving in the sunny bowers
Of the soul's fairest flowers,
Or, between the earth and sky,
Wandering at liberty
For happy, happy hours !

V.

The thoughts of Love are Poesy,
As this fair earth and all we see
Are the thoughts of Deity—
And Love is ours by our birthright !
He hath cleared mine inward sight ;
Glorious shapes with glorious eyes
Round about my spirit glance.
Shedding a mild and golden light
On the shadowy face of Night ;
To unearthly melodies,
Hand in hand, they weave their dance,

While a deep, ambrosial lustre
From their rounded limbs doth shine,
Through many a rich and golden cluster
Of streaming hair divine.
In our gross and earthly hours
We cannot see the Love-given powers
Which ever round the soul await
To do its sovereign will,
When, in its moments calm and still,
It re-assumes its royal state,
Nor longer sits with eyes downcast,
A beggar, dreaming of the past,
At its own palace-gate.

VI.

I too am a Maker and a Poet ;
Through my whole soul I feel it and know it ;
My veins are fired with ecstasy !
All-mother Earth
Did ne'er give birth
To one who shall be matched with me ;
The lustre of my coronal
Shall cast a dimness over all.—
Alas ! alas ! what have I spoken ?
My strong, my eagle wings are broken,
And back again to earth I fall !

SOMETHING NATURAL.

I.

WHEN first I saw thy soul-deep eyes,
My heart yearned to thee instantly,
Strange longing in my soul did rise ;

I cannot tell the reason why,
But I must love thee till I die.

II.

The sight of thee hath well-nigh grown
As needful to me as the light ;
I am unrestful when alone,
And my heart doth not beat aright
Except it dwell within thy sight.

III.

And yet—and yet—O selfish love !
I am not happy even with thee ;
I see thee in thy brightness move,
And cannot well contented be,
Save thou should'st shine alone for me.

IV.

We should love beauty even as flowers
For all, 't is said, they bud and blow,
They are the world's as well as ours—
But thou—alas ! God made thee grow
So fair, I cannot love thee so !

THE SIRENS.

THE sea is lonely, the sea is dreary,
The sea is restless and uneasy ;
Thou seekest quiet, thou art weary,
Wandering thou knowest not whither ;—
Our little isle is green and breezy,
Come and rest thee ! O come hither,

Come to this peaceful home of ours,
Where evermore
The low west-wind creeps panting up the shore
To be at rest among the flowers ;
Full of rest, the green moss lifts,
As the dark waves of the sea
Draw in and out of rocky rifts,
Calling solemnly to thee,
With voices deep and hollow—
To the shore
Follow ! O follow !
To be at rest for evermore !
For evermore !

Look how the gray, old Ocean
From the depths of his heart rejoices,
Heaving with a gentle motion,
When he hears our restful voices ;
List how he sings in an undertone,
Chiming with our melody ;
And all sweet sounds of earth and air
Melt into one low voice alone,
That murmurs over the weary sea—
And seems to sing from everywhere—
“ Here mayest thou harbor peacefully,
Here mayest thou rest from the aching oar ;
Turn thy curvèd prow ashore,
And in our green isle rest for evermore !
For evermore !
And echo half wakes in the wooded hill,
And, to her heart so calm and deep,
Murmurs over in her sleep,
Doubtfully pausing and murmuring still,

“Evermore !”

Thus, on Life's weary sea,
Heareth the marinere
Voices sweet, from far and near,
Ever singing low and clear,
Ever singing longingly.

Is it not better here to be,
Than to be toiling late and soon ?
In the dreary night to see
Nothing but the blood-red moon
Go up and down into the sea ;
Or, in the loneliness of day,
To see the still seals only,
Solemnly lift their faces gray,
Making it yet more lonely ?
Is it not better, than to hear
Only the sliding of the wave
Beneath the plank, and feel so near
A cold and lonely grave,
A restless grave, where thou shalt lie
Even in death unquietly ?
Look down beneath thy wave-worn bark,
Lean over the side and see
The leaden eye of the side-long shark
Upturnèd patiently,
Ever waiting there for thee :
Look down and see those shapeless forms,
Which ever keep their dreamless sleep
Far down within the gloomy deep.
And only stir themselves in storms,
Rising like islands from beneath,
And snorting through the angry spray,

As the frail vessel perisheth
In the whirls of their unwieldy play ;
 Look down ! Look down !
Upon the seaweed, slimy and dark,
That waves its arms so lank and brown,
 Beckoning for thee !
Look down beneath thy wave-worn bark
 Into the cold depth of the sea !
 Look down ! Look down !
 Thus, on Life's lonely sea,
 Heareth the marinere
 Voices sad, from far and near,
 Ever singing full of fear,
 Ever singing drearfully,

 Here all is pleasant as a dream ;
The wind scarce shaketh down the dew,
The green grass floweth like a stream
 Into the ocean's blue :
 Listen ! O listen !

Here is a gush of many streams.
 A song of many birds,
And every wish and longing seems
Lulled to a numbered flow of words—
 Listen ! O listen !

Here ever hum the golden bees
Underneath full-blossomed trees,
At once with glowing fruit and flower crowned ;—
The sand is so smooth, the yellow sand,
That thy keel will not grate, as it touches the land ;
All around, with a slumberous sound,
The singing waves slide up the strand,
And there, where the smooth wet pebbles be,

The waters gurgled longingly,
 As if they fain would seek the shore,
 To be at rest from the ceaseless roar,
 To be at rest for evermore—

For evermore.

Thus, on Life's gloomy sea,
 Heareth the marinere
 Voices sweet, far and near,
 Ever singing in his ear,
 Here is rest and peace for thee!"

NANTASKET, July, 1840.

A FEELING.

THE flowers and the grass to me
 Are eloquent reproachfully ;
 For would they wave so pleasantly
 Or look so fresh and fair,
 If a man, cunning, hollow, mean,
 Or one is anywise unclean,
 Were looking on them there ?

No ; he hath grown so foolish-wise
 He cannot see with childhood's eyes ;
 He hath forgot that purity
 And lowliness which are the key
 Of Nature's mysteries ;
 No ; he hath wandered off so long
 From his own place of birth,
 That he hath lost his mother-tongue,
 And, like one come from far-off lands,
 Forgetting and forgot, he stands
 Beside his mother's hearth.

THE BEGGAR.

A BEGGAR through the world am I,
From place to place I wander by ;—
Fill up my pilgrim's scrip for me,
For Christ's sweet sake and charity !

A little of thy steadfastness,
Rounded with leafy gracefulness,
Old oak, give me—
That the world's blasts may round me blow,
And I yield gently to and fro,
While my stout-hearted trunk below
And firm-set roots unmoved be.

Some of thy stern, unyielding might,
Enduring still through day and night
Rude tempest-shock and withering blight—
That I may keep at bay
The changeful April sky of chance
And the strong tide of circumstance—
Give me, old granite gray.

Some of thy mournfulness serene,
Some of thy never-dying green,
Put in this scrip of mine—
That grief may fall like snowflakes light,
And deck me in a robe of white,
Ready to be an angel bright—
O sweetly-mournful pine.

A little of thy merriment,
Of thy sparkling, light content,
Give me my cheerful brook—

That I may still be full of glee
And gladness, where'er I be,
Though fickle fate hath prisoned me
In some neglected nook.

Ye have been very kind and good
To me, since I've been in the wood ;
Ye have gone nigh to fill my heart ;
But good-by, kind friends, every one,
I've far to go ere set of sun ;
Of all good things I would have part,
The day was high ere I could start,
And so my journey 's scarce begun.

Heaven help me ! how could I forget
To beg of thee, dear violet !
Some of thy modesty,
That flowers here as well, unseen,
As if before the world thou'dst been,
O give, to strengthen me.

SERENADE.

FROM the close-shut windows gleams no spark
The night is chilly, the night is dark,
The poplars shiver, the pine-trees moan,
My hair by the autumn breeze is blown,
Under thy window I sing alone,
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

The darkness is pressing coldly around,
The windows shake with a lonely sound,
The stars are hid and the night is drear,
The heart of silence throbs in thine ear,

In thy chamber thou sittest alone,
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

The world is happy, the world is wide,
Kind hearts are beating on every side ;
Ah, why should we lie so curled
Alone in the shell of this great world ?
Why should we any more be alone ?
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

O ! 't is a bitter and dreary word,
The saddest by man's ear ever heard ;
We each are young, we each have a heart,
Why stand we ever coldly apart ?
Must we forever, then, be alone ?
Alone, alone, ah woe ! alone !

IRENE.

HERS is a spirit deep and crystal-clear ;
Calmly beneath her earnest face it lies,
Free without boldness, meek without a fear,
Quicker to look than speak its sympathies ;
Far down into her large and patient eyes
I gaze, deep-drinking of the infinite,
As, in the mid-watch of a clear, still night,
I look into the fathomless blue skies.

So circled lives she with Love's holy light,
That from the shade of self she walketh free ;
The garden of her soul still keepeth she
An Eden where the snake did never enter ;
She hath a natural, wise sincerity,

A simple truthfulness, and these have lent her
A dignity as moveless as the centre ;
So that no influence of earth can stir
Her steadfast courage, or can take away
The holy peacefulness, which, night and day,
Unto her queenly soul doth minister.

Most gentle is she ; her large charity
(An all unwitting, childlike gift in her)
Not freer is to give than meek to bear ;
And, though herself not unacquaint with care,
Hath in her heart wide room for all that be—
Her heart that hath no secrets of its own,
But open is as eglantine full-blown,
Cloudless forever is her brow serene,
Speaking calm hope and trust within her, whence Welleth a noiseless spring of patience
That keepeth all her life so fresh, so green
And full of holiness, that every look,
The greatness of her woman's soul revealing,
Unto me bringeth blessing, and a feeling
As when I read in God's own holy book.

A graciousness in giving that doth make
The small'st gift greatest, and a sense most meek
Of worthiness, that doth not fear to take
From others, but which always fears to speak
Its thanks in utterance, for the giver's sake ;—
The deep religion of a thankful heart,
Which rests instinctively with Heaven's law
With a full peace, that never can depart
From its own steadfastness ;—a holy awe
For holy things, not those which men call holy,

But such are as revealèd to the eyes
Of a true woman's soul bent down and lowly
Before the face of daily mysteries ;—
A love that blossoms soon, but ripens slowly
To the full goldenness of fruitful prime,
Enduring with a firmness that defies
All shallow tricks of circumstance and time,
By a sure insight knowing where to cling,
And where it clingeth never withering—
These are Irene's dowry—which no fate
Can shake from their serene, deep-built state.

In-seeing sympathy is hers, which chasteneth
No less than loveth, scorning to be bound
With fear of blame, and yet which ever hasteneth
To pour the balm of kind looks on the wound,
If they be wounds which such sweet teaching makes,
Giving itself a pang for others' sakes ;
No want of faith, that chills with side-long eye,
Hath she ; no jealousy, no Levite pride
That passeth by upon the other side ;
For in her soul there never dwelt a lie,
Right from the hand of God her spirit came Unstained, and she hath ne'er forgotten whence
It came, nor wandered far from thence,
But laboreth to keep her still the same,
Near to her place of birth, that she may not
Soil her white raiment with an earthly spot.

Yet sets she not her soul so steadily
Above, that she forgets her ties to earth,
But her whole thought would almost seem to be
How to make glad one lowly human hearth ;

For with a gentle courage she doth strive
In thought and word and feeling so to live
As to make earth next Heaven ; and her heart
Herein doth show its most exceeding worth,
That, bearing in our frailty her just part,
She hath not shrunk from evils of this life,
But hath gone calmly forth into the strife,
And all its sins and sorrows hath withstood
With lofty strength of patient womanhood :
For this I love her great soul more than all,
That, being bound, like us, with earthly thrall,
She walks so bright and Heaven-wise therein—
Too wise, too meek, too womanly to sin.

Exceeding pleasant to mine eyes is she ;
Like a lone star through riven storm-clouds seen
By sailors, tempest-tost upon the sea,
Telling of rest and peaceful heavens nigh,
Unto my soul her star-like soul hath been,
Her sight as full of hope and calm to me ;—
For she unto herself hath builded high
A home serene, wherein to lay her head,
Earth's noblest thing—a Woman perfected.

THE LOST CHILD.

I.

I WANDERED down the sunny glade
And ever mused, my love, of thee ;
My thoughts, like little children, played,
As gayly and as guilelessly.

II.

If any chanced to go astray,
 Moaning in fear of coming harms,
Hope brought the wanderer back alway,
 Safe nestled in her snowy arms.

III.

From that soft nest the happy one
 Looked up at me and calmly smiled ;
Its hair shone golden in the sun,
 And made it seem a heavenly child.

IV.

Dear Hope's blue eyes smiled mildly down,
 And blest it with a love so deep,
That, like a nursling of her own,
 It clasped her neck and fell asleep.

THE CHURCH.

I.

I LOVE the rites of England's church ;
 I love to hear and see
The priest and people reading slow
 The solemn Litany ;
I love to hear the glorious swell
 Of chanted psalm and prayer,
And the deep organ's bursting heart,
 Throb through the shivering air.

II.

Chants, that a thousand years have heard,
 I love to hear again,
For visions of the olden time
 Are wakened by the strain ;

With gorgeous hues the window-glass
Seems suddenly to glow,
And rich and red the streams of light
Down through the chancel flow.

III.

And then I murmur, " Surely God
Delighteth here to dwell ;
This is the temple of his Son
Whom he doth love so well ;"
But, when I hear the creed which saith,
This church alone is His,
I feel within my soul that He Hath purer shrines than this.

IV.

For his is not the builded church,
Nor organ-shaken dome ;
In every thing that lovely is
He loves and hath his home ;
And most in soul that loveth well
All things which he hath made,
Knowing no creed but simple faith
That may not be gainsaid.

V.

His church is universal Love,
And whoso dwells therein
Shall need no customary sacrifice
To wash away his sin ;
And music in its aisles shall swell,
Of lives upright and true,
Sweet as dreamed sounds of angel-harps
Down-quivering through the blue.

VI.

They shall not ask a litany,
The souls that worship there,
But every look shall be a hymn,
And every word a prayer ;
Their service shall be written bright
In calm and holy eyes,
And every day from fragrant hearts
Fit incense shall arise.

THE UNLOVELY.

THE pretty things that others wear
Look strange and out of place on me,
I never seem dressed tastefully,
Because I am not fair ;
And, when I would most pleasing seem,
And deck myself with joyful care,
I find it is an idle dream,
Because I am not fair.

If I put roses in my hair,
They bloom as if in mockery ;
Nature denies her sympathy,
Because I am not fair ;
Alas ! I have a warm, true heart,
But when I show it people stare ;
I must forever dwell apart,
Because I am not fair.

I am least happy being where
The hearts of others are most light,
And strive to keep me out of sight,
Because I am not fair ;

The glad ones often give a glance,
As I am sitting lonely there,
That asks me why I do not dance—
Because I am not fair.

And if to smile on them I dare,
For that my heart with love runs o'er,
They say : “ What is she laughing for ? ”
Because I am not fair ;
Love scorned or misinterpreted—
It is the hardest thing to bear ;
I often wish that I were dead,
Because I am not fair.

In joy or grief I must not share,
For neither smiles nor tears on me
Will ever look becomingly,
Because I am not fair ;
Whole days I sit alone and cry,
And in my grave I wish I were—
Yet none will weep me if I die,
Because I am not fair.

My grave will be so lone and bare,
I fear to think of those dark hours,
For none will plant it o'er with flowers,
Because I am not fair ;
They will not in the summer come
And speak kind words above me there ;
To me the grave will be no home,
Because I am not fair.

LOVE-SONG.

NEARER to thy mother-heart,
Simple Nature, press me,
Let me know thee as thou art,
Fill my soul and bless me !
I have loved thee long and well,
I have loved thee heartily ;
Shall I never with thee dwell,
Never be at one with thee ?

Inward, inward to thy heart,
Kindly Nature, take me,
Lovely even as thou art,
Full of loving make me !
Thou knowest naught of dead-cold forms,
Knowest naught of littleness,
Lifeful Truth thy being warms,
Majesty and earnestness.

Homeward, homeward to thy heart,
Dearest Nature, call me ;
Let no halfness, no mean part,
Any longer thrall me !
I will be thy lover true,
I will be a faithful soul,
Then circle me, then look me through,
Fill me with the mighty Whole.

SONG.

ALL things are sad :—
I go and ask of Memory,
That she tell sweet tales to me
 To make me glad ;
And she takes me by the hand,
 Leadeth to old places,
 Showeth the old faces
In her hazy mirage-land ;
O, her voice is sweet and low,
And her eyes are fresh to mine
 As the dew
 Gleaming through
The half-unfolded Eglantine,
Long ago, long ago !
But I feel that I am only
Yet more sad, and yet more lonely !

Then I turn to blue-eyed Hope,
And beg of her that she will open
Her golden gates for me ;
She is fair and full of grace,
But she hath the form and face
Of her mother Memory ;
Clear as air her glad voice ringeth,
Joyous are the songs she singeth,
Yet I hear them mournfully ;—
They are songs her mother taught her,
Crooning to her infant daughter,
As she lay upon her knee.
Many little ones she bore me,
Woe is me ! in by-gone hours,

Who danced along and sang before me,
Scattering my way with flowers ;

One by one

They are gone,

And their silent graves are seen,
Shining fresh with mosses green,
Where the rising sunbeams slope
O'er the dewy land of Hope.

But, when sweet Memory faileth,
And Hope looks strange and cold ;
When youth no more availeth,
And Grief grows over bold ;—
When softest winds are dreary,
And summer sunlight weary,
And sweetest things uncheery

We know not why :—

When the crown of our desires
Weighs upon the brow and tires,

And we would die,

Die for, ah ! we know not what,
Something we seem to have forgot,
Something we had, and now have not ;—
When the present is a weight
And the future seems our foe,
And with shrinking eyes we wait,
As one who dreads a sudden blow
In the dark, he knows not whence ;—
When Love at last his bright eye closes,
And the bloom upon his face,
That lends him such a living grace,
Is a shadow from the roses
Wherewith we have decked his bier,

Because he once was passing dear ;—
When we feel a leaden sense
Of nothingness and impotence,
 Till we grow mad—
Then the body saith,
 “ There’s but one true faith ;
 All things are sad ! ”

A LOVE-DREAM.

PLEASANT thoughts come wandering,
When thou art far, from thee to me ;
On their silver wings they bring
A very peaceful ecstasy,
A feeling of eternal spring ;
So that Winter half forgets
Everything but that thou art,
And, in his bewildered heart,
Dreameth of the violets,
Or those bluer flowers that ope,
Flowers of steadfast love and hope,
Watered by the living wells,
Of memories dear, and dearer prophecies,
When young spring forever dwells
In the sunshine of thine eyes.

I have most holy dreams of thee,
 All night I have such dreams ;
And, when I awake, reality
 No whit the darker seems ;
Through the twin gates of Hope and Memory
They pour in crystal streams
From out an angel’s calmèd eyes,

Who, from twilight till sunrise,
Far away in the upper deep,
Poised upon his shining wings,
Over us his watch doth keep,
And, as he watcheth, ever sings.

Through the still night I hear him sing,
Down-looking on our sleep ;
I hear his clear, clear harp-strings ring,
And, as the golden notes take wing,
Gently downward hovering,

For very joy I weep ;
He singeth songs of holy Love,
That quiver through the depths afar,
Where the blessèd spirits are,
And lingeringly from above
Shower till the morning star
His silver shield hath buckled on
And sentinels the dawn alone,
Quivering his gleamy spear
Through the dusky atmosphere.

Almost, my love, I fear the morn,
When that blessèd voice shall cease,
Lest it should leave me quite forlorn,
Stript of my snowy robe of peace ;
And yet the bright reality
Is fairer than all dreams can be,
For, through my spirit, all day long,
Ring echoes of that angel-song
In melodious thoughts of thee ;
And well I know it cannot die
Till eternal morn shall break,

For, through life's slumber, thou and I
Will keep it for each other's sake,
And it shall not be silent when we wake.

FOURTH OF JULY ODE.

I.

OUR fathers fought for Liberty,
They struggled long and well,
History of their deeds can tell—
But did they leave us free?

II.

Are we free from vanity,
Free from pride, and free from self,
Free from love of power and pelf,
From everything that 's beggarly?

III.

Are we free from stubborn will,
From low hate and malice small,
From opinion's tyrant thrall?
Are none of us our own slaves still?

IV.

Are we free to speak our thought,
To be happy, and be poor,
Free to enter Heaven's door,
To live and labor as we ought?

V.

Are we then made free at last
From the fear of what men say,
Free to reverence To-day,
Free from the slavery of the Past?

VI.

Our fathers fought for liberty,
They struggled long and well,
History of their deeds can tell—
But ourselves must set us free.

SPHINX.

I.

WHY mourn we for the golden prime
When our young souls were kingly, strong, and true?
The soul is greater than all time,
It changes not, but yet is ever new.

II.

But that the soul is noble, we Could never know what nobleness had been;
Be what ye dream! and earth shall see
A greater greatness than she e'er hath seen.

III.

The flower pines not to be fair,
It never asketh to be sweet and dear,
But gives itself to sun and air,
And so is fresh and full from year to year.

IV.

Nothing in Nature weeps its lot,
Nothing, save man, abides in memory,
Forgetful that the Past is what
Ourselves may choose the coming time to be.

V.

All things are circular ; the Past
Was given us to make the Future great ;
And the void Future shall at last
Be the strong rudder of an after fate.

VI.

We sit beside the Sphinx of Life,
We gaze into its void, unanswering eyes,
And spend ourselves in idle strife
To read the riddle of their mysteries.

VII.

Arise ! be earnest and be strong !
The Sphinx's eyes shall suddenly grow clear,
And speak as plain to thee ere long,
As the dear maiden's who holds thee most dear.

VIII.

The meaning of all things in us—
Yea, in the lives we give our souls—doth lie ;
Make, then, their meaning glorious
By such a life as need not fear to die !

IX.

There is no heart-beat in the day,
Which bears a record of the smallest deed,
But holds within its faith alway
That which in doubt we vainly strive to read.

X.

One seed contains another seed,
And that a third, and so for evermore ;
And promise of as great a deed
Lies folded in the deed that went before.

XI.

So ask not fitting space or time,
Yet could not dream of things which could not be ;
Each day shall make the next sublime,
And Time be swallowed in Eternity.

XII.

God bless the Present ! it is ALL ;
It has been Future, and it shall be Past ;
Awake and live ! thy strength recall,
And in one trinity unite them fast.

XIII.

Action and Life—lo ! here the key
Of all on earth that seemeth dark and wrong ;
Win this—and, with it, freely ye
May enter that bright realm for which ye long.

XIV.

Then all these bitter questionings
Shall with a full and blessèd answer meet ;
Past worlds, whereof the Poet sings,
Shall be the earth beneath his snow-white fleet.

"GOE, LITTLE BOOKE !"

Go, LITTLE book ! the world is wide,
There's room and verge enough for thee ;
For thou hast learned that only pride
Lacketh fit opportunity,
Which comes unbid to modesty.

Go ! win thy way with gentleness :
I send thee forth, my first-born child,
Quite, quite alone, to face the stress
Of fickle skies and pathways wild,
Where few can keep them undefiled.

Thou camest from a poet's heart,
A warm, still home, and full of rest ;
Far from the pleasant eyes thou art
Of those who know and love thee best,
And by whose hearthstones thou wert blest.

Go ! knock thou softly at the door
Where any gentle spirits bin,
Tell them thy tender feet are sore,
Wandering so far from all thy kin,
And ask if thou may enter in.

Beg thou a cup-full from the spring
Of Charity, in Christ's dear name ;
Few will deny so small a thing,
Nor ask unkindly if thou came
Of one whose life might do thee shame.

We all are prone to go astray,
Our hopes are bright, our lives are dim ;
But thou art pure, and if they say,
" We know thy father, and our whim
He pleases not,"—plead thou for him.

For many are by whom all truth,
That speaks not in their mother-tongue,
Is stoned to death with hands unruth,
Or hath its patient spirit wrung
Cold words and colder looks among.

Yet fear not ! for skies are fair
To all whose souls are fair within ;
'Thou wilt find shelter everywhere
With those to whom a different skin
Is not a damning proof of sin.

But, if all others are unkind,
There's one heart whither thou canst fly
For shelter from the biting wind ;
And, in that home of purity,
It were no bitter thing to die.

SONNETS.

I.

DISAPPOINTMENT.

I PRAY thee call not this society ;
I asked for bread, thou givest me a stone ,
I am an hungered, and I find not one
To give me meat, to joy or grieve with me ;
I find not here what I went out to see—
Souls of true men, of women who can move
The deeper, better part of us to love,
Souls that can hold with mine communion free.
Alas ! must then these hopes, these longings high,
This yearning of the soul for brotherhood,
And all that makes us pure, and wise, and good,
Come broken-hearted, home again to die ?
No, Hope is left, and prays with bended head,
“ Give us this day, O God, our daily bread ! ”

II.

GREAT human nature, whither art thou fled ?
Are these things creeping forth and back agen,
These hollow formalists and echoes, men ?
Art thou entombèd with the mighty dead ?
In God's name, no ! not yet hath all been said,
Or done, or longed for, that is truly great ;

These pitiful dried crusts will never sate
Natures for which pure Truth is daily bread ;
We were not meant to plod along the earth,
Strange to ourselves and to our fellows strange ;
We were not meant to struggle from our birth,
To skulk and creep, and in mean pathways range ;
Act ! with stern truth, large faith, and loving will !
Up and be doing ! God is with us still.

III.

TO A FRIEND.

ONE strip of bark may feed the broken tree,
Giving to some few limbs a sickly green ;
And one light shower on the hills, I ween,
May keep the spring from drying utterly.
Thus seemeth it with these our hearts to be ;
Hope is the strip of bark, the shower of rain,
And so they are not wholly crushed with pain.
But live and linger on, for sadder sight to see ;
Much do they err, who tell us that the heart
May not be broken ; what, then, can we call
A broken heart, if this may not be so,
This death in life, when, shrouded in its pall,
Shunning and shunned, it dwelleth all apart,
Its power, its love, its sympathy laid low ?

IV.

So may it be, but let it not be so,
O, let it not be so with thee, my friend ;
Be of good courage, bear up to the end,
And on thine after way rejoicing go !
We all must suffer, if we aught would know ;
Life is a teacher stern, and wisdom's crown

Is oft a crown of thorns, whence, trickling down,
Blood, mixed with tears, blinding her eyes doth flow ;
But Time, a gentle nurse, shall wipe away
This bloody sweat, and thou shalt find on earth,
That woman is not all in all to Love,
But, living by a new and second birth,
Thy soul shall see all things below, above,
Grow bright and brighter to the perfect day.

V.

O CHILD of Nature ! O most meek and free,
Most gentle spirit of true nobleness !
Thou doest not a worthy deed the less
Because the world may not its greatness see ;
What were a thousand triumphings to thee,
Who, in thyself, art as a perfect sphere
Wrapt in a bright and natural atmosphere
Of mighty-souledness and majesty ?
Thy soul is not too high for lowly things,
Feels not its strength seeing its brother weak,
Not for itself unto itself is dear,
But for that it may guide the wanderings
Of fellow-men, and to their spirits speak
The lofty faith of heart that knows no fear.

VI.

“ FOR this true nobleness I seek in vain,
In woman and in man I find it not,
I almost weary of my earthly lot,
My life-springs are dried up with burning pain.”—
Thou find’st it not ? I pray thee look again,
Look inward through the depths of thine own soul ;
How is it with thee ? Art thou sound and whole ?
Doth narrow search show thee no earthly stain ?

BE NOBLE ! and the nobleness that lies
 In other men, sleeping but never dead,
 Will rise in majesty to meet thine own ;
 Then wilt thou see it gleam in many eyes,
 Then will pure light around thy path be shed,
 And thou wilt nevermore be sad and lone.

VII.

TO ———

DEEM it no Sodom-fruit of vanity,
 Or fickle fantasy of unripe youth
 Which ever takes the fairest shows for truth,
 That I should wish my verse beloved of thee ;
 'T is love's deep thirst which may not quenched be
 There is a gulf of longing and unrest,
 A wild love-craving not to be repress,
 Where to, in all our hearts, as to the sea,
 The streams of feeling do for ever flow.
 Therefore it is that thy well-meted praise
 Falleth so shower-like and fresh on me,
 Filling those springs which else had sunk full low,
 Lost in the dreary desert-sands of woe,
 Or parched by passion's fierce and withering blaze.

VIII.

MIGHT I but be beloved, and, O most fair
 And perfect-ordered soul, beloved of thee,
 How should I feel a cloud of earthly care,
 If thy blue eyes were ever clear to me ?
 O woman's love ! O flower most bright and rare !
 That blossom'st brightest in extremest need,
 Woe, woe is me ! that thy so precious seed
 Is ever sown by Fancy's changeful air,

And grows sometimes in poor and barren hearts,
Who can be little even in the light
Of thy meek holiness—while souls more great
Are left to wander in a starless night,
Praying unheard—and yet the hardest parts
Befit those best who best can cope with Fate.

IX.

WHY should we ever weary of this life ?
Our souls should widen ever, not contract,
Grow stronger, and not harder, in the strife,
Filling each moment with a noble act ;
If we live thus, of vigor all compact,
Doing our duty to our fellow-men,
And striving rather to exalt our race
Than our poor selves, with earnest hand or pen
We shall erect our names a dwelling-place
Which not all ages shall cast down agen ;
Offspring of Time shall then be born each hour,
Which, as of old, earth lovingly shall guard,
To live forever in youth's perfect flower,
And guide her future children Heavenward.

X.

GREEN MOUNTAINS.

YE mountains, that far off lift up your heads,
Seen dimly through their canopies of blue,
The shade of my unrestful spirit sheds
Distance-created beauty over you ;
I am not well content with this far view ;
How may I know what foot of loved-one treads
Your rocks moss-grown and sun-dried torrent beds ?
We should love all things better, if we knew

What claims the meanest have upon our hearts :
Perchance even now some eye, that would be bright
To meet my own, looks on your mist-robed forms ;
Perchance your grandeur a deep joy imparts
To souls that have encircled mine with light—
O brother-heart, with thee my spirit warms !

XI.

My friend, adown Life's valley, hand in hand,
With grateful change of grave and merry speech
Or song, our hearts unlocking each to each,
We 'll journey onward to the silent land ;
And when stern Death shall loose that loving band,
Taking in his cold hand a hand of ours,
The one shall strew the other's grave with flowers,
Nor shall his heart a moment be unmanned.
My friend and brother ! if thou goest first,
Wilt thou no more re-visit me below ?
Yea, when my heart seems happy, causelessly
And swells, not dreaming why, as it would burst
With joy unspeakable—my soul shall know
That thou, unseen, art bending over me.

XII.

VERSE cannot say how beautiful thou art,
How glorious the calmness of thine eyes,
Full of unconquerable energies,
Telling that thou hast acted well thy part.
No doubt or fear thy steady faith can start,
No thought of evil dare come nigh to thee,
Who hast the courage meek of purity,
The self-stayed greatness of a loving heart,
Strong with serene, enduring fortitude ;
Where'er thou art, that seems thy fitting place,

For not of forms, but Nature, art thou child ;
And lowest things put on a noble grace
When touched by ye, O patient, Ruth-like, mild
And spotless hands of earnest womanhood.

XIII.

THE soul would fain its loving kindness tell,
But custom hangs like lead upon the tongue ;
The heart is brimful, hollow crowds among,
When it finds one whose life and thought are well ;
Up to the eyes its gushing love doth swell,
The angel cometh and the waters move,
Yet it is fearful still to say " I love,"
And words come grating as a jangled bell.
O might we only speak but what we feel,
Might the tongue pay but what the heart doth owe,
Not Heaven's great thunder, when, deep peal on peal,
It shakes the earth, could rouse our spirits so,
Or to the soul such majesty reveal,
As two short words half-spoken faint and low !

XIV.

I SAW a gate : a harsh voice spake and said,
" This is the gate of Life ;" above was writ,
" Leave hope behind, all ye who enter it ;"
Then shrank my heart within itself for dread ;
But, softer than the summer rain is shed,
Words dropt upon my soul, and they did say,
" Fear nothing, Faith shall save thee, watch and pray !"
So, without fear I lifted up my head,
And lo ! that writing was not, one fair word
Was carven in its stead, and it was " Love."

Then rained once more those sweet tones from above
With healing on their wings : I humbly heard,
“ I am the Life, ask and it shall be given !
I am the way, by me ye enter Heaven ! ”

XV.

I WOULD not have this perfect love of ours
Grow from a single root, a single stem,
Bearing no goodly fruit, but only flowers
That idly hide Life's iron diadem :
It should grow alway like that Eastern tree
Whose limbs take root and spread forth constantly ;
That love for one, from which there doth not spring
Wide love for all, is but a worthless thing.
Not in another world, as poets prate,
Dwell we apart, above the tide of things,
High floating o'er earth's clouds on faery wings ;
But our pure love doth ever elevate
Into a holy bond of brotherhood
All earthly things, making them pure and good.

XVI.

To the dark, narrow house where loved ones go,
Whence no steps outward turn, whose silent door
None but the sexton knocks at any more,
Are they not sometimes with us yet below ?
The longings of the soul would tell us so ;
Although, so pure and fine their being's essence,
Our bodily eyes are witless of their presence,
Yet not within the tomb their spirits glow,
Like wizard lamps pent up, but whensoever
With great thoughts worthy of their high behests
Our souls are filled, those bright ones with us be,
As, in the patriarch's tent, his angel guests ;—

O let us live so worthily, that never
We may be far from that blest company.

XVII.

I FAIN would give to thee the loveliest things,
For lovely things belong to thee of right,
And thou hast been as peaceful to my sight,
As the still thoughts that summer twilight brings ;
Beneath the shadow of thine angel wings
O let me live ! O let me rest in thee,
Growing to thee more and more utterly,
Upbearing and upborne, till outward things
Are only as they share in thee a part !
Look kindly on me, let thy holy eyes
Bless me from the deep fulness of thy heart ;
So shall my soul in its right strength arise,
And nevermore shall pine and shrink and start,
Safe-sheltered in thy full-souled sympathies.

XVIII.

MUCH I had mused of Love, and in my soul
There was one chamber where I dared not look,
So much its dark and dreary voidness shook
My spirit, feeling that I was not whole :
All my deep longings flowed toward one goal
For long, long years, but were not answerèd,
Till Hope was drooping, Faith well-nigh stone-dead,
And I was still a blind, earth-delving mole ;
Yet did I know that God was wise and good,
And would fulfil my being late or soon ;
Nor was such thought in vain, for, seeing thee,
Great Love rose up, as, o'er a black pine wood,
Round, bright, and clear, upstarteth the full moon,
Filling my soul with glory utterly.

XIX.

SAYEST thou, most beautiful, that thou wilt wear
Flowers and leafy crowns when thou art old,
And that thy heart shall never grow so cold
But they shall love to wreath thy silvered hair
And into age's snows the hope of spring-tide bear ?
O, in thy childlike wisdom's moveless hold
Dwell ever ! still the blessings manifold
Of purity, of peace, and untaught care
For other's hearts, around thy pathway shed,
And thou shalt have a crown of deathless flowers
To glorify and guard thy blessèd head
And give their freshness to thy life's last hours ;
And, when the Bridegroom calleth, they shall be
A wedding-garment white as snow for thee.

XX.

POET ! who sittest in thy pleasant room,
Warming thy heart with idle thoughts of love,
And of a holy life that leads above,
Striving to keep life's spring-flowers still in bloom,
And lingering to snuff their fresh perfume—
O, there were other duties meant for thee,
Than to sit down in peacefulness and Be !
O, there are brother-hearts that dwell in gloom,
Souls loathsome, foul, and black with daily sin,
So crusted o'er with baseness, that no ray
Of heaven's blessed light may enter in !
Come down, then, to the hot and dusty way,
And lead them back to hope and peace again—
For, save in Act, thy Love is all in vain.

XXI.

“NO MORE BUT SO ?”

No more but so ? Only with uncold looks,
And with a hand not laggard to clasp mine,
Think'st thou to pay what debt of love is thine ?
No more but so ? Like gushing water-brooks,
Freshening and making green the dimmest nooks
Of thy friend's soul thy kindliness should flow ;
But, if 't is bounded by not saying “ no,”
I can find more of friendship in my books,
All lifeless though they be, and more, far more
In every simplest moss, or flower, or tree ;
Open to me thy heart of hearts' deep core,
Or never say that I am dear to thee ;
Call me not Friend, if thou keep close the door
That leads into thine inmost sympathy.

XXII.

TO A VOICE HEARD IN MOUNT AUBURN.

LIKE the low warblings of a leaf-hid bird,
Thy voice came to me through the screening trees,
Singing the simplest, long-known melodies ;
I had no glimpse of thee, and yet I heard
And blest thee for each clearly-carolled word ;
I longed to thank thee, and my heart would frame
Mary or Ruth, some sisterly, sweet name
For thee, yet could I not my lips have stirred ;
I knew that thou wert lovely, that thine eyes
Were blue and downcast, and methought large tears,
Unknown to thee, up to their lids must rise
With half-sad memories of other years,

As to thyself alone thou sangest o'er
Words that to childhood seemed to say "No More!"

XXIII.

ON READING SPENSER AGAIN.

DEAR, gentle Spenser ! thou my soul dost lead,
A little child again, through Fairy land,
By many a bower and stream of golden sand,
And many a sunny plain whose light doth breed
A sunshine in my happy heart, and feed
My fancy with sweet visions ; I become
A knight, and with my charmed arms would roam
To seek for fame in many a wondrous deed
Of high emprise—for I have seen the light
Of Una's angel's face, the golden hair
And backward eyes of startled Florimel ;
And, for their holy sake, I would outdare
A host of cruel Paynims in the fight,
Or Archimage and all the powers of Hell.

XXIV.

LIGHT of mine eyes ! with thy so trusting look,
And thy sweet smile of charity and love,
That from a treasure well uplaid above,
And from a hope in Christ its blessing took ;
Light of my heart ! which, when it could not brook
The coldness of another's sympathy,
Finds ever a deep peace and stay in thee,
Warm as the sunshine of a mossy nook ;
Light of my soul ! who, by thy saintliness
And faith that acts itself in daily life,
Canst raise me above weakness, and canst bless
The hardest thralldom of my earthly strife—

I dare not say how much thou art to me
Even to myself—and O, far less to thee !

XXV.

SILENT as one who treads on new-fallen snow,
Love came upon me ere I was aware ;
Not light of heart, for there was troublous care
Upon his eyelids, drooping them full low,
As with sad memory of a healèd woe ;
The cold rain shivered in his golden hair,
As if an outcast lot had been his share,
And he seemed doubtful whither he should go :
Then he fell on my neck, and, in my breast
Hiding his face, awhile sobbed bitterly,
As half in grief to be so long distress,
And half in joy at his security—
At last, uplooking from his place of rest,
His eyes shone blessedness and hope on me.

XXVI.

A GENTLENESS that grows of steady faith ;
A joy that sheds its sunshine everywhere ;
A humble strength and readiness to bear
Those burthens which strict duty ever lay'th
Upon our souls ;—which unto sorrow saith,
“ Here is no soil for thee to strike thy roots,
Here only grow those sweet and precious fruits ;
Which ripen for the soul that well obey'th ;
A patience which the world can neither give Nor take away ; a courage strong and high,
That dares in simple usefulness to live,
And without one sad look behind to die

When that day comes ;—these tell me that our love
Is building for itself a home above.

XXVII.

WHEN the glad soul is full to overflow,
Unto the tongue all power it denies,
And only trusts its secret to the eyes ;
For, by an inborn wisdom, it doth know
There is no other eloquence but so ;
And, when the tongue's weak utterance doth suffice,
Prisoned within the body's cell it lies,
Remembering in tears its exiled woe :
That word which all mankind so long to hear,
Which bears the spirit back to whence it came,
Maketh the sullen clay as crystal clear,
And will not be enclouded in a name ;
It is a truth which we can feel and see
But is as boundless as Eternity.

XXVIII.

TO THE EVENING-STAR.

WHEN we have once said lowly "Evening-Star !"
Words give no more—for, in thy silver pride,
Thou shinest as nought else can shine beside ;
The thick smoke, coiling round the sooty bar
Forever, and the customary lamp-light mar
The stillness of my thought—seeing things glide
So samely :—then I ope my windows wide,
And gaze in peace to where thou shin'st afar,
The wind that comes across the faint-white snow
So freshly, and the river dimly seen,
Seem like new things that never had been so

Before ; and thou art bright as thou hast been Since thy white rays put sweetness in the eyes
Of the first souls that loved in Paradise.

XXIX.

READING.

As one who on some well-known landscape looks,
Be it alone, or with some dear friend nigh,
Each day beholdeth fresh variety,
New harmonies of hills, and trees, and brooks—
So is it with the worthiest choice of books,
And oftenest read : if thou no meaning spy,
Deem there is meaning wanting in thine eyes ;
We are so lured from judgment by the crooks
And winding ways of covert fantasy,
Or turned unwittingly down beaten tracks
Of our foregone conclusions, that we see,
In our own want, the writer's misdeemed lacks :
It is with true books as with Nature, each
New day of living doth new insight teach.

XXX.

TO ———, AFTER A SNOW-STORM.

BLUE as thine eyes the river gently flows
Between his banks, which, far as eye can see,
Are whiter than aught else on earth may be,
Save inmost thoughts that in thy soul repose ;
The trees, all crystallised by the melted snows,
Sparkle with gems and silver, such as we
In childhood saw 'mong groves of Faërie,
And the dear skies are sunny-blue as those ;

Still as thy heart, when next mine own it lies
In love's full safety, is the bracing air ;
The earth is all enwrapt with draperies
Snow-white as that pure love might choose to wear—
O for one moment's look into thine eyes,
To share the joy such scene would kindle there !

SONNETS ON NAMES.

I.

EDITH.

A LILY with its frail cup filled with dew,
Down-bending modestly, snow-white and pale,
Shedding faint fragrance round its native vale,
Minds me of thee, Sweet Edith, mild and true,
And of thy eyes so innocent and blue,
Thy heart is fearful as a startled hare,
Yet hath in it a fortitude to bear
For Love's sake, and a gentle faith which grew
Of Love : need of a stay whereon to lean,
Felt in thyself, hath taught thee to uphold
And comfort others, and to give, unseen,
The kindness thy still love cannot withhold.
Maiden, I would my sister thou hadst been,
That round thee I my guarding arms might fold.

II.

ROSE.

MY ever-lightsome, ever-laughing Rose,
Who always speakest first and thinkest last,
Thy full voice is as clear as bugle-blast ;
Right from the ear down to the heart it goes
And says, " I 'm beautiful ! as who but knows ? "
Thy name reminds me of old romping days,

Of kisses stolen in dark passage-ways,
 Or in the parlor, if the mother-nose
 Gave sign of drowsy watch. I wonder where
 Are gone thy tokens, given with a glance
 So full of everlasting love till morrow,
 Or a day's endless grieving for the dance
 Last night denied, backed with a lock of hair,
 That spake of broken hearts and deadly sorrow

III.

MARY.

DARK hair, dark eyes—not too dark to be deep
 And full of feeling, yet enough to glow
 With fire when angered ; feelings never slow,
 But which seem rather watching to forthleap
 From her full breast ; a gently-flowing sweep
 Of words in common talk, a torrent-rush,
 Whenever through her soul swift feelings gush,
 A heart less ready to be gay than weep,
 Yet cheerful ever ; a calm matron-smile,
 That bids God bless you ; a chaste simpleness,
 With somewhat, too, of “ proper pride,” in dress ; —
 This portrait to my mind's eye came, the while
 I thought of thee, the well-grown woman Mary,
 Whilome a gold-haired, laughing little fairy.

IV.

CAROLINE.

A STADNESS sobers o'er her pretty face,
 Which something but ill-hidden in her eyes,
 And a quaint look about her lips denies ;
 A lingering love of girlhood you can trace

In her checked laugh and half-restrainèd pace ;
And, when she bears herself most womanly,
It seems as if a watchful mother's eye
Kept down with sobering glance her childish grace :
Yet oftentimes her nature gushes free
As water long held back by little hands,
Within a pump, and let forth suddenly,
Until, her task remembering, she stands
A moment silent, smiling doubtfully,
Then laughs aloud and scorns her hated bands.

V.

ANNE.

THERE is a pensiveness in quiet Anne,
A mournful drooping of the full gray eye,
As if she had shook hands with misery,
And known some care since her short life began ;
Her cheek is seriously pale, nigh wan,
And, though of cheerfulness there is no lack,
You feel as if she must be dressed in black ;
Yet is she not of those who, all they can,
Strive to be gay, and striving, seem most sad—
Hers is not grief, but silent soberness ;
You would be startled if you saw her glad,
And startled if you saw her weep, no less ;
She walks through life, as, on the Sabbath day,
She decorously glides to church to pray.

THE END.
